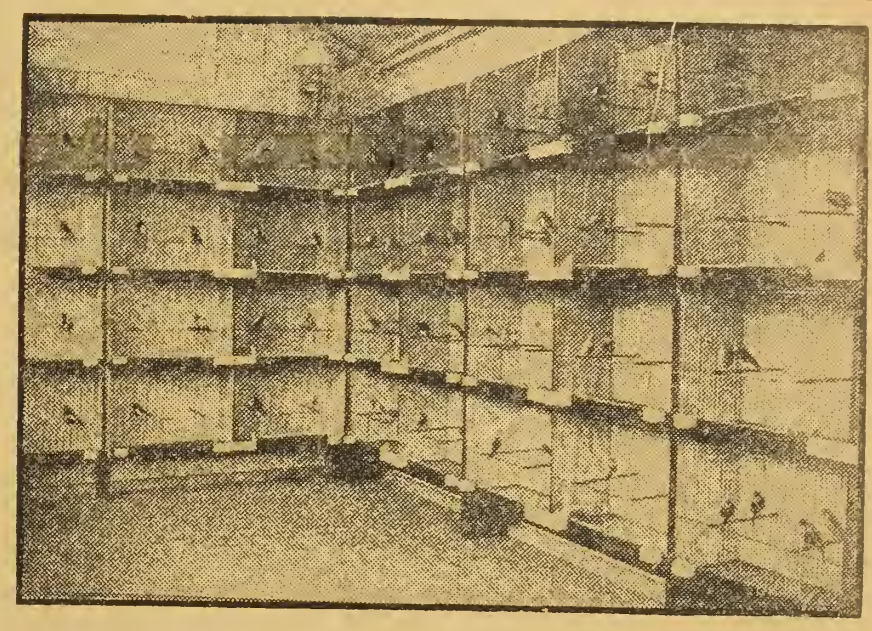
Again "Jim" mourned, and ate little food; but he recovered in a week. Now he alone remains, the dearest little companion, full of pretty ways; and though the wildest at first, he is now tamer than the others were. Early in the morning I let him out; and he comes to take his breakfast before I rise. Sometimes on a dull day he will rest on my hand for an hour, quite at home. I taught him to kiss me by holding a little piece of millet spray (of which he is very fond) between my lips: he soon learned to gently touch my lips when he wanted more. Now he will do it when I tell him, and vigorously, too, if he is hungry. One day, just for experiment, I put a tiny sprig in my mouth, and he boldly put his head right in, to get it!

A Spoiled Darling!

This spoiled little bird likes me to give him seeds from my fingers rather than help himself, and will fly to my hand, whatever part of the room I may be in. He much objects to going back to his cage; and it is amusing to see him sidle up my arms when I try to put him in. I can only do it by darkening the room, or making him hungry!

He is beginning to take an interest in my dress, examining, with beak and tongue, my ribbons and laces. When he is in a chastened mood he will allow me to kiss and stroke him as long as I please; and no satin or velvet can compare with the softness of his shining green coat. Long may he stay with me!

These are the only Budgies I have known. I consider them gentle and affectionate—but nervous—sociable among themselves, and certainly most delightful pets.



AN AMERICAN FANCIER'S SPLENDID BIRD-ROOM.

Owned by Mr. J. Burrows, of Palms, Cal., U.S.A., hon. sec. of the California C.B.A. Readers will note that this room compares favourably in cages and fitting-up with the best English models.

The Age of Birds.

Small birds will sometimes live many years in captivity. Some of the Finches have been known to last as many as twenty years, but as a rule age is somewhat regulated by size. Jackdaws, Crows, and Ravens live many years, and Geese and Swans are very tenacious, having been known to exist for over a hundred years.

Jackdaw Steals a Watch.

An Edinburgh gentleman, while staying on a holiday at Killin in the month of June, 1904, had a watch taken from his room by a tame Jackdaw. He saw the bird take the watch from the dressing table, and reported the matter to the Perthshire police. Nothing was seen of it, however, until the other day, when workmen were repairing drains in the same district. The watch, which had no doubt lain there for seven years, was in a damaged condition. It was forwarded to Edinburgh and returned to the gentleman, who, needless to say, was greatly surprised to see it again.

The Robin's Courting Day!

For some months past a Robin has taken up its habitation in the premises of Messrs. J. and T. Campbell, plumbers, Commercial Road, Buckie, N.B., and hops about the shop window showing no concern for the occupants or customers who may happen to be about. The Robin takes up its nightly quarters in the front shop, and late in the afternoon goes to roost on the top of a number of brushes hanging against the wall. A pane of glass in the workshop window has been left out, and this affords a means of ingress and egress. There would be nothing wonderful in all this but for the fact that the Robin absents itself every Monday with a regularity which has called for notice. On every evening, Sunday included, does the Robin come nightly to roost, but on the second day of the week he fails to put in an appearance, and is not even seen in the neighbourhood, and why he does not return on Mondays has been exercising the minds of several naturalists. It has been suggested that the Robin goes courting then!

SWANSEA C.B.A.

A Record Meeting.

Never in the history of the society has there been such a magnificent meeting as on January 10th when a special meeting was called to consider date and appointment of judges to the open show. The date was unanimously fixed, so large was the number present. Mr. J. W. Balcroft (our newly elected chairman) presided. Looking, he said, over the last 12 months' work he was proud to find they had made material progress, but they must not rest on their past record; every member should do his best to keep the reputation of the society up to what it is earned and still held as the "Premier Club of Wales." The selection of date was left until with. It was thought by several members that owing to the large Welsh shows being held in November last year, it would be beneficial if altered our date to January; this did not meet with general approval. The second week in November to become a fixed date for the Swansea show, having been held for the last seven or eight years on such on that date, and this was recognised amongst fanciers as Swansea's date. Decided to hold shows on our old date, November 13th and 14th. Selection of judge: Several names were submitted for the County select; Mr. J. Robson decided on. For the British bird section Mr. T. Dean (Edinburgh) was proposed. The British bird section has become one of the largest shows held, and South Wales being a hot-bed for British exhibitors, we should be the pioneers in South Wales to get a Scotch judge. The question of venue was discussed, but this difficulty was easily overcome when it was announced that a local gentleman, who was present at our last open show and who takes a great interest in British birds though not an exhibitor, had promised a donation of £1 1s. towards the heavy expense of going to Swansea a Scotch judge for the next show; and Mr. J. Dodd (a prominent British exhibitor in South Wales) announced that he would give another £1 1s. towards the same object; which was followed by an offer by Mr. J. W. Banks of 10s. 6d., with still another 10s. 6d. from Mr. A. E. Wright. After this splendid response it was a foregone conclusion Mr. Dewar would be unanimously appointed, which he was. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the above named members for their voluntary financial assistance, with the proposition that British exhibitors in South Wales would show their appreciation by greatly increasing entry in the British bird section at the show in November.—H. George.

SHETTLESTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Brown; Vice-President, Mr. A. G. Forrest; Treasurer, Mr. A. Borrie; Secretary, Mr. James Kerr, 18, James Street; Auditors, Messrs. Smith and Duncan, with a large committee.—J. Kerr, Sec.

Mr. Skinner, Mr. Oakes, and Mrs. Holliday each promised a sectional cup, provided two others were forthcoming before next annual show. Following members elected: Messrs. Scales, Wyatt, Bailey, Martin, Bransford, Spence, Linford, Blyth, Bones, and Scott.—J. H. Priestman, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting and election of officers for 1912 was held at Headquarters, Railway Hotel, Jan. 3rd. We had a lot of business to go through, and I was very pleased to see the members turn up as well as they did. The auditors were Mr. H. M. Taylor and Mr. I. Dawson, and when the secretary had read the balance sheet they gave their report. We elected the same officers as last year, with the exception of vice-president, and that honour was conferred on Mr. H. M. Taylor. We also decided to let British birds compete for cup points at N.F. show, it being an understood thing that British bird fanciers hadn't the same chance of competing for the cup. N.F. show fixed for July 27th, and we decided on Mr. C. Houlton (St. Helens), as judge. We fixed our classes for N.F.S. and old show, and did all in our power to arrange everything so that every member would have an equal chance. We concluded our meeting by a vote of thanks to the auditors for the able manner in which they had given their report.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

The meeting was extended one hour beyond usual time, and a great deal of business was got through. Balance-sheet for 1911 passed unanimously; showed a balance of £13 to the good. New office-bearers elected: Hon. President, Douglas Pearson, Esq.; Hon. Vice-Pres., W. Gibb Macnal, Esq.; President, Mr. C. Campbell; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. R. B. Gibb and A. Would all intending members please note that this club caters for all varieties of Canaries, British and Foreign birds. Annual sub., 4s.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Splendid Progress Made.

General meeting held Sydenham Hotel, Jan. 10th. This being the end of our first year, a record number of members attended, and the meeting was most enthusiastic. Chairman Willmott was supported by Vice-Chairman Hughes and a full committee. Two more members were proposed and nominated; the society still keeps up its record for new members at every meeting. The Chairman said that twelve months ago this society had been formed by fanciers residing in and around Small Heath. He had then addressed about 18 members with perhaps 20 promising their support; to-day we had 52 on the books.—(Cheers)—and over 46 fully paid-up members. The object of the society had been more than accomplished, and with success little dreamed of. We had lost only 6 members, two had left the city and four had removed to another part. We had averaged about 18 members per meeting—a splendid example. We held two of the best Young Bird shows in and around Birmingham, over 140 birds being staged, and 18 choice specials had been presented and won by about 12 members. Re the members' show held December 26th, he must congratulate the members on such a splendid effort. Profit was £1 17s. 11d. (Loud applause)—this was estimating the sale of the tickets by members at 200. (This total was been easily reached.—Sec.). Every member had done his duty. The novice had been well catered for, and he had held his own. It was far nicer to stand there and read such a fine result amicably than to have held a large open show for fanciers from North, South, East and West who had swept the board leaving the society in debt. The balance on the year's working would be about £8 10s., with many subs. paid up to the first quarter for 1912; of course, this was only a rough idea. In conclusion, there was every prospect of the society doing even better in the coming year than in the past. Following officials were elected: Chairman, Mr. E. T. Willmott; Vice-Chair, Mr. J. Hughes; Treas., Mr. Hardy; Committee: Messrs. Wright, Perks, Constable, Murray, and Walton; Auditors, Messrs. Hall and Anker. J. Sheppard, Sec. Several most interesting items were brought up for making the society forge ahead; one is that a cup be purchased for competition at shows for members only (price not to exceed £5 5s.); also in March it is hoped to hold a table show of pairs for breeding. At the February meeting a lecture will be given by Mr. Jeffery. We also hope to have friendly competitions for the novices to try their hand at judging; a chance will be given at the March table show. Specials and prizes won were presented by the Chairman, the attractive award cards of the Society being much admired. The very best thanks (on the proposition of Mr. Ankers) were given the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Committee; and last, but not least, the hard working and esteemed Secretary for the way all had carried out their duties in the past year.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

—Meeting held Jan. 20th. Mr. H. Seely presided over a good attendance. Next annual show fixed for Oct. 12th, Judges, Messrs. H. W. Battye and A. Brown. We hope to have another successful exhibition. GT. HORTON (Good Intent) O.S.

Meeting held Jan. 13th, Church Schools, Southfield Lane, Mr. D. Bartle presiding. Following officers elected for 1912: President, H. Bartle; vice-presidents, J. W. Kaberry, and A. Firth; treasurer, A. Holden; trustees, A. Holden and H. Hooson; secretary, Harry Gornall; assistant secretary, A. Morley. Proposed and seconded that the society have five members' shows for 1912 (3 old birds and 2 F.F.) on following dates: Feb. 10th, June 15th, July 13th, September 28th, Dec. 14th.—H. Gornall, Sec.

BLAYDON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held, with a large turn-out. After the ordinary business the members elected Col. F. R. Simpson, J.P., Hon. President; also a goodly number of local gentlemen as vice-presidents; Mr. J. Hands was elected chairman; Mr. T. Teek, vice-chairman; Mr. J. W. Clark, treasurer; Mr. G. Havver, secretary; and a strong working committee. Also decided, to try and build up a strong reserve fund, and as a step towards same the members decided to pay only half prize money in members' classes at late show. They also decided to get a concert up with the same object in view. Mr. Ackerley (Chideham) was elected a member.—G. Havver, Sec.

DONCASTER AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held January 13th, Mr. Truman in chair. There was a good attendance. Officers elected: Chairman, Mr. Hunt; Vice-Chairman, Mr. Tonkinson; Treasurer, Mr. Rayner; Secretary, Mr. Bescoby; Assist. Sec., Mr. Stocks. It was arranged to hold a members' pair show on February 10th, Victoria Rooms. Birds to be staged by 4 o'clock. We have reduced members subs. to 1s. entry fee, and 1s. 3d. each half year. Also we have extended our radius to 12 miles, so that any fanciers wishing to become members will do well to join at once and become eligible to exhibit at our next show.—G. Bescoby, Sec.

EDMONTON F.A.

Annual meeting and distribution of cups, etc., won at annual show, held Jan. 3, headquarters. Mr. C. Sorrell presided over an interesting gathering of some 50 fanciers. He introduced Mr. Platten, vice-chairman of Edmonton Council, who, after an able speech, handed cups, etc., to the various winners—16 trophies and cups. Business was then entered upon. A very satisfactory report was given by the hon. secretary; the balance sheet showed a cash balance of over £5, and assets valued at £23. Mr. C. Sorrell was re-elected chairman; Messrs. Harris, Jackson and Burgess, hon. treas., secretary, and assistant secretary; also a very strong committee of 20 members. The Association is looking forward to a very successful season.—J. S. Jackson, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 8. A handsome silver cup has been presented by Mrs. L. M. Thynne, for competition amongst exhibitors in the champion border fancy section, for member making most points during the year at the pair, young stock, and annual shows, points not to count unless there are at least three exhibitors. The cup is to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, before becoming the property of winner. Mr. J. A. Levett, a recent addition to the Society, presented a silver medal for best pair shown by a novice at the pair show, Feb. 12th, so that, with two others given by the society—one for best pair and one for best pair shown by a lady member—there will now be three medals, as well as diplomas, for best pair in each of the three sections. The presentation of prizes to the Boy Scouts for essays written after a visit to the annual show, was made. The prizes were won by Frank Elliott, 18, Victory Road, aged 13; Albert Williams, 3, Park Road, Merton, age 12; and Leslie Wales, 93, Hetham Road, age 10. Secretary read a letter from the secretary of the Wandsworth F.S. heartily thanking the Wimbledon Society for their kindness in loaning them the trestles and staging for use at the Wandsworth cage bird show. Five new members were elected, arrangements were made, and classification settled for the pair show, and amongst other matters discussed was the holding of a dinner which was eventually abandoned in favour of a summer outing or something of that sort. Two auditors—Messrs. C. R. Taylor and L. G. Owen—were elected, and the rest of the evening was passed in "Question and Answers."—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

Our Week's Membership List.

The following are the additions since last week to our membership list. I expect next week to have to announce a much more considerable addition, as I know many are waiting to join at CAGE BIRDS' stall at the Palace. All new members joining up to Saturday afternoon (the date of this issue) will be in time for our tea and meeting. Receipts and badges will be on hand at the stall.

Ogden, Bradford; Johnson, Norwich; England, Nelson; King, Dartford; Dawson, Peterborough; Smith, Gt. Gidding; Tuson, Southend; Fisher, Stroud; Bamber, Brentford; Gibb, Brighton; Davies, Crook; Wilde, Holland Park.

Our Hon. Secs.

King's Lynn, Mr. R. Edmunds, 2, Arthur Street.

Nelson, Lancs., Mr. Jno. England, 102, Scotland Road.

Scarborough, Mr. F. Harrison, 69, Westborough.

Dartford, Mr. V. Robins, 41, Spring Vale.

Our First General Meeting.

It is most gratifying to be able to record that members have received with enthusiasm the announcement that our first General Meeting will be held at the Palace at five o'clock on Saturday, preceded by tea in the Grill Room at 4.30. From the direct promises of attendance received it is certain that the meeting will be a great success, and I hope that every member who has not written will make a point of being present if it is in any way possible.

The League Photograph.

Arrangements are now complete for the taking our Photographic Group. I hope that every member present at the Palace on Saturday will make a point of being included in this first pictorial record of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE A place has been selected which allows of the placing of the group so that an effective picture is certain, and a proof will be shown at CAGE BIRDS stall as quickly as possible after the picture has been taken. Orders may be booked at the stall for finished copies of the photograph, and these will be sent direct from the photographers. The picture itself will be twelve inches by ten inches, and the price will be half-a-crown post-free if sent unmounted and rolled in a tube, or two shillings and tenpence post-free if mounted on a plate-sunk mount and packed flat.

Will members intending to take part in this great gronp please meet me at the entrance to the Grill Room at two o'clock punctually on Saturday afternoon.

Swanley Cage Birds League to the Fore: What a Few Members Can Do.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members will be familiar with the name of Mr. G. H. Peck, of Bexley, whose enthusiastic efforts in recruiting members have resulted in the addition of nearly fifty names to our roll. The majority of these members reside in Swanley, Bexley, and the district around, and these fanciers hit upon a deserving case of a young man who had lost a child and a part of his home through a fire, and whose wife was in the hospital as a consequence of serious injuries received in the disaster. Calling themselves the "Swanley Village and District Cage Birds League," they determined to hold a show among themselves in aid of the sufferers. Mr. Peck acted as judge, and among the hundred or so birds staged many were well-known winners. Mr. Peck and his friends gave two pairs of Canaries in the gift class, and the show resulted in a profit of £2 13s. 8d. I am indebted to Mr. J. F. Shiers, one of the members of the little circle of "Leaguers," for the report published in another column. I am only sorry that I did not know beforehand of the determination of our kind friends to engage in such an admirable act of kindness, and that I can now do no more than express my gratification at this latest example of the usefulness of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and of the universal goodfellowship which exists among its members.

New Members May Enrol at Our Stall.

Readers of CAGE BIRDS who are not yet members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE may join at our stall at the Palace on any day of the show, and those joining on the Friday and Saturday are specially invited to take part in our tea and meeting. The meeting promises to be one to be long remembered as the first gathering of the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and I am sure that every member present will treasure its recollection.

Illustrated Ideas

Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 563.
A Hopper Contrivance.
Sent by Mr. H. T. Young, 125, Soho Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

The enclosed idea will, I think, be useful to my fellow-readers of CAGE BIRDS. It allows for the variation of thickness of hoppers, which is the cause of cages looking untidy, also of considerable waste of seed. It can be made and applied by anyone in a few minutes with a piece of ordinary cage wire. Also, it can be adjusted to fit any hopper by thumb and finger—by altering the angle of holder at A. It has proved of great advantage to me. The first figure shows the holder in position on bar, and Fig. 2 shows both hopper and holder in correct position. "A" is the correct angle; it can be bent to reduce or increase the size. "B" represents the front bar.—H. T. Young.

No. 564.
Sent by Mr. J. H. Barton, 27, Chorlton Road, Hulme, Manchester.

Enclosed is an idea for ventilating the bird room. I think the accompanying drawing will show how simply it can be done; and at small cost; mine cost me only about 1s. altogether. No. 1 shows a frame made out of two 2in strips of wood the length of door (generally 6ft. 6in.), with pieces of wood nailed across 16in. long, leaving an opening in centre for wire netting as long as you like (mine is 1½yds. netting, 1ft. wide). This is simply fastened by two leather hinges to framework around door. When not in use it is pushed back against the wall to allow the door to shut properly. When in use this frame is fastened to door by a hook and eye catch. No. 2 is simply a piece of wood fastened to top of framework around door by hinges, and supported by a piece of string from above to allow the door just to go under. The advantage in this over having a wire netting door (full size) is the cost, and when not in use mine is no disfigurement to the doorway, showing from the stairs as it is pushed back against the wall inside the room.—J. H. Barton.

The Song of the Roller Canary.

Translated by G. B. LECLAIR.

A contribution to "Kanaria" by W. Kluhs (Landberg).

A German band-master and Roller Canary devotee discusses the tours of his favourite bird, and reproduces them in musical notation.

A bell-roll, or a schwirre (buzz) roll, for instance, are never hollow; accordingly it would not be correct or logical to speak of a hollow-bell-roll, or a hollow-schwirre.

The hollow-bell runs on the vowel "i," and the hollow-roll on the vowel "ü." If the hollow-bell bends, or falls, the text "i" changes into something between "i" and "ü" (thus "üi"). Should the hollow-roll fall or bend further, the text "ü" changes likewise, corresponding to the depth, to the text "a" or "o"; so deep a note of the hollow-roll containing "u" in the text, I have never yet observed. I have possessed excellent Erntges songsters, which, beginning with the hollow-bell in immense bends on the text "hi i i" to "üi," passed over to the hollow-roll, and bent down from "ü" over "a" to "o".

A distinction between the hollow-bell and the hollow-roll can only be discovered by the one vibrating higher on the vowel "i," whilst the other appears deeper on the vowel "ü." In the execution both are quite similar. We might just as well say bell-hollow-roll instead of hollow-bell, but in order to obviate mistakes let the designation hollow-bell remain.

What the Judge Must Know.

It would be absurd to attempt to name the varieties of individual tours (rolls). It will surely suffice to describe them in their entirety, as fundamental tours. Whether, for instance, a bell be flat, sharp or indistinct, it is still recognisable, and the judge must always know where he has to deal with merits or defects. I make the foregoing remarks, because later I intend to describe only the fundamental tours, for the fact that a tour is flat, sharp or indistinct cannot be adequately expressed in notes. Actually, the difference between harsh and coarse, rattling and squeaking, depressed and distorted, inaudible and drawling, incoherent and abrupt, etc., does not interest us. I should very much like to see what judge would hold his ground under such an examination.

Regarding the notes represented in the individual tours, I offer the following explanation:—The linking together of the various tremos (trills) etc., in the Canary's song is so rapid that 4 to 16 distinct sounds, as the case may be, are produced in a second. In the examples I shall give, therefore, I have laid down the principle that the bars invariably signify seconds. All notes which appear between two bars are produced in one second.

The Limits of Musical Notation.

Naturally, I can reproduce (in notes) the individual rolls only by way of example, and their compass only according to the songsters which I have heard. However, every bird seeks for itself within this limit the notes suitable to its vocal capacity. Consequently, if I record a direct hollow-roll in C, it does not signify that such cannot just as well be delivered in other keys; tours only reach their limit in the high and low notes; otherwise, they can lie on every key within these limits, and on half, quarter and eighth sounds. In musical notation there are neither quarter nor eighth sounds; in the Canary's song, however, such exist. These, metaphorically speaking, may be compared with a person descending a stair-case by degrees, and another person descending on a sloping board.

I should like to warn fanciers against picking out the finest passages from my musical representations and requesting breeders to send them birds which exactly imitate the given notes. That would be impossible. Every bird sings as taught, and according to the formation of its beak, but almost every bird sings differently. Birds cannot sing according to notes, but I can represent in notes that which they do sing.

I divide the Canary's song in the following manner:

I.—ROLLER SONG.

The individual tours of this song differs among themselves, as:

1. Quavering (tremolo) tours.
2. Warbling tours.
3. Undulating, rippling, or jagged tours—in short, "trill tours."
4. Pipe and flute notes.

1. Quavering (tremolo) tours: (a) Hollow-bell; (b) Hollow-roll.
2. Warbling tours: (c) Schwirr (buzz)-roll and Schwirr (buzz)-bell; (d) Bell-roll; (e) Knorre.
3. Undulating, rippling or jagged tours—in short, "trill tours": (f) Koller; (g) Schockel; (h) Bell; (i) Water-roll; (k) Water-glucke; (l) Schnatter.
4. Pipe and Flute notes: These will be explained in a later description.

II.—GLUCKE TOURS.

These will also be explained when being dealt with farther on.

The tours tabulated under No. 3 (i to l) viz., Koller, Schockel, Bell, Water-roll, Water-glucke and Schnatter, might just as well be reckoned with the Glucke tours, to which they bear as much resemblance as to the "roll" song. The Koller obviously sprang from the Glucke tours; and Erntges, too, shared this opinion. The Water-roll, Water-glucke and Schnatter also have passed from the song of Glucke birds into that of the Roller Canary, whilst the Schockel may be considered as "half-way" between a hollow-roll and a fine, soft hollow-schnatter, and the bell, as between hollow-bell and Water-glucke.

It cannot be laid down as a hard and fast rule that any one roll or tour of the Canary's song is more difficult to perform than another; for songsters develop so differently at times, that it becomes difficult to discriminate to which tour the palm should be awarded. To one cock the Hollow-roll is easier than any other, to another of the same strain, perhaps the Bell-roll, and to a third the Knorre. In the old-time Andreasberg strains (which are now legion) just the presence and the execution of a certain tour formed the essential sign of the strain; as, for instance, in the Trute song the Hollow-bell and the Bell-roll; and even the Hollow-roll which sporadically appeared in this strain mostly remained only something between these two.

I trust no judges exist who would prefer not to see the Roller's song explained, but remain a sealed book to the layman and novice. Such judges would certainly attack me and seek to "pick holes" in my descriptions; truly, "to please everyone is an impossible art."

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Strains of Roller (York).—If you mean you are about starting to breed good Rollers, you must carefully avoid mixing up different strains with varying type of song. To do this is simply to court failure. See reply to another querist on the subject. You would also do well to read up chapters in "Our Canaries" and House's "Manual" on the Roller.

Choice of Seed (Straight 'Un).—Nos. 1 and 4 are practically alike. There is nothing to choose between them, seeing that both are the same price. They are quite the best of the samples. No. 2 is a very good sample and good enough for any stock where price is an object of importance. No. 3 and 5 I should avoid on account of a slight flavour I do not care about. No. 6 is good in quality, but so very small as to be a doubtful economy, even at a low price.

Properties of Seeds (Unflighted).—It is impossible to go into details here concerning the properties of all seeds. This has been done at intervals on several occasions in articles, and you would find the matter very fully dealt with in "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds," which our manager would send you post free for 1s. 2d. Popularly speaking, canary and millet are starchy foods—the bread, as it were, of the Canary's life—and rape, hemp, teazle, niger, gold of pleasure, and maw, are oily, and more or less heating and fattening foods. Canary may always be given ad lib. as staple, and about a fourth part of its bulk of rape added, either separately or mixed with the canary will form a well-balanced and generally useful and wholesome dietary. All the rest may be made into a seed mixture for occasional use in all ordinary circumstances. When young are being reared, hemp may be given somewhat freely after the first week or ten days.

Improving Feathers, and Cage Timber (H.A.).—(1) To improve the quality and length of your birds' plumage select for your own breeding all the most typical in shape, with the shortest plumage generally, but especially short in wings and tail, good short beaks, and a trifle short in leg. The latter points may seem unimportant, but you will almost invariably find that these points go hand in hand with good short bossy feather generally. Mate about half your stock for this coming season only—double-buff. One-fourth mate double-buff bred birds with yellows, and the remainder yellow to buff in the usual way. Keep a fair amount of dark blood among the birds. Next season (1913) go back to the usual methods of mating, when you will find very good results from this season's work. It is quite the best you can do if you are compelled to work up your stock without adding fresh blood. (2) There is no particular kind of wood which will prevent red mites harbouring in cages made with it. Creosoted red pine is said to be a preventive of insect pests, but I doubt its utility in this connection, save in a temporary way: as long as the cages retained the odour—no longer. Still you might try it.

Should They Start (Bart).—(1) You must have made an error in the first instance in allowing the hen to have access to nesting material. Otherwise she could not have persisted in building a nest anywhere. Whether you should now allow the hen to go on and nest depends upon your room, or where you keep the birds, and the forwardness of the hen. If you have a heated room so as to be largely independent of vagaries of weather, you might reasonably allow them to go on. Otherwise, especially if the hen does not appear sufficiently forward to lay in any case, you would do well to keep her back by moving all nesting material, feeding plainly, and, if necessary, moving her out of sight and hearing of the cock. (2) Yes, you could get a very decent pair, or even trio, of Norwich plainheads for the sum you name. I cannot mention particular persons, but either of those you name would doubtless be able to serve you well. Write either, the second first on account of being nearer you, stating exactly your wants, and asking for a quotation of price if they can supply you. (3) If properly packed in travelling cages, and sent with sufficient food in the cages to allow for a few hours' delay, birds would travel quite safely to you from the Isle of Wight, and be "not a penny the worse." It all depends, however, upon proper packing and despatch. Birds frequently travel much greater distances.

Roller Queries (No Name).—(1) The sample of German rape is a very good quality, of the kind favoured by German breeders. The canary is also an excellent seed of first rate quality. (2) Give the Seifert cock a little egg food or crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed, three times a week for a fortnight, and add 20 drops of whisky and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece to the drinking water three times a week during the same time. Slightly smear the bare patch twice a week with Lanocyllin.

Three (Ulsterman).—(1) If you want to attempt breeding you could put a cock and two hens—or three hens, if you wish, though the chances would be less rosy than with two—and four or five nesting sites in the flight cage. This is all you could do with it in this line without dividing it up into separate breeding compartments. (2) you could keep from 12 to 15 Canaries and Finches in it, but there would be no chance at all of them breeding successfully. Therefore you might as well have all cocks in this case. (3) It would be most unwise to mate the Norwich now. Wait until the end of March, and meantime do not feed up the birds too well if they appear to be getting forward. Of course, if you have a heated room, and are independent of our climatic conditions you might mate up earlier, but you are silent on this point.

Seeds for Canaries (Silverdale).—It is not a good plan to give an elaborate mixture of seeds such as you send as a regular staple diet. The birds frequently pick out just a few kinds, generally the least wholesome when consumed largely, and waste the biggest portion of the remainder. Besides this, the sample you send is composed mostly of low quality seeds, and contains a lot of dust for so small a quantity. You should give a staple of plain canary seed only, and give all other seeds separately as required in small quantities. A teaspoonful of a mixture such as you send might be given about twice a week. For full details of feeding you should get one of the handbooks mentioned in the inset list, or the nutshell booklet on "The Canary."

Converting Fowl-house (T. B.).—The building you describe should make a very good and serviceable bird-room, and if the position where it stands is fairly well sheltered there is really no reason why any breed should not thrive in it. The proposed position of breeding cages and flights is about the best you can adopt. If there is no ventilation in the end opposite the door I would advise you to make one, in the same position and similar to the one in the door end. If the house has been used for fowls, wash the inside down well with a fairly strong solution of Jeye's or Izal before whitewashing it. If the place is sheltered, and the birds you start with are quite accustomed to a normal temperature, you could safely introduce them as soon as the place is quite dry and ready for them. Otherwise, as with birds from a warm kitchen, you should wait until the weather becomes milder, say, towards end of February or in March.

Still Moulting (Cage Birds).—You are probably keeping the bird in a draughty or damp place, or greatly fluctuating temperature, perhaps hanging in a window. Any of these causes must be removed. Keep it in a comfortable position, not necessarily very warm, but as equable as possible, and quite free from the above-named faults. Give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet. In addition give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, black rape, and millet. Give a spray of watercress, if obtainable in good condition, three times a week. Continue this dietary for three weeks or so. In the drinking water add a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

Which Cock (A. G. S.).—It depends solely upon the way the two cocks have been bred which would make the best mate for the Cinnamon hen. If they have no Cinnamon blood in their veins there is nothing to choose between them, as with either of them the young will be the same practically—that is, greens, self and broken, and perhaps a sprinkling of heavily variegated, but no Cinnamons nor Cinnamon-marked. If you want to breed Cinnamons, you should get a buff Cinnamon cock to mate with the hen. If the cocks you have possess pink-coloured eyes, which indicates Cinnamon blood in them, they would breed Cinnamon-marked young when mated with the Cinnamon hen. In this case the buff, other points being suitable, would be the best to use. Yes, save in exceptional cases, a hen mated with one cock for a first nest will mate with a different one, if such a change is desired, for the second or third nest.

Indoor Aviary (Beginner).—The aviary, except in height, is really no more than a good sized flight, and in such a limited space the chances of much success in breeding with several hens flying loose are not very great. The difficulty is that the hens interfere too much with others nesting arrangements. If you are fortunate enough to get good breeding hens, without a kink for mischief, you would succeed well enough with three hens and one cock. For these you should fix up five or six nesting sites, but avoid placing one in the highest part under the angle of the roof, or trouble is sure to follow. If you are particularly desirous to get the best possible results you would be well advised to divide the aviary into four compartments, by placing a floor midway between top and bottom, and then dividing the length. This would give you four good sized breeding compartments, in which you might either run separate pairs or work two cocks with four hens.

Breeding Good Rollers (Greenhorn).—Before going in for breeding high-class singing Rollers you ought to definitely decide in your mind which type of song you will cultivate. If you start mixing up widely differing types of song you will make a big mistake. Such a method of procedure will lead you nowhere, and you will get birds which will have neither one type of song nor another perfect, and which, consequently, could only be termed ordinary trained singers. The so-called Glucke birds, with, as you say, "the same old 3 or 4 changes," are probably trained Hollow Rollers, which many ordinary breeders—yourself including, judging by your letter—fail to appreciate through this lack of variety. The schoolmaster is doubtless a Seifert-trained bird. Now, you should adhere to one or the other of these types. The Glucke cock should certainly be mated with the Glucke hens, and the young should also be trained under Glucke cocks. If trained under the schoolmaster in question, I should classify them as ordinary trained Rollers. This question you will find dealt with in Part XVI. of "Our Canaries."

Price of Matched Pair (Chesswood).—You might get a matched pair for Crest breeding such as you describe for £... or 25s., but you must not expect them to be over-burdened with head feathers—their most essential feature. On the contrary they would probably be quite ordinary specimens compared with ideal show birds. For a better class of birds you can go up to £10, or even much higher, if your pocket will allow of getting the highest class Crest and Crestbred. Sorry I cannot single out any dealer for mention. See our advertisement columns, where you will find plenty of known dealers and breeders making announcements.

Gaslight and Bathing (No Nom-de-plume).—(1) Gaslight in itself is in no way harmful, and it is not necessary to cover over the cage when the gas is lit. Cages, however, should always be well away from the gas burners, and on a level with, or below, them. (2) The only reason the Canary will not bathe is that he is not "so disposed." If you use a white china bath try using a dark earthenware one. Wait until you see him beginning to try to bathe in his drinker. Then remove drinker and put bath in cage for an hour or so. You may also drop a pinch of hemp or morsel of choice green food in it for a few times to tempt him to approach it. By persevering in these tactics he will take to bathing as the spring approaches. Many birds do not bathe much at this season.

Too Fat (G. C. Gorton).—I am assuming your surmise is correct, which is not unlikely to be the case, and you give no details as to treatment. Therefore, treat as follows for a month, and if not then well, write again and give full particulars of bird's condition, and treatment hitherto. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and do not allow waste seed to accummulate. Limit the diet by giving a teaspoonful only of plain canary seed. Twice a week reduce this ration one-half, and add a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts summer rape and black rape. Once a week give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure, in addition to the usual seed. When obtainable in fit condition give a spray of watercress three or four times a week. Restrict food supply solely to this. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn, every second day for a week, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another week.

Use of Indoor Aviary (Novice).—As you mention no other birds kept, or purposed being kept, in the one division of the aviary, I should advise you to take out the partition and give the birds freedom of the whole space. This would be far more likely to show a successful result at end of breeding season than running the hens together in one part. If you do this, put in four or five nesting receptacles, not close together, nor one considerably higher than the others. In this case you might also add an extra hen and run one cock with three hens, adding, of course, at least two more nesting receptacles. There would be no necessity to remove the cock during incubation. If you prefer not to remove partition, you should keep one hen in each division, and run the cock with each alternately. The necessity for removing him during incubation might arise in this case, but it would only be so in the event of his maltreating the hen, and trying to keep her from the nest. As a beginner you should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, or the forthcoming CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which will give you a mass of useful hints, which it is impossible to give here.

Sluggish Condition (Norfolk Fancier).—The frequent local washing of feathers is almost invariably most harmful to the general condition of a bird, so you should stop this altogether. If the feathers become badly soiled carefully trim away the soiled portions with a small pair of nail scissors, taking care not to harm the bird. As a rule, after a very little has been clipped off the tips the soiling does not occur again so badly. Treat hen as follows: Keep in a comfortable temperature, not overheated, nor yet very cold, but quite free from draughts and damp, and as equable as possible. In addition to the staple of canary seed, give a half-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts summer and black rape every second day. On the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg food sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure once a week, and when obtainable a spray of watercress or green salad on each of the remaining days. Break open a grape and stick on the end of a perch for bird to peck at during the first week or so. Restrict diet to this. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea, every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day. If there still appears any soreness at vent, touch it once with one drop of castor oil.

Not Singing and Mating (E. H.).—(1) Possibly the Norwich and Yorkshire birds are a little older than the Roller, which might account for their not yet singing so freely. They will probably very soon become more free in song. Treat as follows for a fortnight. In addition to the staple of Canary give each half a teaspoonful of rape every second day only, and also a scrap of green food or fruit. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and also a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet, on these days. For one day add a small crystal of sulphate of soda to the drinking water. (2) I cannot tell why the Roller runs to and fro on the cage floor with his beak towards the back. It's very silly of him, any way. But it may have a very simple solution for one on the spot. If they cage is painted inside with a glossy enamel, he may see his reflection there, and be paying addresses to it. If bird is quite well, this is nothing to be anxious about. (3) A Roller hen will certainly mate quite successfully with a Norwich cock, but the young will be crossbreds, of value only as songsters, and the song will be decidedly below that of pure trained Rollers. The Roller cock would be a more suitable mate.

A Triplet (Cobler).—(1) Only time can show whether the two hens will breed this year. It is quite possible they may, but there is also a risk that they may not. You should read up the chapter on "Squatting Hens" in Part vii. of "Our Canaries," which deals fully with this type of hen. Feed liberally, and treat as indicated in the forthcoming CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and please let me know result at end of season. (2) It is only in very exceptional circumstances with a definite object in view that such close in-breeding as brother and sister should be resorted to. As you seem to have no such object, I do not advise the mating. Sell or exchange one of the birds and get an unrelated one for mating. (3) When ready for mating, the birds should be untiringly active, the cocks bubbling over with vigorous song, and calling frequently to the hens, and trying to reach them, or feeding them through the wires if close together; the hen flapping about from perch to perch and responding promptly to the "calls" of the cocks, and when very forward occasionally gripping the feathers on their own breasts and pretending to carry them about.

Cock Biting Hen (Fancier).—The only reason I can assign for a cock who is so lacking in chivalry is that he is an ungracious scamp, who ought to be ashamed of himself. It is probably nothing but greed. You should not, however, have the birds together yet. Separate them until towards end of March, and then you will find he will behave better.

Out of Condition (J. Faulkner).—I'm afraid your treatment generally is at fault. First, see that the bird is kept in a bright, comfortable place, not necessarily very warm, but where the temperature is as equable as possible, and quite free from draughts or fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and that its cage is free from red mites. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a piece of stale bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a morsel of greenstuff or fruit, and twice a week a small teaspoonful of mixed seeds. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for one day, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. After this course, treat the bird generally as advised in the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary."

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Budgerigars Not Breeding.

J. E. Wood.—It is quite possible you have related birds, but in any case there is often a mishap with the first brood, and the cold weather would throw them off. The birds, too, will benefit by not being troubled with the anxieties of a family, and their future progeny will be all the stronger for delay. They will come into breeding condition again in the spring. In the meantime canary, white millet, and a few millet sprays, grit, cuttlebone and a bit of lettuce occasionally will meet their needs. As soon as it is obtainable, in the spring, free from frost (gather at mid-day), supply flowering and seeding grass ad. lib., and add a few oats, crushed or whole, whichever suits them best, to their menu every other day. I should certainly keep the birds and see how they shape with their first and second clutches before putting them down as useless. I opine they will turn out all right.

Zebra Finches, etc.

A.M.B.—I should say matters will go on quite satisfactory in the spring, do not put them together again till the end of April, and then in due course you should get a brood, but Zebra Finches often build a nest or two, pull them to pieces build again sometimes laying a clutch of eggs, and then build another nest on top of them, before ultimately settling down—they are not as a rule early breeders, and their season is often protracted till late autumn. Unless you can keep up a warm temperature I do not suppose Cordon Bleus would attempt to breed at this season—take away all nesting material and the nest-boxes till spring, when better luck should attend you. It is not necessary, except in very exceptional cases, to remove the cock with foreign species, the sexes are best left together all through the breeding season. Your remarks re Canary and Pekin Robin are interesting.

Amazon Parrot with Swelling.

N.F.—A vet. ought to see this bird, as it may require the use of the knife. However, if you wish to treat the bird, get a box of Honey and Borax from your chemist and put a little in its mouth twice daily, use a camel hair brush, which must be well cleansed each time. Keep its bowels well moving by putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the daily supply of drinking water as required, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. While the trouble lasts give boiled maize daily—boil till soft, drain off all water and stir into it 10 drops of Byno-phosphates. The following sop may also be given if the bird finds difficulty in swallowing hard seed: Stale crust of household, sprinkle with sugar, as much boiling water as it will absorb and then 10 drops of the Byno-phosphates—supply to the bird when cool. Report progress a fortnight hence.

An Indoor Aviary.

Boulter.—(a) These are not always obtainable, but any of the genus Brotogerys would answer the purpose, viz., Tovi, Tui, All Green, Gold-fronted, Canary-winged, White-winged, Orange-flanked and Yellow-billed, but only one pair; two pairs of Brotogerys, though of different species, would not be safe in the same aviary. (b) I should increase accommodation in the lines of another aviary, rather than increasing size of present one. Another selection that would make a nice show would be: Black-checked Lovebirds, Ring-necked Parrakeets, one pair of Brotogerys, and odd cocks of Green and Long-tailed Glossy Starling, and odd hybrid Cardinal, now being offered (advertised). (c) Two mixtures: (1) Canary and millet, equal, and a quota of grit (not sand). (2) Two parts oats and one part each paddy rice, hemp, wheat, grit (not sand), dari and sunflower seed—well mix and keep a supply of each in the aviary. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits and cuttlebone—water, of course, for drinking and bathing. The Cardinals will find what they require from the above, but they should have three mealworms or other insects per bird per diem. I do not care for deal perches, and have in red indicated alterations as to furnishing on your rough plan, which I have returned. Read above in conjunction with first reply.

Java Sparrows, Weavers, etc. (D. L. Fynn).—(1) A mixture of canary and white millet, and another of hemp, oats, paddy rice, rape, and sunflower seed, both in equal parts, also greenfood, ripe fruit, cuttlebone, grit, and an occasional mealworm or other insect for the Weavers and Cardinals. (2) They are erratic breeders (that is, the Grey are), but they do breed annually in aviaries. When they are feeding young, supply some good soft food mixture. (3) Yes, but they require a fair space; either they can, with pinioned wings, be allowed to range about during the day, and be shut up in a shed at night; or a roomy space be wired in (not less than 6ft. high), with a shelter at one end for night occupation.

Birds for Cage (J. Wells).—The Zebra Finches will undoubtedly breed with you as soon as they have settled down, and in preference to choosing another breeding pair, I would advise a pair each of Gold-breasted Waxbills and Green Avadavats to make a display; both are beautiful, but I rather doubt either breeding in a cage, though such is not impossible. Hang up a couple of small coconut shells, in adition to the Finches nest box. If you want another breeding pair try Silverbills or Bengalese. Gouldian Fiuches are erratic breeders, even in outdoor aviaries, doing well in one place with mediocre accommodation, and nothing in another where it is really first class. At the same time, a pair as sole occupants of your cage should certainly be probable breeders.

Budgerigars and Sex (Beginner).—You ought to get our Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager—it would solve many difficulties for you. When not in breeding condition, it is by no means easy to sex the birds, the only difference then being that the cere of the cock is a darker blue than that of the hen. But this distinction is largely modified by the age of respective individuals. When ready to breed, the cere of the hen becomes deep brown, and that of the male is rich bright blue; when this change begins to take place then supply a husk. If no change in the cere occurs by the spring, you can be sure you have two hens. Then part with one and get a hen in breeding condition. When they have young to feed, be fairly liberal with millet sprays, and supply a small tin daily of crushed oats and crushed plain biscuit, also greenfood and cuttlebone, grass in flower or seed as much as they will eat.

Aviary for Waxbills (B. Currey).—If you give me full details of the aviary, and its furnishings, I can then tell you what your prospects are likely to be. But, for Waxbills and the "Small Ornamental Finches," conditions should be as natural as possible. No, the ivy will do no harm: it is a distinct gain, and will supply natural cover for your birds.

Ring-neck Parrakeet (Bird Lover).—Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts, also green food as available, and water for drinking and bathing. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Seed mixture: Get one quart each canary and white millet, one pint each oats and hemp, half pint each wheat, maize, dari, grit (not sand) and sunflower seeds—well mix, and keep a supply in cage. Give 3 drops of tasteless cod liver oil, either direct to beak from a quill or on a piece of biscuit, crust of bread or piece of sponge cake, and put it on a course of chemical food—make the drinking water the colour of pale port, giving clear water only every third day. They take more teaching, but usually talk clearly, but do not equal a Grey or Amazon.

Budgerigars breeding in a Cage (Robin).—Yes, the Budgies are very probable breeders under any conditions, but the limits of a Canary breeding cage is very small for such active birds, and their cage ought to be really double that size to give them reasonable exercise, and the perches (natural branches) should be at each end of the cage, and so arranged that they must use their wings to get from one to the other. Give them a mixture of canary seed and white millet (equal), also millet sprays and a leaf of lettuce occasionally, or other fresh salad; they will eat in the summer flowering or seeding grass ad. lib. Get "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, it will give you all details which space does not permit here.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary (H. Baker).—Your query gives me no idea of your county, and if you are very far north you had better arrange to have a glazed shutter to fit the front of your flight for severe weather and all winter nights. I should have any shutter you provide moveable, because in the summer months it will be an advantage to keep it off, and even at this time is will be useful during spells of driving rain to put it on and so keep interior dry—it should not fit close to top of aviary, one inch all along should be left, under the overhang, for ventilation. The Cockatecls and Budgies should be certain breeders, but the Cardinals are never so; these latter need unlimited live food when feeding young. I should not put the birds out till late April or early May—they can then be left out altogether with safety.

An Outdoor Aviary (Lincolnshire).—It is really an outdoor cage, and if you want breeding results do not put in more than three breeding pairs the size of Budgerigars, and it never ought to contain more than 20 birds under any conditions. The shutters should have a glass panel in each, then in severe weather they could be kept closed—provision, of course, being made for ventilation. I should advise you to put a pair of Cockatcels in with the Budgies, selling the young as soon as you see them fending for themselves. Finches are not safe with Budgies, but you could keep an odd cock Red-crested Cardinal with them for variety. Get our Nutshell Booklet No. 18, 2½d. post free, from our Manager, it will help you.

Breeding in Cages (Beginner).—(1) Budgerigars, Cockatcels, Zebra and Ribbon Finches and Java Sparrows. Only one pair should be in each cage, which should be half as large again as the ordinary Canary breeding cage. Get "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1¼ post free from our Manager, it will help you. (2) Yes, but cage must be kept very clean, and well examined for mites when a brood has left the nest. (3) Husks or logs for Budgies and Cockatcels, and for the others there is nothing better than the chip Hartz travelling cages Canaries come over in. Take out the perches and other fittings, cut away a couple of bars for entrance, push in a little hay, supply nesting material, and the birds will do the rest.

Parrot with Swelling (C.D.G.).—Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo. Such cases really require a vet. If the swelling is of a nature that contains pus, it should be fomented with a hot decoction (not hot enough for discomfort) of poppy heads, so long as skin is unbroken, and when the swelling appears ripe it must be well cleansed with tepid water and then annointed with a little antiseptic ointment. You must keep the bowels well moving by one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water as required, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. If the swelling is merely a hard, fleshy substance, and does not contain pus, then cleanse it with tepid water and lightly annoint the swelling with tincture of iodine, use a camel hair brush and well cleanse it each time. The other treatment as to magnesia and phosphates to be the same.

About Bengalese (Bengalese).—The Bengalee is a Japanese creation, really a fertile hybrid, and as such are unsatisfactory beeders, indefatigable sitters, bad feeders, and a number of young birds dead in shell, but still some youngsters should be reared annually. There are three varieties, viz.: All White (scarce), Fawn and White and Chocolate-brown and White. The plumatie distinctions of the sexes are practically nil. The female has a slightly narrower and more tapering beak than the male, and she is also quieter. They are somewhat lethargie in demeanour. Yes, the single breeder will do, but a roomier cage would be better. A Hartz travelling cage, with the fittings removed and a couple of bars cut away for entrance, is a good nest receptacle. Canary, white millet, millet sprays, green food, grit and cuttlebone is about all they require—a little soft food when feeding young.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

A Crossbill Problem.

Miss Sutton.—The illustration you mention is correct, for the plumage of the adult male Crossbill, when in a state of nature, is red, varying in intensity according to the bird's age. In captivity, the red is not reproduced at the moult, the bird then being greenish in colour, with sometimes traces of a golden or yellowish tint. I should have thought your book (if the picture is in a book) would have explained this. The hen is ashen-greeu, with a yellowish tinge here and there; she is the smaller bird. For food your Crossbill may be given sunflower, hemp and canary seed, and for animal food three or four mealworms daily, with any other live insects you can get, according to season. A few berries (haw, privet, black, and so on), also the core and pips of apples, smashed nuts of various kinds (walnuts, crack nuts, etc.), and fruit, are relished. Offer him now and again any of the other seeds or seed mixtures in general use, also small maize, dari, wheat, oats, and the like. Sometimes he will eat a little, and variety is good.

Spoiling the Nest.

James Street.—It is often quite impossible to prevent the cock Finch from pulling out the material of the nest. It does not matter much so long as you leave no good eggs in it, and especially if you use a lined nest pan. When the Goldfinch, or any other Finch for that matter, is removed at night, it is only necessary to roughly put the nest into shape with one's hands. The hen will lay in it all right, and, of course, the egg is removed and a pot one substituted before the Finch is returned in the morning. On the evening of the third day the nest can be put together very nicely by the aid of a hot hard-boiled egg, pressing the material into place with the latter. Then put in the three good eggs (or, rather, the eggs one hopes will be good), and leave the hen to incubate them and rear the young. The nest liniug prevents any injury coming to either of the three eggs laid before the hen is set. I have sometimes had hen Canaries which would not build a nest, and many which have built shocking bad ones. I fix them all up with nests either of my own making entirely, or to which I put the "finishing touches." They take to them all right; a really broody hen will sit on anything short of a piece of ice.

Rearing Young Mules.

J. Townley.—All Canary Mules reared by Canary hens are brought up in very much the same way as young Canaries—that is, on similar food and treatment generally. When they are commencing to feed themselves offer (in addition to soft food) maw sed, lightly cracked canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse and groundsel; and thistles in season. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar. Steep some summer rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before offering it to the birds. This is very good, especially where anyone experiences difficulty in getting green food regularly, for which it is to a certain extent a substitute. All crushed seed should be prepared fresh daily. Wean them off egg food as soon as possible, substituting for it home-made egg cake, moistened, if necessary, with a spot or two of milk or of water; or a little stale sponge cake, or crushed sweet buscuit (maizena wafer, tea or Osborne), also moistened with milk. Egg cake made and baked at home really does not need damping. Don't make the mistake, when dropping egg, of leaving off soft food entirely. You could turn the Mules, of course, into small flight cages, about 3 feet or 4 feet long—say double breeders with centre partition removed. They are apt to be mischievous, and pluck one another, however, when kept in numbers together.

Further Hybrid-breeding Details.

Puzzled.—I think this answer will cover all the necessary points: The single Hybrid breeding cages I myself use are about 30ins. long, 17 or 18 high, and 14 deep (one or two are larger). I am dead against smaller cages, for they get very dirty in next to no time, and when nesting operations are proceeding it would be very bad policy to disturb Hybrid couples by cleaning them out, and in a large cage a few days' neglect in this respect make no matter. I have two perches in, on the crossbar, the birds feeding from the cage bottom. There is one large door in the centre of the front, at the bottom (as usual), made extra wide. A "platform" of wire-netting runs from the crossbar to the back of the cage. It is 5½ to 6 inches wide, and the netting is tacked to a piece of wood, which is screwed to the cage back, and wired to the crossbar at front. This "platform," if thickly interlaced and strewed with sun-dried grasses or chickweed, etc., affords a fine place for the hen to lay her eggs on; or on which to lodge the favourite old Thrush or Blackbird nest, for the Bullie hen to re-line (some don't trouble to do the latter). A more or less cup-shaped depression is easily contrived in the dry grasses, and the latter may be easily removed (or so much as is necessary) as required, being get-at-able through the door. If I know my hen, and have no fear of eggs dropping on bottom of cage, I cover the latter with fine peat-moss litter. If a strauge hen, or one which behaves doubtfully, I use a thick layer of dried grasses, as well. The latter has great advantages over sawdust, etc., as it is not easily swept aside by the movements of the birds, thus leaving patches of the cage-bottom uncovered. (It can be used over a layer of sawdust). It is very "springy," too, and catches an egg sagely. The perches, by the way, ought not to be placed very high up in the cage. My favourite way of screening the nesting site is to hang a strip of thick, stiff brown paper over the particular corner of the cage. If one's room is dark, a light material (such as muslin) should, of course, be used.

A Fancy for Doves.

Ring Neck.—I do not know a great deal about Doves. They look very pretty flying in a good-sized outdoor aviary, though one drawback is their pugnacity towards others of the same species, especially during the breeding season. They breed freely, however, housed in separate pairs, in biggish cages. The latter should be not less than three feet long—four feet by two feet by three feet high would be a very good and suitable size indeed. Provide perches of suitable thickness, and a couple of nest-boxes. The floor can be covered either with dry, coarse-cut pine sawdust, or well teased out peat moss litter. They require a tin of pigeon grit, and water for drinking and bathing; freely in the summer for the latter purpose. As their staple diet, get a seedsman to put you up a mixture of the smaller grains—wheat, canary, dari, hemp, oats, peas, rice, millet, etc. Keep them well supplied with coarse grit. For a change of food, they are very partial to any nuts (walnuts, brazils, cobe, etc.), coarsely smashed up; also plain biscuit treated in similar fashion. Change of diet is especially useful at moulting time. Some birds enjoy an occasional mealworm, especially during the moulting period. A little mixed bird seed will do no harm at times, though much of it is sure to be wasted.

Keeping Mealworms.

Pilot.—Get a good-sized tiu, or an earthenware jar. It should not be too high, but should have as much "floor space" as possible. Bore with a bradawl two rows of holes right round the sides at the top, within an inch or an inch and a-half of the lid. If you use a jar, then the lid can be left off and a piece of sacking put over the top. Cut three pieces of coarse sacking so that they will, when folded once over, drop flat into the tin, leaving about three-quarters of an inch space between each edge and the sides of the tin. Dry these thoroughly before the fire. Get a supply (pennyworth or so) of bran and barley meal. Put a layer on the bottom of the tin, about an inch and a-half thick. Put a folded piece of sacking on this. Then put another layer of bran; then another piece of sacking—and so on, aranging to fill the tin not more than three-parts full, and to have a piece of sacking at the top. Then turn a pint of mealworms (or as many as you feel disposed to invest in) into the tin. Put in a handful of fresh meal occasionally, under the top layer of sacking. It takes about twelve months to get into full breeding swing, i.e., for the mealworms to turn into beetles, beetles to lay eggs in the folds of sacking, eggs to hatch, and young mealworms to mature. In the summer time it is often possible to buy a quantity of beetles from advertisers along with the worms, and one would save time by so doing. Many put beer-soaked rags (bung rags), dead birds, dog biscuits, bones, etc., in their mealworm boxes; but I never do so myself. Disturb the breeding box as little as possible, and always keep it in a fairly warm, dry place, such as a cupboard at the side of fireplace. The latter is the secret of success. In the winter change the contents into a new tin (when this becomes necessary), sifting the "dust" at the bottom of the old one and throwing it away.

Puzzled No. 2.—If the swelling is soft to the touch and obviously filled with matter, then you should prick it with a stout needle, or, better still, open it with the sharp point of a penknife blade, or razor, and gently but thoroughly squeeze out the contents. Afterwards swab the place out well with warm water just coloured with Condy's Fluid, and anoint it with a little boracic ointment, obtainable cheaply from the chemist. If it is a hard swelling, however, paint it very lightly once daily with tincture of iodine, which may cause it to disappear. Use a small camel hair brush, and don't let the iodine get on any other part of the bird except the actual swelling. It is very powerful stuff.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

L. Wear.—I attribute your loss to change of diet, death occurring from inflammation of the bowels. The bird was in other respects quite healthy.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Cuttings (A. E. Wasley; J. Stanger; M. [illegible]; and Others).—Many thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

Parrots (E. Godry).—The book you mention deals with Parrots of many species, but it is somewhat out-of-date now (i.e., was written a goodly number of years ago).

A Question of Identity (John Scot).—You will find the prices of Roller hens given in the advertisement columns. These birds are called German Rollers, and "German hen" and "Roller hen" bear practically the same meaning. There are differences in quality, of course, the same as in hens of other varieties of Canaries.

A Report (H. Paynter).—We are much obliged to you.

Enamel (Bullfinch).—If the enamel is allowed to set quite hard before the Greenfinch is put into the cage, no harm will come to the bird. Enamelled cages are commonly in use.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Will members and others please note that we have changed our place of meeting to the Old Boars Head Hotel, Corporation Street, Manchester? Meetings last Saturday in month, time 6 p.m. At above place we held our annual meeting, Jan. 27, Mr. A. Foulds chairman; a good number of members present. After the ordinary business the Secretary read balance sheet and reported on the progress of the club during year. Balance sheet shows a gain of £7 8s. 6d., leaving a balance in hand of £21 16s. 7d. Last year we made 25 new members, and we have now a membership of over 80. Messrs. Routledge and Massey were appointed Auditors, Mr. G. Wareing (Bury) President, Messrs. A. Foulds (Manchester), W. Massey (Boltou) and A. Leach (Shaw) Vice-Presideuts. As no member would propose a new Secretary and Treasurer I had no option but to try to please once again. Our Chairman then had the pleasure of presenting the P.R.C.C. eup and gold medal, and two silver medals, won at Bolton and Bradford, to Mr. J. Kilshaw (Bolton), also two silver medals to Mr. T. Turner, (Manchester) for his wins at Manchester and Bolton; Mr. G. Wareing (Bury) was presented with a medal for his win at Grimsby.—Andrew Percival, Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held headquarters, Jan. 23, a good number of members putting in an appearance. Mr. H. W. Tomsett presided. Correspondence was dealt with, and two new members elected. Officers for 1912 elected as follows:—Patrons, F. Hall, Esq., M.P., A. Laing, Esq.; president, J. Bright Crowo, Esq.; vice-presidents, Messrs. E. S. Lugg, J. Robson, W. Spillman, J. B. Waterman, S. E. Whitlock, and J. W. Cranfield; hon. solicitor, H. R. B. Tweed, Esq.; hon. auditors, Messrs. F. S. Malthes and F. Cole; hon. assistant sec., Mr. H. W. Tomsett; hon. secretary and treas. W Hodson. Committee elected by voting papers as follows:—Messrs. W. Hodson, H. W. Tomsett, D. Reeks, H. E. Tringham, H. S. Stephens, C. Botting, C. Austin, L. J. Richardson, F. Cole, W. B. Cracknell, J. Carpenter, Hy. Cornish, F. Hocking, F. S. Fairman, the delegates to London Federation, H. W. Tomsett and C. Botting. Balance sheet next brought forward for adoption; much satisfaction was felt and expressed that we were able to show a balance on the right side. The feeling that some sort of a social gathering of members should mark the happy event of the society surmounting the great difficulties it had had to face for the last three years took form at this meeting, and it was decided that a supper, with a musical programme, be held. Feb. 13 being fixed provisionally, details to be arranged at a committee meeting. A thoroughly interesting and progressive programme is being arranged for the year. It is hoped members will rally round the officers and help make the year an immense success. A vote of thanks to retiring officers and to the chair closed the evening.—W. Hodson, Hon. Sec.

Under the White Rose.

OF course, the whole thoughts of most fanciers are this week-end centred on the Palace Show. The height of all ambitions in the bird world is to win at "the Glass House," it ranking as the show where all champions meet, in order to decide which are the birds of the year. As may be gathered from the figures published this year, it will again be a great success, and many hundreds will pay their annual visit to the show from all parts. Saturday being the best day, a good number are going from the West Riding towns, trips being specially run from most of them. Certainly the majority of the Yorkshires will hail from the County of Broad Acres, and by the time these lines appear it will be known pretty generally who has done the winning and as to whether the centre of the variety has upheld its reputation. However, nowadays more than formerly we have interests in many other varieties. Norwich, British birds, etc., have many good supporters in Yorkshire, and it will soon be noted how they have fared in the fight for supremacy; generally they get a fair share of the spoil.

THIS week-end we have had a touch of frost, and no mistake. It soon brought the wild birds nearer to the haunts of man. Hunger makes a difference; it conquers fear, and brings some of the shyest out into the open. It is a treat to feed them. Robins, of course, always the foremost and most pugnacious; the cheeky Sparrow coming in also for a good share, with a sprinkling of Blackbirds, Thrushes, various Tits, and others. Many of them relish a drink of water. The frost has also been felt in the bird rooms. Where the attic is the one occupied, the water has been frozen into solid blocks of ice several times a day, but the birds themselves are quite lively. Give them clean water and they are off to drink in a crack, almost before you get the water in the glass. They stand the cold well, but must have the water attended to pretty often. When the ice is thawing, mind the glasses don't crack.

BANKFOOT and Dis. C.B.S. held a most successful whist drive and dance on Saturday evening last, the 27th January. Sixteen hands of whist, an interval for supper, and then nearly two hours' dancing made up a very pleasant evening, but, "By gum! it wor cold." Dancing would have been better first to get steam up a bit, then whist till one cooled down. I hear that financially it will put the society on a very good basis, and that there is a probability of another one before the end of the season.

A Cunning Tomtit.

On my Christmas holidays I taught a Tomtit in a sieve. I put it in a cage. It was very busy trying to get free. It afterwards laid on the cage bottom as if dead. I took it in my hand, and, as it seemed quite stiff, I thought it was dead. So I put it on the garden ready to bury it, and to my surprise it flew away to a tree.—Willie Scott, Wernbwll, Hendy, Pontardulais, South Wales.

*The Sparrow.

Glad to see you, little bird,
'Twas your pretty chirp I heard;
What did you intend to say?
"Give me something this cold day"?
That I will, and plenty, too,
All these crumbs I saved for you;
Don't be frightened—here's a treat;
I will wait and see you eat.

—Sent in by John Ernest Williams (aged 9), Lancashire House, Cerrig.

*Nest in a Tea Kettle.

I really believe we shall never get to the end of the list of strange places selected by Robin Redbreast for his home. Not many days ago a friend showed us an old tea kettle he had picked out of the hedge, where it had lain on its side; and in it was a Robin's nest, which had plainly served as the cradle for four or five young Robins. (From the "Children's Friend.")—Sent by Myfanwy Roberts (age 10 year), Cross Street, Rhuddian.

A Gardener's Robin.

Our gardener had a tame Robin that used to come into his tool house and hop all about him. One day my brother tried to make the Robin come by whistling to it, but it would not come. So the gardener said: "Stop! Now, sir, that ain't the way; look 'ee now. Coom, now, me lass, coom in." And in came the Robin and hopped on to his boot. When the gardener was having his dinner, the Robin came in and hopped on his knee whilst he fed it. (From "Little Folks.")—Sent by Emily Wakeman (age 13), 5a, Wilton Crescent Mews, Belgrave Square, London, S.W.

A Very Faithful Pet.

There was once an old lady who lived in a very lonely place. Her only companion was a pet Throstle. When the old lady was going out she would open the cage door, and the Throstle would accompany her on the journey. On one of these journeys she was taken very ill and had to sit down. The Throstle then flew to and fro until it saw a man coming along; it then fluttered around him, drawing his attention to the old lady. He assisted the old lady to her home, the Throstle taking its place in the cage.—Sent in by Daisy Ball (age 13), Rood Hill, Congleton, Cheshire.

More Early Birds.

Sir,—I feel sure readers will be interested to hear of my recent success. One pair of Canaries hatched on Dec. 10 one youngster out of two eggs, which is now a fine strong bird commencing to sing. The same pair hatched five more on Jan. 17, all strong and healthy birds, just getting flodged. I have also several other pairs nesting. Is not this a record? The birds are all kept in a cool conservatory facing north-east.

(Miss) LILIAN HARWOOD.

[Several earlier instances have been recorded this season in our columns.—Editor.]

Sir,—I noticed last week that a gentleman had three Canaries born on Jan. 5, and wished to know if anyone had had any earlier. I have three Roller Canaries, and the first was born Dec. 30, the second 31st, and the third Jan. 1. The mother is already with two eggs again. I thought readers would like to know this. I had thirteen young last year from the same hen.

Death of "The General."

Some Stories of a Famous Parrot.

Sir,—I regretfully have to record the death of my Amazon Parrot, after a few days' illness, old age being the cause. "The General" has been noticed many times in CAGE BIRDS, his wins being always 1st and special wherever shown, even when he journeyed to Aberdeen and other places. It is over twenty years since I bought him in London, he then being very old. I may mention at one of our local shows the auctioneer, after selling a few birds, put Polly up for auction as a joke. When the price was £5, the wise bird he was cried out "Alick, Alick, Alick." He knew I was in the hall, and knew I did not want to sell him! At another show children were admitted by themselves, and were getting rather rough, giving the bird cages a shake or two. Polly cried "Put them out! Put them out! Put them out." So the bird was the means of clearing the hall.

A Little Owl as a Pet and an Exhibition Bird.

Sir,—At the London C.B.A. Show I saw my old friend the Little Owl shown in a class for Hawks, Owls, etc., but the entry was only poor—three birds in the class—and this Owl was only third. I do hope this class will be continued. If it is, when well known it will, I am quite sure, be a great success. It will be the means of bringing out specimens of all the Owls and Hawks. All these large British birds are very beautiful. The report said that the Little Owl "snapped" as the reporter took his notes. That would show that it was not a hand-reared one, and that it was probably an old one. These birds can be made most interesting pets and good show birds, as they are so small compared to the other species of Owls, especially if they are hand-reared. I know that in towns it is very difficult to get hand-reared specimens, but in the country it is quite different, as these Owls are such prolific breeders that about the Eastern and Midland Counties they are getting quite common; in fact, about Northants and in Hunts they are becoming quite a nuisance, so to speak. A case was tried at Huntingdon some time back for setting a trap and catching one; I believe the man was only fined for using the trap and not for killing the bird. Yet I believe the species is scheduled and protected. It is some four years ago now when the powers that be came down on me for having had brought me a Little Owl, the size of a chicken just hatched. The old Owl (the mother) was dead on the nest, with two or three young, and this little one, only a few days old, was the only one alive. I had had it some two or three weeks when a policeman came and wanted my Owl. I showed him this, and they said what a little gem it was. They kept it at the police station for over a month. I expected every day I should get a ticket, but at last it all blew over, and the bird was set at liberty. They also got on the track of a friend of mine, now in Australia, who had over thirty of them in a large loft in baskets; the police went three or four times, but failed to find them. At last he threw them over a garden, and so escaped. Had they found his birds we should both of us have had to appear before the "great unpaid." My friend had for two or three years been sending them to nearly all parts of England to be turned out in parks, etc. So after all, he was only doing good by distributing them about England. Since he has left the Old Country they have not been so much collected. I expect a good many get shot at sight on the "Q.T.," as they have such a bad name and are so cheeky. They have been known to go for young chickens even in the day time. At night time they can be heard in all directions. They are known locally as the "Cat Owl,' and are dreaded by some of the superstitions, it being thought unlucky if they come near or pass over their houses uttering their pitiful cry. The good they do farmers and others must be great, considering the numbers of mice and young rats they destroy. Any desiring a Little Owl for a pet should get a young one, or a nest of young. They are most easily fed and hand-reared on any kind of meat—mice, lights, and rats cut in small pieces. But this is not a nice job for anyone to do. The cleaner and better way is to give either boiled or raw bullocks' lights, with a mouse occasionally; this would bring them up quite well. My friend used to go out and shoot rats to feed his lot with. I do not advocate the keeping of old birds for show purposes, as they would not be so tame as a young one raised by hand. I hope a class will be given these birds in the future at our larger shows, if only for the purpose of introducing these birds.

A "Wagon" Cage for Redpolls.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Charleston's query re cage for Redpolls, if this gentleman cares to let me have a stamped envelope with his address, I will send him a snapshot print of my own, with instructions necessary for making of a similar one. The photo would show many points that would otherwise require much written description. I keep a number of birds, and always make a point of having a Redpoll among the number. My own one draws the coach with seed, and also raises his drinking water in a thimble attached to a piece of fine chain. They are easy to train, very hardy, and cheap enough to come within the reach of a schoolboy.

D. LYNAS.

Sir,—I have been interested in these cages for many years, and have trained Siskins and Goldfinches, as well as Redpolls, to draw their seed and water. If Mr. Charleston writes me I should be pleased to give him all particulars

F. TATTERSALL.

A Plea for Novice British Bird Classes.

Sir,—Mr. Booth seems to desire our discussion to develop into a question of whether or not Mr. Downing is a novice. I think I am safe in saying that Mr. Downing is quite capable of defending himself against any attack, either real or imagined. May I just say here that I have no personal feeling against either Mr. Downing or anybody else. I see that I am to disclose my identity before I may have a reply from Mr. Downing. I have no intention at present of doing this. It may seem singular to some. Nevertheless, it is quite true that I do not care for publicity. If the few points I tried to make are worth anything at all, they will be of no more value with my name attached to them. Lest it be thought that I am trying to pull things to pieces simply for the fun of the thing, I will give an alternative scheme for the benefit of the novices. Let it be understood that this is not my own idea exclusively, although I am quite in favour of it. The scheme is simply to do away with novice classes altogether. How do we stand at present? We have the man of twenty years and upwards in the Fancy still showing in the novice classes. We have the novice with a long purse, or a good fancier friend, who can procure almost any bird he fancies. This bird may have been bred and shown by an open exhibitor; it may have been winning all the championship honours for a few seasons; yet as soon as our novice friend gets hold of it it becomes a novice bird, and competes on level terms with the bird bred by the straight novice. Under the new rule, this novice starts with British birds, sweeps the deck as soon as possible; then changes his fancy to Canaries and repeats the process. He has now got all he can get out of the society, so he leaves and joins another. I do not say that the scheme I give will stop this kind of thing altogether, but still I think it will kill the "pot hunter." During the discussion on this matter by another society it was said that a man might possibly win fifty first prizes at members' shows in the Manchester district and still show as a novice! In the name of common sense, where will this lead to? I should like some abler pen than mine to take this matter up. I think the first question settled should be, "What is a novice?" Then we might go on and discuss the question of what we shall do with him. I cannot think that Mr. Downing has said all he has to say on this subject. Personally, I shall be glad to read anything he writes; at the same time I prefer to remain

A hearty vote of thanks brought the lecture to a close, when it was agreed to ask Mr. Campbell to judge the pair show on Feb. 10th. He kindly consented to do so. Two new members were proposed.—J. DOES SHE CARRY THE EGG IN HER MOUTH?

A Problem of the Mysterious Cuckoo.

Sir,—I think the enclosed correspondence, which has just appeared in the "Gloucester Citizen," will interest readers of CAGE BIRDS. The letters explain themselves.

A. E. WASLEY.

Doubting the Cinematograph.

Sir,—Doubtless many of your readers have seen the very interesting film at Northgate Street, depicting the habits of the Cuckoo and Sedge Warbler. May I be allowed to say the pictures given are excellent, but the explanatory notes are not equally satisfactory. More particularly I wish to point out that many ornithologists believe the Cuckoo lays her egg in the nest of another bird, and altogether decline to accept the information given at the Theatre de Luxe, viz., that the egg is first deposited on the ground, afterwards being carried in the mouth of the Cuckoo and placed in a suitable nest. Some few years ago a lengthy correspondence regarding this very thing appeared in the Fancy Press, and my friend, Mr. George Davis, of this city—himself no mean authority on British birds—took a leading part in the discussion arguing that the Cuckoo could not possibly carry the egg as suggested, and with this view I certainly agree.

A. J. BARNES.

An Answer in the Affirmative.

Sir,—I have not had the pleasure of seeing the pictures relating to the habits of the Cuckoo at the Theatre de Luxe, but according to my personal experience I should say they are perfectly correct. As to the bird not being able to carry its egg to the nest of another bird, it is not only possible, but quite simple, as the egg is very small considering the size of the bird, and they have been found smaller than the largest specimens taken from the nests of the Wagtail, the Pipit, or Robin; but as a general rule they are slightly larger than a Robin's egg. A friend of mine, a few years back, found a Cuckoo's egg in a Robin's nest which was built in a small hole in a wall, where there was only just room for the Robin to get in and out; which shows that it was quite impossible for a bird the size of the Cuckoo to lay its egg in the nest, and which points conclusively that the egg was placed there by the beak of the bird. There are no fewer than seventy-eight species on which Madam Cuckoo has conferred the privilege of rearing her offspring, but her first preference is for the Hedge Sparrow, and her second for the Pied Wagtail or Titlark, and the nests of these birds are generally built in a quite impossible position for a bird the size of the Cuckoo to lay her egg directly into the nest. Graham says: "No doubt you would like to see the Cuckoo actually place the egg there, and with patience you may succeed in doing so. The first point is to keep the hens well under observation. Cock birds are very easily seen, since they are showy, restless, noisy creatures, ever flying from one tree to another, and giving out their clear, familiar cry. But the females are shy and quiet. There is no difficulty in recognising them, however, as they are exactly like the males, except they are hardly so big. Much of their time is spent lurking by the roots of trees, the sides of plantations, covers, and similar places. By keeping an eye on any one you may chance to meet, it is just possible that she may be seen laying her egg on the ground and taking it up in her beak to deposit it in some nest chosen for the purpose.

ERNEST G. POWELL.

The Lay Direct.

Sir,—Re letter from A. J. Barnes, it may interest him to know that both myself and my wife have had the pleasure and perhaps unique experience of watching the Cuckoo lay its egg in a small bird's nest after first turning the small eggs out.

W. CARTER.

A Change of Opinion.

Sir,—The Rev. Basil Edwards, Rector of St. Aldgate's, very kindly called yesterday to tell me that the late Dr. Grant, of Chaxhill, found the egg of a Cuckoo in the roadway there, and that he actually saw the bird carry the egg in its mouth to a nest wherein he also saw it. My congratulations to you, sir. One letter in the "Citizen" has, to my mind, brought reliable information and cleared up a much-debated point, which the correspondence in the Fancy Press that I spoke of failed to do. My apology to the Theatre de Luxe management.

Two Societies Which Should Be One.

So Says a Darlington Correspondent.

Sir,—I think it is time that the two societies were coming together in Darlington and making one real good society. It would be as strong as any in the North. There is nothing in the way. Fancy forty or fifty fanciers in a town running two societies, and always troubling business people for specials, etc. As far as I can remember, it was in 1906 when there was held here one of the best one-day shows in the North—record entries (not far short of 600) and a record gate. Look at the last show held in Darlington; there was not half the entries.

BROWNEY.

The Secrecy of the Ballot.

An Item from Ireland.

Sir,—Appended is a copy of a requisition duly sent to Mr. Holley on Jan. 29. I have heard such a lot of grumbling lately from members regarding the manner in which previous annual elections have been carried out that for the welfare of the society it is necessary that the said resolution should be passed. At previous elections, notwithstanding that the envelopes were marked "Ballot Paper," they (the envelopes) were opened some days prior to the date of annual general meeting. This is not voting by ballot, and if the society is to go ahead, this practice must cease. I am confident if this resolution is carried that it will be the means of creating better comradeship and loyalty amongst the members. I trust all the members will give this matter the attention it deserves.

A Rook's Narrow Escape from Drowning.

Sir,—The following will no doubt interest my fellow readers. The account was submitted by a correspondent to the "Bath Herald": Apropos of the drowning season, I witnessed an incident just recently which looked at one time as though it was going to end in tragedy. Cycling along the grass by the river, in the Newton meadows, I came rather suddenly upon two large Rooks having a bath in a shallow at the edge of the river. Their only means of escape was by flight across the stream. This they essayed to do, and one of them by tremendous effort, just succeeded in getting across. His companion, however, was not so fortunate. His feathers were very wet, and he lacked buoyancy, with the consequence that after struggling most desperately to keep himself aloft, his strength failed him, and down he came flop into the river. There he floated with only just his head and beak above water. Thinking his career was about to terminate I dismounted, and stood at a respectful distance to see the end. In this, however, I was mistaken; he evidently believed that while there is life there is hope. A mere human would probably have succumbed to what he would consider the inevitable, but this fellow was of a different calibre. He was a Rook of resource, so to speak, and instead of pining over his pitiless predicament, he set about to discover means of escape. He surveyed the situation calmly, but rapidly, and seemed to come to the conclusion that time, as the lawyers say, is the essence of the contract. About 30 feet away towards the opposite side of the stream, his keen eye detected a small stick—part of a submerged tree—projecting a few inches above the water, and his fertile brain seemed to be reasoning at high pressure thus: "My wings are obviously quite useless for the purpose for which they were intended, but if I could manage to convert them into temporary paddles, I might be able to propel myself across to that stick, my only place of salvation from an ignominious death." Translating his thoughts into actions, he succeeded after a great many frantic flappings with his now quite submerged wings, in reaching his place of refuge, and I had the satisfaction of seeing the brave fellow climb on to his perch, where he remained quietly until dry enough to fly away and join his companion.

Two Well-known Mules Go Astray from Hemsworth Show.

Sir,—I was an exhibitor at the Hemsworth Show on Saturday last. My exhibits were a yellow Greenie Mule, winner Scottish National, Sunderland, and several other shows; also a yellow Siskin-Canary Mule, a winner at Bathgate, Glasgow, etc. As these birds failed to reach me by 5 p.m. Monday, I wired Mr. Gillings, the secretary, as to when sent off. His reply was: "Birds despatched 8 p.m. Saturday night via Wakefield." But up to time of writing there is no trace of them, further than the L. and Y. Railway Company's way bill. The birds evidently went astray after leaving Wakefield. Should they have been wrongly delivered with other exhibits from the show, I shall be glad if the present holder of the birds would kindly forward them on to me. The basket (two-cage size) had my address fixed inside as well as the show label outside. As I shall claim on the railway company for full value, detention of the same by anyone found in possession may incur police proceedings. It would save trouble and expense to all parties if the birds were returned at once. They were entered for the Palace Show. The Greenie Mule was in a bow top, sliding front cage, and the Siskin in a box pattern, Scotch style, sliding front, cage, enamelled light green. If they should meet the eyes of any fellow-fancier, I shall be glad of information as to their whereabouts.

A Friend Wanted at York.

Sir,—I am a lover of birds, and should be only too pleased to meet with a birdy friend, as I am very lonely and miserable, the reason being that I have no companion to go walks with—am always by myself. I should be very pleased to meet a gentleman (or lady). I am twenty-six years of age, tall and dark. The Editor has my address. I saw a case of this sort mentioned a few weeks ago in CAGE BIRDS for the benefit of a fancier.

"Give Me Water, Please."

A Help to Birds Travelling by Rail.

Sir,—I occasionally find birds coming by rail are dead on arrival, or they die soon after arrival, and I verily believe want of water is the cause. It is an old adage that "necessity is the mother of invention"; I have recently introduced a method of supplying water to the birds, and as I get many useful and helpful hints from the columns of your journal, I should like to explain my method to such of your readers as care to adopt it. In the end of the box I bore a hole, say, a ¾in. hole. Inside the box, and just under the hole, I fix a drinking tin in such a manner that it cannot be upset. I fill the tin with water and a few pieces of bread to hold the moisture. Then I fix a label on the outside—just above the hole—bearing the words: "Give me water, please."

A Dispute Concerning a British Bird Cup.

Sir,—I am glad to notice Mr. F. J. Wickham publicly states that he is satisfied I have complied with the rules governing the cup competition; therefore, as such is the case, I should like to know why he raised the protest when it was absolutely unnecessary? I must take exception to his statement that I said "I had done it before and was prepared to prove it." This I absolutely deny, and did so at the meeting I attended. This statement was made by the Kent County Secretary, when he wrote to Mr. Wickham giving him my reasons for objecting to the action of the Headquarter Committee, and was never made by me at all. A copy of this letter as sent to Mr. Wickham was read at the meeting, and I contradicted the portion which contained this statement. The secretary then said it was evidently a misunderstanding on his part, and I have since received a letter from him stating that he had advised Mr. Wickham that the statement was unfounded. Well, now, why does Mr. Wickham try to make use of reports he knows to be false? Further on in his letter he states that I am an experienced fancier, and surely ought not to consider it fair to nominate in selling classes. My answer to that is that every class (whether selling or otherwise) not barred by the rules of the competition is open for the nomination of exhibits, and therefore the points obtained in those classes, however small, are eligible to count. He also says that at Canterbury classes were provided for Linnet, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, or Bullfinch, and A.O.V. Finch, and that I could have entered in any of these and competed for the cup. Does he know what birds I possess? And, if so, am I to be instructed by him as to which class I shall enter in, or do I still retain the exhibitor's privilege—that of pleasing myself? I also notice that to make his own point a little more pronounced, he still surmises that the bird put in the selling class, being nominated, is bound to win, because of its nomination. Every exhibitor knows different to that, because no matter what the class is, the exhibitor has to abide by the judge's decision. I am firmly of the opinion that had my bird only have got a v.h.c. instead of a third, and thereby made my aggregate two points less (which would have been one under his total) we should never have received any protest, and the matter would never have cropped up. He is quite in order to make a proposition for a new rule, or for any existing rule to be altered, to deal with this matter, at the annual general meeting, but under no circumstances can any rule governing a competition be altered till such time. Then, as a finale, he says "I know the rules do not mention selling classes, and if it was intended that fanciers could nominate in selling classes, the Club would have put it in the rules." Well, does it not also apply that if it was intended that fanciers should not be allowed to nominate in selling classes, the Club would also have put this in the rules? This particular point is the very backbone of my argument, and, as I have said before, I have competed strictly in accordance with the rules laid down; and am not dealing with "what might be" or "what ought to be," but with "what actually is."

L. A. BRETT.

Sir,—Having read in your two previous issues letters appearing under the above heading, I think the argumentative powers of the merest novice should be sufficient to convince Mr. Brett that he has always been treated with justice by the Headquarters Committee of the Kent County C.B.A., and that his contention as to gaining the highest number of points fails in face of facts. I would point out that, providing his exhibit was admissible, by the new rule of last year he is non-suited, as that states that points shall not count where there is but one competitor. No other members of the Kent County C.B.A. having nominated in this 15s. selling class, how could such points stand and count towards the cup? During my career as a fancier, it has to my knowledge been generally understood that selling classes were not competitive.

From Bradford and District to the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—Those desirous of spending a full day in London on Feb. 3 will be glad to hear that I have received information that the Midland Railway are running a day trip, starting from the Midland Station (Bradford) at 10.45 p.m., Friday, Feb. 2, due to arrive at 5.40 a.m., Saturday. This train will stop at Shipley 10.53 p.m., Apperley 10.59, Newlay 11.7, Kirkstall 11.11, Armley, 11.17, and Leeds 12.5 midnight. Thus passengers by this train will have a good eighteen hours' stay in London, as the return train does not depart from St. Pancras until 12.5 midnight on Saturday. There is ample time for sight-seeing, and also a lengthy stay at the Palace Show. The return fare is 12s. Bookings for three and four days can be made at 17s., and 20s. for six days. Fanciers travelling by this train would be well advised to ask for Mr. Turner, the district superintendent, at the Midland Station, and if he is there he will see to their getting a comfortable compartment for the journey.

Will Hen Hawfinches Breed in Captivity?

The writer fails; but thinks it can be done.

Sir,—Several years ago I tried the hen Hawfinch in various ways in a large cage in an outhouse, and I will now give you my experience of both male and female Hawfinches from a breeding point of view. Some ten years ago I had a very nice pair of Hawfinches which I thought I would try and breed from, as they were at that time somewhat rare; in fact, very few were kept in cages, and they were difficult then to get. These birds, when I had them, had recently been caught, and were very wild. After keeping them some time in a cage indoors, I turned them out loose in a large shed with a net-worked door. I placed large branches of evergreens and some oak branches with the leaves on them in pots and pails. I also supplied some faggots, which I raised up in each corner with some ivy stuck in to cover them partly, as I thought this would induce them to nest. I supplied them with moss, dry grass, roots, and other material for building purposes, and I also put in several Greenfinches and other nests in the faggots. I supplied them with canary, hemp, rape, and sunflower seeds, and, when the season was in, green shelled peas. But after all the pains I had taken I could not get them to make any sign of building, although their mates (a pair of Greenfinches) did build, and brought up their young, which I thought would have helped to bring the Hawfinches on. As I could not do anything with them the first year, I thought I might do better the next year, so I kept them on, but could never do any good with them as breeders, and in the end I parted with them. About four years ago, when Hawfinches began to get more plentiful, and were "all the go" as cage birds for showing purposes, I tried two hens for Hybrids. Both were out of doors in large cages, made out of bacon boxes. I put plenty of evergreens in and several nest boxes. One was up with a cock Greenfinch, and they were on good terms with each other; but they made no signs of nesting. Neither would she lay. The other hen I had up with a cock Bullie, quite on the off chance, as I had no other bird then that I could put up with it. The cage was similar to the other one, so there was plenty of room. For this pair I put in several nests, also roots and fibres, so as to tempt the Bullie to build. But I could not get them to make any attempt to build, and gave them up as a bad job. These birds were wild caught ones. The results might perhaps have been different if I could have had hand-reared birds. I am still of the opinion that they can be bred with, although I do not think anyone has yet bred with them. I should advise anyone giving them a trial (on the hen side) to do so in a large outdoor aviary, where there would be plenty of room. I intend to return to this bird again shortly, and have another try in various ways if I can get hand-reared birds. I should by all means advise anyone interested in Hybrid breeding to try and get this bird to cross. Probably the likeliest bird to use would be the cock Greenfinch. Perhaps some of your numerous readers may know of someone who has been successful in breeding with the hen Hawfinch or even getting eggs from her, which is something on the high road to success.

We were again successful in enrolling two new members, Messrs. J. Hickman and C. Newhall. Thanks must be given all the clubs affiliated for their assistance. The novel guessing competition promoted by Mr. J. Pearson was an interesting affair, a large number entering. A number of peas were sealed in a small bottle, and at 9 p.m. were opened before Messrs. Barnes, Topping, Everett, Coates, Milligan, and Wilson. The winner was Mrs. Kelly (Salford, who gave 197, which proved the actual number, winning the cage. The funds will certainly be aided by the results. Members' show for Linnets will take place on Feb. 4, at 7.15 (entrance fee as agreed); field or house-moulted birds. Judge, Mr. J. Bird (Hulme). Next contest, Leigh, Feb. 3; all members are asked to support it. Members are invited to post there contributions to me if unable to come to next meeting; fanciers invited.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual members' pair show held January 20th, Sydney Arms, when a record number of pairs was staged. The quality was splendid allround and gave the judge (Mr. J. H. Payne) some work to sort out the winners. Norwich made the biggest section. Mr. Stevens introduced some unique Hybrid classes. The Border Fancy is finding more devotees in this district, and some very typical pairs were staged, both in the champion and novice sections. The attendance was very fair, and we are pleased to see the ladies taking more interest in the shows. Amongst the visitors we noticed Mrs. Madagan, Mrs. A. E. Smith, Mrs. Maconechy, and the popular President (Mr. W. Theobald). Mr. Grant proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Payne for judging; this was seconded by Mr. J. Hands. In replying, Mr. Payne congratulated the Society on the size (between 70 and 80 pairs), and quality of the show.

BUCKHAVEN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Show held Free Gardeners' Hall, Jan. 27th. There was a nice classification, and some noted exhibitors turned out good teams. Border Fancy competition was very keen. Mr. Goodfellow (Edinburgh) judged, and got through in fine time. The following office bearers are all genuine fanciers: President, Mr. D. Henderson; vice-president, Mr. R. Thomson; treasurer, Mr. A. Duncan; secretary, Mr. R. Hazzard; auditors, Messrs. G. Fotheringham and W. Foster. In such a fine district as this the membership might easily be doubled. The hall is one of the best in Fife for a cage bird show, having grand light and lots of room for a big show.

First show held at Gregg's Cafe, Dec. 26th and 27th. There were 20 birds on exhibition, among them being some of the noted winners at Crystal Palace, Alnwick, Blaydon, Newcastle, and Gateshead. For a first attempt the show reflected great credit upon the members, and promised exceedingly well for the future. Quality was exceedingly good, and the display was indeed educating and interesting. The secretarial duties were carried out by Mr. R. P. Fox, very ably assisted by Messrs. Hunter, Bertram, Wilson (Tynemouth), Newton (Wellington Quay), McVay, Thompson, Heather, J. N. SPRINGBURN, POSSIL-PARK AND DIS. C.B.C.

This old club, which had been defunct for some time, came to life again early this year, and has blossomed out into a vigorous and healthy condition. Enthusiasm is the key-note that has been struck, and the result of that was a highly creditable show, and that too from a very small membership. Some 28 members are on the roll, and when 300 odd birds of merit are staged—well, that speaks for itself as to their enthusiasm. Long may it continue. The management have every reason to be proud of their venture. A rare lot of Norwich, Crests, Borders, Yorks., and British were on view, and competition was keen. Mr. J. Sneaton (Musselburgh) judged Nor. and Crests, and Mr. M. Craig (Glasgow) Yorks., Borders, and Wild Birds; and their awards were well received.

WEST BROMWICH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Sixth annual members' show, held Dartmouth Hotel, Jan. 13th. There was a good response in Norwich and British, but Yorks. were a failure in point of numbers, only one member showing in champion classes. Crest and Crestbreds were champion, and in this section was found the best bird in show, a grand unflighted C.B. Novice classes, although not supported as they should have been, contained some good birds, and a great improvement in type and quality on past shows; this is as it should be, and we hope the novices will give their support to the classes when put on, and encourage the committee to do greater things for them. That well-known and respected fancier, Mr. F. J. Weaver (Wolverhampton) placed the cards, and was happy in his selections. Winners of specials: Messrs. Collier (best Nor. and others), Andrews (Yorks.), Welch (Brit.), Sadler (novice Nor. and others), Stokes (novice Yorks.), Groves (best bird), Capewell (Brit. and Mule), Taylor (runner up). Some well-known fanciers and friends dropped in during the evening, and we must vote the show a success.

THATTO HEATH (St. Helens).

A very successful members' show was held Jan. 20, when nearly 90 birds were exhibited in the large, well lighted Bowling Pavilion, adjoining the Railway Hotel. The birds looked their best. A grand lot of Norwich and Norwich Greens led the way. There were some nice Yorks., though not so numerous as one would like to have seen. Borders were very neat and pretty, and British birds were a very nice lot. Some good special prizes, in addition to other prizes, made competition more attractive. Mr. McDonald, chairman, and Mr. R. Tyson, hon. sec., had the show nicely arranged, and there was a capital attendance, including a good sprinkling of well-known fanciers from surrounding districts. Mr. C. Houlton judged, and his awards met with approval.

WARRINGTON.

Annual members' show, held Blue Bell Show Room, New Year's Day, when about 80 birds were staged, including some really good birds. Mr. Baxter had quite a field day in Yorks. Mr. Nelson also put down some fine exhibits. Brit. birds were a grand lot. The secretary, Mr. Nelson, had everything to fine order. We were sorry to hear of the illness of Mr. Knowles, the worthy chairman, and we trust he will soon be convalescent. We were informed that a profit of £6 10s. was made on the open show, which was indeed pleasant news. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe judged, and his awards were well received.

YEOVIL.

That the entry at the show of the Yeovil Fur and Feather Society was not larger was due no doubt to the meagre manner in which the event was advertised. In these days of hustle committees need to realise more than ever that the power of advertising is great. Had our Yeovil friends realised it there can be no doubt that their show in the Skating Rink on Jan. 25th would have been much more successful. As it was, the entry was fairly good, and the quality well up to the average, especially in Norwich and British. Most of the Yorkies were in poor feather. Borders made a nice show, but the majority of the exhibits were rather too chubby. Messrs. Priddle and F. Abbott made a good pair of secretaries, and they were ably assisted by a most excellent committee. Mr. C. A. House judged.

BARRINGTON & CHOPPINGTON DIS. C.B.S.

Annual Show, held at Social Club, Choppington Station, December 23rd. It was one of the best shows ever held since the Fancy was taken up in the district. The exhibits were something out of the ordinary for a local show, as most of the exhibits were birds that have been holding their own against all comers at the shows round the district. One bird in particular, a Yellow Norwich cock, belonging to Mr. T. Dixon, was the admiration of all; it was, to use the words of the judge, the best bird he had seen for some years. The classes were well filled; in fact, the 22 classes averaged from 15 to 24 birds each, and we are confident the committee will have to use the room adjoining the lecture hall for their next show. The arrangements for staging were perfect, and the lighting of the room was excellent. Great credit is due to the secretary, Mr. T. Griffiths and his able assistants, Messrs. J. Douglas, Paxton, and Woollett. The show was patronised by a large number of visitors, and we are given to understand that a good list of prize money will be handed over to the successful exhibitors at the annual supper on January 30th. Judging was by Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead), and his awards gave every satisfaction.

Bunn, carried out the management in fine style, everything being in apple-pie order. Mr. G. Marshall judged, and his awards were well received.

CHIRNSIDE.

Thirty-first annual show, held Volunteer Hall, January 1st. The hall is a good one, being well lighted from sides and top. The cage birds were staged at the south end, being well protected from draughts. The entry was much the same as last year, but quality was better, in Borders especially, this district being a hot-bed for the variety. Mr. J. Patterson, junr., won the cup and B.F.C.C. medal with a jaunty and beautiful even marked buff hen; he won special for most points likewise. Mr. A. Shiell is still the man at the helm, and, as usual, made an ideal secretary, being helped by a willing lot of stewards in Messrs. R. Fergusson, W. Denholme, J. Young and G. White. Mr. J. Watson (Selkirk) judged in his usual careful way, and left no room for grumbling.

PARKSTONE (Dorset).

First annual open show, held Skating Rink, Jan. 26th. The hall is an excellent place for a show; it has good top light, and is commodious. Considering the unfortunate state of the weather the show was well attended. The classes were well arranged, under the management of Messrs. Fair and Percy, assisted by an energetic committee, foremost amongst whom in the cage bird section we particularly noticed Mr. H. Matthews, who was constantly on the alert, giving assistance and information to those present. We were agreeably surprised to find birds of such excellent quality, some rare good specimens being staged from exhibitors at a distance as well as locally. Mr. Martin Cook placed the awards.

OVER, WINSFORD.

This society has very recently been formed, and fills a long felt want in this district, in order to accommodate cage bird men all on their own. Formerly cage bird fanciers had to be content with showing at mixed shows. This show, held Jan. 13th, the first we hope of a long series of successful shows, received over 100 entries, which must be counted quite a success. Quality and type were very level and even in Yorks., especially the yellows; and here the best bird in show was found, a very smart yellow cock. Norwich were of nice type, but not quite so strong as Yorks. Try and work them up, boys, for there is room for plenty more good Nor. in your midst. Hybrids were led by a nice Goldie-Greenie, in very nice condition. The British classes were very good indeed for a members' show, and both the Goldfinch and Linnet classes were better than at many open shows. A very fine lot of special prizes were offered, which made competition well worth while. Mr. Brooks is just the right sort of man for secretary, and he knows the work to a T. If the members will keep him, and work with him, a good future is in store for them. The "Darley" Auction Rooms are well adapted for a show, having good light; and 400 or 600 birds could be staged if required. The light was good, and Mr. C. Houlton, who judged, got through in fine time.

MILNGAVIE, BEARSDEN

Annual show held Jan. 27th. The Masonic Hall, in which the exhibits were staged, although fairly good for light, was taxed beyond its capabilities, and the management, who are all keen fanciers, would be well advised to be on the look-out for greater accommodation and secure a more suitable hall for their next show, when they might manage (with the help of a little judicious advertising in their favourite bird organ, CAGE BIRDS) to acquire as many cage bird entries as made up their total this year. There is nothing to hinder this, and it is certainly worth a trial; at least, we are inclined to think so, when we consider how pleased and willing Mr. McNicol the secretary seemed, when dealing with every detail so minutely that the most scrutinising eye could not fail to be satisfied to leave their pets in his charge, and the success of the show in a great measure is due to his devoted and untiring efforts. In coping with the work, the services of president, Councillor McMillan, vice-president, Mr. D. W. Brown, and the committee, Messrs. Frame, Henderson, Rodger, Waddell, J. D. McMillan and Leitch were of great value. Entries were much the same as in previous years. As an additional feature the management had obtained the use of a gramophone, and had acquired the services of a famous ventriloquist, with a view to drawing the crowds. Mr. C. Campbell (Glasgow) adjudicated in the cage bird section, and got through his work in fine time. We failed to hear any grumble about his awards.

AN EXCELLENT SHOW AT HEMSWORTH.

Second annual show held January 27. A very fine club room, attached to the "King's Head" Hotel, was kindly lent for the occasion free by the "old sport," and past time Yorkshire cricketer, Mr. T. Tait, the proprietor. Mr. H. Middleton decorated the benches in a most admirable manner with lovely foliage of a very pleasing order, certainly adding to the attraction. The entry was in advance of last year's, and the quality was superb, especially in the British and Mule sections. President Mr. T. Tait is the right man in the right place; he is generous, and has the interests of the society at heart. The vice-president is Mr. A. Taylor, also of the right mettle. Treasurer, Mr. A. Davis; committee, Messrs. J. J. Slack, W. Brown, J. Hall, T. Kelsey, A. Brookes, C. Lord, H. E. Gillings, T. Doodey, J. Edmondson, G. Wyatt, J. Govier, and T. W. Kemp, who deserve every praise. Mr. J. W. Gillings makes a capital secretary, and a better controller no society could require. He has everything at his finger tips. Judging was over in nice time, and cards displayed promptly by willing stewards in Messrs. Brown, Hall, Lee, Slack, and Woodall. Mr. Hawkes' exhibits did not arrive until 2 p.m. (from Leytonstone), too late for judging; hard lines. Special for best cock (members'), Mr J. Edmondson; best hen, ditto, best novice, Mr. A. Brookes; best nat. col., Mr. Ball. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and his awards were well received.

ARNISTON AND GOREBRIDGE.

Annual show of cage birds, etc., held 26th Jan. The entry was a bit disappointing, owing probably to Bathgate Show being held on the same date. No doubt another year the officials will see that they have a clear date. Also may we suggest a slightly better classification, as there are plenty of good Border Fancy exhibitors in and around this district who could make this show a great success. Mr. J. I. Mackie (Gorgie) judged, and his awards were well received. In Mr. J. Lamble the Society possess a good fancier, courteous and obliging, and ably backed up by a good working committee.

GLENDARE HOUSE,
LIDGET GREEN,
BRADFORD, YORKS.

January 25th, 1912.

"It is with pleasure that I write to tell you I received the book 'Our Canaries' in splendid condition. I cannot find words to adequately express my appreciation. I have looked through this exquisite volume, which is a fine achievement, a production worthy of the best praise one can bestow upon it. I have no hesitation in saying that this book far exceeds what the most imaginative mind could have anticipated (except the few of the inner circle who have actually been engaged in its compilation). Although it is a most difficult task to single out any one person for special praise in the production of so magnificent a work, I feel it my duty to say that all praise is due to our esteemed friend, Claude St. John, for the ability displayed by him in the compilation of such a wonderful book and to the practical skill and artistic taste displayed by our champion artist, H. Norman, for the superb productions from his brush are more than my pen can justly describe. These magnificent coloured plates, thirty-two in number, should be seen by every fancier, for they are truly an education in themselves."

THOS. BENNETT.

We are certain you will do if you purchase a copy of the great STANDARD work of all time.

'OUR CANARIES'

are dealt with in this superb volume. For the first time in the history of bird-keeping the canary-keeper has before him a work which deals with one bird only—the Canary. Every aspect of the canary cult is explained in a thoroughly practical, authoritative, and exhaustive manner. No point has been considered too small to be overlooked, and every canary keeper, whether he keeps a single bird for song or a roomful for exhibition, will find in its pages some information that he has been looking for for years. Expert breeders and exhibitors lucidly explain the methods they have found bring them the highest measure of success in the breeding, rearing, management and exhibiting of the variety in which they are justly famous. No matter what variety he keeps, a fancier, to be right up-to-date, must purchase this astonishing and unique volume.

Written by CLAUDE St. JOHN, assisted by many of the leading breeders and exhibitors of the day. Edited by C. A. HOUSE and G. E. WESTON.

THIS GREAT STANDARD WORK CAN BE PURCHASED BY ALL.

For 1/- cash or other payments as in our special offer below we will forward this phenomenal book Carriage Paid.

CANARIES ONLY

Thirty-two magnificently executed coloured plates, by the leading Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, depicting every known variety of the canary are bound up in this volume. These exquisite plates, together with 32 Art Plates and innumerable pen and ink sketches of aviaries, cages, methods of handling, washing, etc., constitute some of the finest work Mr. Norman has ever produced. They enhance the value of the letterpress a thousandfold, for by their help the reader is able to form a complete idea of what a STANDARD BIRD should be like, the points to aim at, and those to avoid when pairing up, or selecting for exhibition, etc. Wherever a sketch would be helpful and explanative there one has been placed. Altogether they assist in forming a work which must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated.

This astounding work will Stand for all time as the greatest monument ever erected on behalf of the Canary.

It Tells You Everything

you will ever want to know about the breeding, rearing, and keeping in healthy condition of your songsters. You will never be at a loss if you own and use this one book. If it is a question of mating, pairing, sitting, hatching, rearing, feeding, feeding or breeding for colour, care of plumage, cages, nests, or aviaries, pedigree or line breeding—the answer is certainly here. And this book also gives you magnificent plates, carefully coloured according to nature, which are not merely ornamental, but are of practical value in showing you exactly what to breed to. For these pictures show the standard types of prize birds to-day. This one compact book covers the whole ground. You will never need another work of reference as long as you live. It is absolutely up-to-date, and it teaches you everything there is to learn.

About Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds

of every description. The valuable section "On the Breeding of Hybrids from two British Birds" not only tells you what has been done in this interesting field of experimental practice, but it gives a suggestive list of the crosses yet to be secured; also detailed instructions for the management of Hybrids; and its use will enable many—who have not hitherto succeeded in producing results for the time and money they have expended on their cage birds—to secure some of the rare and so far unachieved crosses here cited as worthy of experimental attention by the scientific breeder.

Some of the Plates, exquisitely coloured according to Nature, and showing the Fancier exactly what to breed to.

CINNAMON CANARIES (three lovely specimens in an Aviary).
NORWICH CANARIES (three specimens).
LANCASHIRE CANARIES (two specimens).
YORKSHIRE CANARIES (four specimens).
BRITISH FINCHES (four specimens).
THRUSH, BLACKBIRD, Etc. (three specimens).
BORDER FANCY CANARIES (four specimens).
LIZARD CANARIES (three specimens).
WARBLERS (four specimens).
WOODPECKER, BUNTING, Etc. (four specimens)
LARK, WAGTAIL, PIPIT, Etc.

Thirty-Four Coloured Plates in all.

Appreciation!

MR. BARKER (of East Ham) writes:—
"'Canaries and British Birds' safely. I am well satisfied with the book; I think there is as much here as anyone could wish to know. I will recommend it to my fellow mates."

MR. WINKNY (Belfast):—
"I am much pleased with the books."

MR. CROSSLAND (Todmorden):—
"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your volume, with which I am highly pleased."

MR. McLINDEN (Dublin):—
"I have been much interested in your beautiful book; it should be in the possession of every lover of songsters. I think it will commend itself not only to the past master in bird-keeping, but will be invaluable to the amateur, since it is written in such simple language as to be easily understood. The chapters on Rearing, Pairing, and Cage-making are very explicit, and the coloured plates are to my mind simply superb, while the other illustrations are all that could be desired."

MR. CADDEN (Londonderry):—
"I received your handsome book, and am delighted with it."

PRIDE OF PLACE

in the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent 'Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield; Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes, and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Honiton; Dec. 15. Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—"17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, B. Brooks."—"70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland. Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—"48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 6. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note, I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

THE YORKSHIRE BREEDERS'

Society are genuine breeders, who have previously supplied birds to all the leading exhibitors and dealers of Bradford and district. Our object is to deal fairly and honestly direct with other breeders, thereby saving the middlemen's profits, which means better value for money; also information as to how the birds are bred, which is a vital point in pairing to breed winners. Our honest dealings are already widely known, and our reputation stands unrivalled. Don't be misled by exaggerated statements, but apply direct to bona fide and reliable breeders, who can supply breeding sets (cock and 2 hens) from 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, upwards; pairs from 8/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-; hens from 4/-; exhibition birds reasonable. Cages, 3d. extra. Approval, cash or deposit. Address: "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

RECORD SUCCESSES.

Jas. Bailey has won for three years in succession the Shackleton Thirty-guinea Challenge Trophy and the Naylor Challenge Trophy, each with the highest number of points scored by the three highest birds at Yorkshire Canary Club shows, also "Cage Birds" prize for the most points with four highest birds, and Ramsden's Colour Food Prize for the most points scored at Yorkshire Union shows. To accomplish the above this season I have made 144 entries, and have won 31 firsts, whilst my nearest opponents exhibited 251 birds to win 22 firsts. This tells where the quality is to be found, and it is quality, not quantity, that counts. Those wishing to buy should note these facts. At the great national show held at Bradford I won the Challenge Rose Bowl for the best young bird in the show bred by the exhibitor.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT.

At the Bradford National Show my famous yellow Cinnamon-marked cock did what no other bird of his variety has been known to do before—he won the diploma for the best Cinnamon-marked and also for the best bird in the show. I have a large number of Yorkshires for sale at prices to suit all pockets. They are strong and healthy, bred from the best birds in the Kingdom, and are certain to give satisfaction: Jas. Bailey, 46, South View-terrace, Sandy-lane, Allerton, Bradford.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Feb. 1; chairman, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson. As the balance sheet and secretary's report were not ready owing to some small accounts not being collected, the general business was not gone into, and this will be done at the adjourned meeting on Oct. 15th. Meeting was not advertised in the Press as usual, owing to this, but still a lot of members turned up. In fact, many more than at the January meeting. The show date was fixed for October 18 and 19 instead of 25 and 26, as moved at last meeting. Judges were selected on condition they could take the 18th date, and we shall publish their names after hearing their replies at next meeting. The radius of 25 miles in appointing judges was removed on Mr. Patterson's motion. Many of our members expressed their keen regret at losing Mr. Shepherd, who has left us to take up a post in London. Before leaving he was made an honorary vice-president for life, and the members intend sending a small token of their esteem to him to his new address. Mr. Shepherd replied in a very nice way, and thanked the members. The following gentlemen were elected members:—Messrs. Gibb, J. R. Watson, and J. Morrison (all of Newcastle). Proposed, that the adjourned meeting be held on Oct. 15, when the usual business will be proceeded with. Members will receive balance sheets and agenda before that date.—J. E. Atkinson, Sec.

MILFORD HAVEN (Wales)

Annual show, held Jan. 25th, in an ante-room of the Masonic Hall, a very comfortable but small place, and not too much light. The management was very good. Entries came up very well, and some grand exhibits were staged. Mr. M. Lewis judged, and his awards were well received.

MANCHESTER, SALFORD (Amalgamated.)

Held Feb. 3, St. Stephen's Schools, Conran Street, There was a good show of amateur and novice members' birds in Nor. and Yorks., but the pride of the show was undoubtedly the British birds and Hybrids. Nearly 250 entries were received. The champion members' Canary classes did not fill; no doubt the weather and the Palace show affected these classes. There were a few very typical Nor. Yorks. were of better class all through. British and Hybirds were fine all round and an excellent Linnet-Bullfinch won special for best in this section. About 30 special prizes were offered. Messrs. Davey and Washbourne worked hard as hon. secs. to make the show a success, and they accomplished their task well. Mr. Tom Harrison judged Nor., Bord., and Selling Classes, and Mr. Chas. Houlton Yorks., Hybrids, British, and Foreign Classes, and their awards were well approved. The light was good, and the hall is very suitable and capable of holding 600 birds.

KELTY AND BLAIR-ADAM C.B.A.

A total entry of 120 birds graced the bench at the club show held January 20th—an increase in number, while the improvement in quality was apparent, many having already won at the leading shows. The show was well patronised by the public, their interest being stimulated by a distribution of 20 birds to those who held tickets, and the show had an animated appearance when the lucky winners were announced. Secretary A. Dickson displayed his usual activity and capability, assisted by a willing staff. President Stenhouse also was "at his usual," which is saying everything. The following judged: Messrs. NANTWICH.

Fifty-first annual show, held Town Hall, Feb. 2nd and 3rd. The support extended this year to this old established fixture was very meagre. The classification was not very extensive, 12 classes being provided, half of which were cancelled. But if poor numerically, the quality of the show was decidedly good, some well-known winners putting in an appearance. Mr. F. Powell was again at the head of affairs, and right well did he maintain his reputation as an efficient manager. Mr. H. Tams judged.

BIGGAR.

Fourth annual show, held 31st January, Wilson's Hall. We had a record entry, 203 exhibits being staged, and quality throughout was exceptionally good for a show confined to a five-mile radius. The hall is an ideal place for a show, being well lighted, and having plenty of room for spectators. Secretary Mr. J. Simpson had everything in good order, and judging was completed and cards up in good time, and being ably assisted by two such hard-working stewards as Messrs. J. C. Graham and H. Clark, everything passed off without a hitch. The Society is favoured with a good list of officers, Mr. J. Shand being president, Mr. R. Murray vice-president, Mr. J. Dobbie treasurer, and Messrs. A. Campbell, T. Kenwick, D. Lawson, H. Clark, and J. Graham. Fine weather favoured the event, and the committee are expecting a balance on the right side. The championship medal went to Mr. J. Aitken for a good yellow Nor. cock, and best British to Mr. J. Shand, with a nice Goldie. Mr. J. Mason (Peebles) judged, and his awards were well received.

FOLKESTONE.

Held Town Hall, Feb. 1. The cage-bird section was a failure, several classes being cancelled, due no doubt to clashing with the Crystal Palace show and to limit of £3. The hall was ideal in every way. Mr. Gambrill (Sec.) as usual had the show well in hand, backed up by a hard-working committee. Mr. Gibbs judged.

TREORCHY.

This fixture was held on February 1, and was fairly well supported in our section. Cage birds were staged in a comfortable room at an adjoining hotel, and not in the Drill Hall, which accommodated the other sections, and which, by the way, was inconveniently crowded. Capable enthusiasts looked well after the needs of the birds, and the cosy room was much appreciated by exhibitors on such a bitterly cold day. The committee withheld many prizes throughout the show. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

NOR. (5): 2, Davies, good even mkd., nice feather and type; 3, Jenkin Bros., loses only in feather and type; vhc, Tompkinson; hc, Rowlands; No. 2, absent. YORKS. (2): 3, Powell; No. 1, Nor., in wrong class MULE OR HYB. (7): 2, Piaster, nice Linnet-Bullie, in fine feather; 3, Buse, dark Goldie-Can.; vhc, Nicholas; hc, Davies; c, Owen. GOLDFINCH, HOUSE-MOULTED (8): 1, c, Ray, grand col. and blaze, in A1 bloom; 2, 3, Nicholas, just lacks the col. and polish of leader, nice one; vhc, M. Davies; hc, J. Davies. GREYPATES (a class of eleven) and LINNETS (a class of nine, and all good ones), unfortunately omitted from catalogue—a printer's error. A.O.S. BRIT. Annual Dinner of the London Cage Bird Association.

Despite Bitterly Cold Weather, a Big Success.—Mr. Crisp, the President, Absent Through Illness.

On Monday, Feb. 5th last, the London Cage Bird Association held their 23rd annual dinner, in the Sheraton Hall, Popular Cafe, Jermyn Street, W. Over a hundred members and friends were present, and the function was a success from every standpoint but one, viz., the much regretted absence, through indisposition, of the exceedingly popular president, Mr. R. L. Crisp. The want of his presence was in some measure, however, atoned for by the presence of Mrs. Crisp and Mr. Crisp, Junr., and by the fact that Mr. Harry Burkett (brother-in-law to Mr. Crisp) presided over the function. A telegram was received from Mr. Crisp, trusting the dinner would be a success, and on the suggestion of the chairman another was sent in reply, wishing him a speedy recovery. A telegram was also received from Mr. T. Miller, regretting his enforced absence.

A substantial repast was provided, the arrangements for which were all that could be desired; and a programme of toasts, music and song was gone through, which for variety, snap and fun it would be difficult to better.

Mr. Harry Burkett proposed the toast of "The King and Royal Family," which was warmly drunk, Mr. P. G. Mortlock singing the first verse of the National Anthem. This was followed by a pianoforte solo by Mr. H. Heap, and songs by Mr. Mortlock and Miss Doris Lee. The toast "L.C.B.A.," was given in glowing terms by the Chairman. Having explained the reason of his presence in the chair, he said that the members of the Association had cause to be proud of the fact that they were one of the leading organisations of the bird Fancy in London and the surrounding districts. The show which they held in November last at the Horticultural Hall he had the pleasure of witnessing. It was a splendid exhibition of birds, and went to prove what a wonderful association they were. He felt sure that with the good membership it had the association must prosper in the future as much as, if not more than, in the past. (Applause.)

After a song by Miss May Windsor, Mr. W. H. Mugford, the popular secretary of the Association, was asked to reply to the toast. The membership of the L.C.B.A., he said, was better than last year's, and whilst he was unable to give figures, they were in about the same position financially as at this time a year ago—something about £70 standing to their credit. With reference to the annual show, the entries, 2,092 in all, represented a great stride; the number of exhibits was, in fact, increasing every year. The success of the exhibition was the result of the combined efforts of the workers on the committee, and to them was due a debt of gratitude both from the chairman, himself and his brother manager, Mr. Tyson (applause).

At this juncture Mrs. Crisp presented the cups won during the season; only two, however, of the winners were present, viz., Messrs. J. Tyson (who won the Crest bowl) and W. H. Mugford (who won the Crest cup), both gentlemen receiving a word of congratulation from Mrs. Crisp, and hearty applause from the audience. Other cups (to be sent to the respective winners) were won by Messrs. H. Knight (Yorkshire cup), E. Godley (the Norwich bowl), Hawes Brothers (the Ayers cup), A. J. A. Marney (the British bird cup), F. Smith (the Easterling cup), and Mons. Pauwels (the Abraham Memorial cup). A handsome cigar case and pipe lay on the table; these it was intended to present to the president (Mr. Crisp), but as he was absent, it was decided to ask Messrs. Tyson, Shepherd and Pickard to wait on him at his house one day during the ensuing week, and present the gift to him there.

Mr. Wilfred Stracey having sung, the chairman called upon Mr. J. Robson to propose the toast of "The Fancy." This he did with a fervour and warmth of sentiment which everyone admired. A response having been made, in Mr. G. E. Weston's absence, by Mr. F. Carl,

The Chairman proposed the toast of "The Ladies and Visitors," giving them a warm welcome in the name of the Association. This was replied to by Mr. Mortlock (Louden), and Mr. H. H. Towers (Keighley) whose names were coupled with the toast. The latter gentleman paid the L.C.B.A. some very nice compliments in true Yorkshire style.

The hearty singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought the proceedings to a close after songs and sketches had been ably rendered by the Misses May Windsor, Doris Lee, and Messrs. W. Montague, J. Treval, C. E. Nott, H. Ruming, W. Deller, W. Stracey, and P. G. Mortlock. The musical programme was under the direction of Mr. Wilfred Stracey, who was greatly helped by Mr. Harry Heap, who accompanied at the piano for the soloists.

Each of the ladies present was the recipient of a beautiful gold brooch, provided by the L.C.B.A. as a souvenir of the dinner, and every gentleman received a box of matches enclosed in a very suitably decorated case; the gifts were much appreciated by all.

Included among those present at the dinner were: Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Trower, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. F. Boxall, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Savage, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Robson, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. THE SOUTHERN NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Annual general meeting held in the Press Room at the Crystal Palace, on February 3, Mr. E. Baker presiding. There were also present Messrs. Newley, Lathuell, Gill, Schneider, Collings, J. Kilby, Geo. Gardner, Rippon, Pavey, J. H. Bellamy, H. Ellis, and F. S. Matthes (hon. sec).

The chairman congratulated the club on the fact that they had not during the past year gone back in popularity or usefulness. He understood they had lost a few members, but others had joined and filled their places. The funds also were in a better position. Mr. Collings had been making a special effort this past year to secure the champion trophy, and success had crowned his efforts. He congratulated him heartily. Personally, he (the chairman) had not much to boast about at the show now on, but if he had not been successful that day, he should try again another year. (Hear, hear.) They should all try and take defeats in as good a spirit as they took their successes. If defeated, one could play the part of an Englishman and come up again.

Mr. Matthes read the balance sheet, which showed a balance in hand of £5 5s., under the altered conditions of closing the accounts, as desired by Mr. Heath, one of the auditors. The club in 1909 were in debt, but in 1910 they had £4 1s. 10d. in hand, and in 1911 they had £5 5s., but with this amount specials will have to be bought after this show at Palace, as the financial year ends Dec. 31 instead of Feb. 28.

Mr. Gill said there were 150 names on the books, but in 1910 only 80 subscriptions were paid. They ought to do something in the matter. Those not paying ought to be "starred," so that members paying would know whom to vote for, and whom not to vote for when the annual election came round.

Secretary pointed out that according to rules they could not erase any member's name from the books. The latter part of the rule applicable to the case handicapped him from doing so. After a lengthy discussion, it was agreed that all paying members be "starred" as such.

A discussion ensued on the initiation of the chairman, as to the attendances of members of the committee, pointing out that if members did not attend they should make room for those who could do so. Several members expressed themselves upon the point, and it was ultimately suggested that the secretary send out forms, giving the business of the committee, so that those unable to be present could vote on the points at issue. This was carried on the motion of Mr. Gill.

The result of the ballot for officers for the ensuing year is as follows:—President, Mr. E. Baker; secretary and treasurer, Mr. F. S. Matthes; auditors, Messrs. T. Heath and J. Robson; committee, Messrs. Richardson, Ramsden, Hodder, Gardner, Hazell, and Godfrey. Result of the provincial committee: Messrs. Collings, W. Ellis, Midgley, Kilby, Rippon, Gill. Mr. Gardner proposed, pursuant to the arrangement at the last annual meeting, that the election of hon. secretary be left in the hands of the committee. Mr. Gill seconded, and it was carried.

Mr. Gill proposed, and Mr. Gardner seconded, that the names of the winners of specials should be printed with the balance sheet, as was done prior to 1907.

A motion by Mr. George, of Swansea, that the £10 10s. cup be competed for triennially in South Wales, was discussed. It was pointed out that the cup conditions could not be altered, as it did not belong to the club altogether, some members having already won it twice, and all winners were entitled to compete for it again under the established conditions. The chairman suggested that secretary be asked to explain to Mr. George that his proposal was impracticable, but to urge upon him to get as many new members to join as he could, and when the arrangement for the cup shows came round to vote for its being held in South Wales. This was agreed to. Votes of thanks to the retiring officers were accorded on the motion of Mr. Pavey, seconded by Mr. Ellis.

A good muster of members attended the supper held Horse and Jockey, January 29th, when a splendid menu was provided by our worthy treasurer, Mr. Justice. After supper our President (Mr. Havenhand) suggested that we purchase two silver cups, thus making the Society own three in number, inclusive of the one presented by Mr. Justice. This motion was proposed by Mr. Webster, seconded by Mr. Exton, and carried unanimously. The remainder of the evening passed very pleasantly in birdie talk with our old friends, Messrs. Browning and Bagnall, and a spirited discussion on our coming "pair show." The evening closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Justice.—W. A. Hailstone, Hon. Sec.

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

On January 27th, Railway Hotel, Mr. F. Hodgson chairman, the annual tea and presentation of prizes were held. The tea was of the very best, and the arrangements were unbeatable. After tea, to which close upon 60 sat down, the social part was about to commence, but a grave incident occurred; the piano player was absent, and the Secretary had a job to find a substitute, but Miss Richmond kindly came forward. The artistes were Mr. Robinson (tenor, Pudsey), Turner (song), Miss Richards (Rodley), Messrs. Hames and L. Hodgson, and several friends. Mr. W. Richmond (Rodley) presented the prizes: Mr. J. Bateman, 1st and medal for most points; Mr. W. B. Swain was presented with a cruet for 2nd most points; Messrs. Padgett and Son, silver medal for 3rd most points; Mr. L. C. Padgett (late chairman), after a short address, was very pleased to second the vote; Mr. Toothill responded.—J. E. Hudson, Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Annual general meeting held Headquarters, 22nd January. During the earlier part of the evening Mr. Bartlett occupied the chair. The secretaries having explained one or two items on the balance sheet, Mr. Skinner proposed that the balance sheet be passed as read. This was seconded by Mr. Cooper and carried unanimously. A letter from Mr. Griffin (one of the auditors) was read, eulogising the secretaries, and expressing satisfaction with the accounts. Letters also read from the hon. assistant secretary (Mr. H. W. Barbridge) regretting the time at his disposal would not allow him to accept office again, and from Mr. Ovenden (hon. treasurer), who, for business reasons, was obliged to tender his resignation. Both gentlemen desired to continue membership. Mr. Skinner proposed a vote of thanks to the retiring officers and committee, making special mention of Messrs. Burbidge and Ovenden; this was seconded by Mr. Mills and carried. Mr. Bartlett at this point vacated the chair, and Mr. S. C. Rhodes was voted into the chair for the remainder of the evening. Mr. Rhodes was asked to accept the presidency of the Association, which he did. Officers for 1912:—President, S. C. Rhodes, Esq.; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. S. Clarke, H. Ovenden, Dr. J. Laird-Simpson, and C. A. House (subject to his approval); chairman, Mr. J. A. Bartlett; vice-chairman, Mr. F. Wallace; hon. treasurer, Mr. G. A. Parker; auditors, Messrs. G. B. Lectair and S. A. Griffin; committee, Messrs. H. W. Burbridge, C. H. Cooper, J. Shankley, W. Dalton, F. Marshall, W. Hellens, R. T. Parr, E. J. Pettet; hon. assistant sec., Mr. A. W. Farmer; hon. secretaries, Messrs. Forse and Son, 31, Thornhill Rd., Leyton, N.E. Messrs. Skinner and P. Smith kindly acted as scrutineers for the committee ballot. Mr. A. W. Farmer proposed a resolution which had for its object the saving of some of the society's funds at present spent on postage. For the benefit of those members who were unable to attend, the resolution was as follows:—"That as a large part of the funds of this association are wasted on postage, for the purpose of notifying the monthly meetings to members who do not take sufficient interest in the association to attend the meetings, in future notice by post shall only be sent for special events, such as shows, etc., and for all other meetings members must refer to their manual or the Fancy Press, where due notice of forthcoming events is always given." To this there was no opposition and the motion was carried. The association was recently very fortunate in acquiring splendid new headquarters, with a large hall capable of holding from 800 to 1,000 birds, the hall being free from draughts, and heated by radiators, and the secretaries announced that the committee had decided to give open classes at the next annual show, also that a guarantee fund had been started to provide against possible loss. This announcement met with general approval, and the guarantee fund was substantially increased. Several members promised to guarantee classes. A proposal by Mr. Bartlett that the arrangement of open classes at annual show be left to the new committee was seconded by Mr. W. Morris and carried. Several new members were nominated.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

GRIMSBY AND CLEETHORPES ROLLER C.C.

General meeting held "Anchor" Restaurant, 119, Cleethorpes Road, January 27th, Mr. Groves in chair. Balance-sheet read showing a profit of £8 8s. on the year's working; this was considered highly satisfactory for the initial year, and will lend zeal to the ensuing one, for which the following officers were elected: President, Mr. D. Robinson; Vice-Presidents all re-elected; Hon. Treas., Mr. J. Young; Hon. Sec., Mr. H. Mason, 6, Gertrude Street, Grimsby; Auditors, Messrs. H. J. Rawcliffe and W. Crooks; Chairman, Mr. J. A. Ives; Vice-Chairman, Mr. J. Staples. Decided, to hold a members' show at club-room, Feb. 24th, following classes provided: Young bird, 1911 rung, and open class; birds to be staged by 3 p.m. A tea and whist drive will follow.—H. Mason, Hon. Sec.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

General meeting held Ablett's Cafe Room, Market-street, Jan. 16th, a record number of members and visitors putting in an appearance. The chairman (Mr. Burns) presided. Our secretary and his assistant were setting everything out for our first night show of the year. Mr. Burns thanked our committee for the assistance given at the various shows, also our members for showing their birds. Our 1st table show brought out 54 birds. Messrs. Moss and Hadwin judged to perfection. Mr. Shaw proposed a hearty vote of thanks to our judges and all retiring officers. He proposed the re-election of all the retiring officers; this was seconded by Mr. Harding and supported by everyone. Mr. Lloyd wanted to retire, but did not get a chance to speak. Mr. Howlett proposed that we have rule books with subs. cards attached; carried unanimously. Mr. Lloyd proposed raising the subs. from 2s. 6d. to 4s. per annum; this caused a lengthy discussion. The proposal was carried. Mr. Moss's (auditor's) report was satisfactory and showed a balance in hand of 4s. 2d. Mr. Jones proposed that we do away with the balance-sheets; seconded by Mr. Howlett, and supported by Mr. Bird. Proposed that our secretary write a balance-sheet out and display it in the club room for our members to see in February and March. Two more shows; this was carried. Secretary would like to know how many would like CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Mr. T. Jones (Rock Ferry) was elected a member.—A. E. Lloyd, Sec.

HAYLE F.A.

Annual dinner held White Hart Hotel, Jan. 25th, when 30 sat down to a fine spread provided by the hostess, Mrs. Griffiths, who catered in her usual first-class style, and the arrangements were excellent in every way. The carving by Messrs. J. Roskrow and R. Bagg added to the success of the dinner and was the subject of much appreciative comment. The chairman proposed the usual toasts, viz., "The King," "President," "Hayle F.A.," "Visitors," "Hostess," etc., each being responded to with musical honours. Mr. J. Roskrow, chairman of the H.F.A., said he was pleased to take the chair at such an interesting gathering, as he had also to make a very pleasing presentation to their worthy secretary (Mr. H. Ware). The chairman spoke in high appreciation of the work of Mr. Ware; in all movements he had shown great enthusiasm for the welfare of one and all, and was more particularly busy for the H.F.A. Addressing Mr. Ware, the chairman said: "It is with my best wishes that I ask you to accept this silver rose-bowl with vases to match, with every feeling of esteem and affection, from the members of the H.F.A." Mr. Ware, who was cordially received, thanked the chairman for what he had said, and one and all for the very beautiful present. Well-known artistes lent success to the evening. Songs were sung by Messrs. P. Oatey, H. Pennery, F. Hill, W. Dale, T. Rowe, E. T. Pearce; a duet by Messrs. F. Hill and H. Ware; gramophone selections by Messrs. S. Maddern and T. H. Richards. A short speech was given by Mr. J. B. James on "Birds and their Nests," and recitations by Messrs. J. Roskrow, S. Maddern, and A. N. Other. Mr. W. Skeat presided at the piano, and it is doubtful whether he has ever been heard to greater advantage.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held 25th January. The chairman (Mr. G. Gardner) presiding, supported by the vice-chairman (Mr. Dann) and almost a full muster of members. The society has had a most successful year, showing a profit on all their shows, and finishing up with a balance in hand of £4 5s. 8d. (the actual balance is something like £6, as several moneys came in during the evening, which should have been credited to annual show). New officers:—Chairman, Mr. G. Gardner; vice-chairman, Mr. R. T. Dann; treasurer, Mr. Fisher; auditors, Messrs. Shearer and Johnston; hon. secretary, Mr. G. Clark, 20, Miranda Rd., St. John's Rd., Highgate, N.; asst. sec., Mr. W. Shakespeare; committee, Messrs. Walmsley, Bush, Cowies, Mitchell, Wills, Law, Hyde, Street, W. Knight, J. Trigger, Shakespeare, and Clark. The retiring secretary thanked all for the support given him during his two years' work. He also tried to impress upon the members the importance of supporting the advertisers in the annual catalogue, as he said the advertisements were a great help, as this year the advertisements had paid the whole of their printing bill with 10s. profit. He also made special mention of CAGE BIRDS, and said the members had a great deal to be grateful for; their success was due in no small measure to this valuable paper, in publishing their notices and splendid reports of their meetings, shows, etc. Secretary also asked members to buy a copy of "C.B." every week, as then they would keep in touch with the doings of their own society and the Fancy generally. Mr. Gardner spoke at some length on the way in which the society had flourished, and trusted members would support the new secretary as they had the old one. Mr. Dann spoke at some length on the loss of the assistant secretary, Mr. Hyde, and said it was a double blow to them to hear that he was resigning office also. Votes of thanks were passed to the officers for their services, and also to their worthy chairman and vice-chairman.—G. Clark, Hon. Sec.

GALASHIELS C.S.

On Jan. 20th the members met to hear the financial report for 1911. It proved to be very satisfactory, there being a considerable sum left over, this being the third year in succession that this fixture has been run on a paying basis. Election of office-bearers: Mr. A. Tod unanimously re-elected president; regret was expressed when Mr. C. Lugton announced that he could not possibly undertake the secretaryship again. After some persuasion the task fell upon Mr. J. Brown, he having successfully carried on the duties of treasurer for three years. Mr. J. Hardie was elected treasurer. We have no doubt that under the new management the society will continue to flourish and prove itself what it has been fittingly named, "The Palace Show of the Borders." Volunteer Hall again secured; next show November 16th. All future correspondence should be addressed to me at 156, Croft-street, Galashiels. —J. Brown, Sec.

ECCLESHILL C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 27th, Fountain Inn. The whole of the officials of last year were re-elected with the exception that Mr. J. Pitts was elected president. Secretary's report was very encouraging, the society now being on a sound footing with a balance on the right side, the subs. being dropped from 6s. per year to 4s. During the season we are holding two young bird and four old bird shows. Quite a large number of specials are to be competed for, and won outright at each show., On Feb. 24th we are holding our distribution of prizes, a supper also being held; members, friends, and fanciers invited. In the champion section Mr. J. Chippendale wins society's silver cup and first prize for second year in succession with 70 points, T. Elsegood 53, J. Wilcock 43, C. Stebbings 36, W. Lee 19. In the novice section B. Ayrton wins 1st prize with 59 points, H. Person 58 (hard lines, Herbert), W. Sparks 20, J. Pullan 18.—W. Nettleton, Sec.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held Jan. 25th, Temperance Hotel. Balance sheet submitted by Treas., Mr. H. P. Staig, showing a deficit of £3 14s. 8d. on the year's working. But this was met by the balance in hand of £11 5s. from last year, thus leaving a bank balance of £8 13s. 9d. Treasurer's report was adopted. Secretary's report showed that, although several extra classes were added, and two of the best judges secured, the open show did not do so well as last year, the deficiency being in the Canary sections, classes not filling. On the other hand the British bird classes were well patronised. Secretary's report also adopted. Election of officers: J. W. Allan, Esq., was re-elected president, Mr. M. Swan chairman, Mr. W. Stranghan vice-chair, Robt. Forster hon. secretary, T. M. Tate, assistant secretary, Messrs. B. Pope and J. Robinson auditors; following committee chosen: Messrs. W. Miller, B. Pope, T. Wake, H. P. Staig, D. Rogerson, W. Nesbitt and J. Ternent. As the table shows of last year proved so successful in drawing members together, it was agreed to hold a similar course this year; first to take place Feb. 29th, for breeding pairs (six classes); Nor., Yorks., Bord., Mules, Hyb., and A.O.V. Can. Second show, in April, will be for British, and the third in June or July, for nest feather. Mr. A. Dippie is expected to judge, and the committee will offer medals for most points gained at each show. Several new members enrolled.—R. Foster, Hon. Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 27th, Derwent Hotel, when balance-sheet for open show, etc., was submitted by secretary showing a loss of £14 odd. With such a splendid show of birds exhibited the financial results were disappointing after offering four money prizes, 22s. per class, and 61 classes. As a Crest fancier I am ashamed of the meagre response from Crest exhibitors with the club patronage; yet the classes stood the worst filled of all. Some of the loss we do not attribute to loss on entries. Other expenses have caused it, but our keenest disappointment is that entries did not pay their way. We are not dismayed, however; we intend to attack the loss, and remove it. A levy on members was agreed upon and a ready response was made; but a great deal more is required. Will members not present please help us to clear away the loss as soon as possible? Election of officers: President, J. H. Rainsford, Esq.; chairman, J. H. Sharman; vice-chair, W. H. Eley; treasurer, J. Watts; committee, J. H. Drakeley, J. Pegg, J. Thomas, F. Cockeram, F. Thompson, B. Ramm, W. Stevens, T. Tongue, J. Baker, J. Pass; Mr. G. Colledge being promoted from committee to a vice-president. Mr. G. H. Wharam takes up the secretaryship, with Mr. H. Bamsey as assistant secretary. Two new members were nominated, and I earnestly ask every member to try and secure a new member each for next meeting. Communications to the Derby Society should in future be addressed to me at 18, Colyear-street, Derby.—G. H. Wharam, Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

A Successful "Burns Night."

Our Burns' night, which proved a great success, and holds out great encouragement to make it an annual gathering, was held in Mr. Condach's rooms, Jan. 24th, Mr. Park presiding over a large company. In his opening remarks Mr. Park thanked all for their support. A supper of herrings, haggis and potatoes was served, which was excellently purveyed by Messrs. McCondach and Walker. Mr. Park proposed the toast "King and Royal Family," also "Army and Navy," the company joining in singing "Rule Britannia." Mr. Dykes proposed "The Partick and District C.B.C.," agreeing to become a member. Mr. Anderson (vice-president) replied, pointing out a few of the benefits and inviting all who intended to become members to come forward at next meeting. Mr. Sinclair proposed the toast of "Strangers," to which Mr. McKendrick replied. Mr. Maxwell proposed "Kindred Clubs," to which Mr. Sellars replied, commenting on the splendid inducements held out by the Foreign Bird Club, of which he was proud to be a member. Mr. Park proposed "The Immortal Memory of our National Bard," and in a few well-chosen remarks brought to memory those beautiful verses written by Burns to the kings of songsters, the Lark and Song Thrush, which on this occasion makes his memory dear to all bird fanciers. Songs were rendered throughout the evening by Messrs. A. Maxwell, J. Stone, W. Priest, A. Muir, A. Dykes, A. K. Chalmers, W. Gilroy, and J. Rice. Mr. Henderson proposed a vote of thanks to the singers for the splendid entertainment given, which was heartily responded to. Mr. J. Brown, in a few well-chosen remarks, commented on the pleasant evening, and wished the P. and D.C.B.C. members a very successful year. Mr. M. Craig proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Park for presiding, and congratulated the club on having such a competent president. The company joined in singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."—J. Henderson, Sec.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIST. C.B.S

First Burns' supper held in the Imperial Hotel on Jan. 26th, the president (Mr. J. Rankine) in chair and a very satisfactory turn-out of members sat down to supper put down in Mr. Penman's usual excellent form. Mr. F. McCavell set the ball rolling with the address to the haggis, and after the company had done full justice to a good Burns' dinner, a lengthy list of toasts, and a talented musical programme were supplied by Messrs. R. and J. Rankine (the latter proposing "The King"), J. Royle, A. Howie, R. Campbell (who proposed "The Immortal Memory"), D. McCavell, A. Zance, J. Keith (who was a host in himself with great recitative powers). During the evening the secretary, Mr. R. T. Campbell, on the occasion of his marriage, was presented with five volumes on Natural History, and a silver-mounted cake biscuit barrel for Mrs. Campbell. Mr. D. McCavell, in the name of the members and a few friends, made the presentations, and to which Mr. Campbell suitably replied. OBITUARY.

It is with great regret, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, sec. of the South Birmingham O.S., that I have to announce the death of the beloved wife of our much esteemed and respected chairman, Mr. E. T. Willmott. Members join with me in tendering their heartfelt sympathy to him in his bereavement.

We regret to learn of the demise of the Rev. David Dickson, of Lowestoft, who passed away a short time ago. He was well known and respected as a bird-lover, and a few years back was very successful as a breeder and exhibitor of Crests. The rev. gentleman, too, was popular as a writer upon this breed, many helpful articles from his pen appearing at different times in the Fancy Press. He contributed to the early numbers of CAGE BIRDS; and was good enough to send an article for inclusion in "Our Canaries," embodying his views upon the ideal Crest and its production. We tender his widow and relatives our respectful sympathy.

I am now ready to call the annual general meeting, but before doing so I shall be glad to know if any member has anything to suggest, writes Mr. A. E. Brown, hon. sec. of the Welsh C.B.C. I should like to point out to each member that at the general meeting it is quite possible that our rules may be altered slightly. I am pleased to say the Club Show was a success. I shall be glad to send particulars to any fancier wishing to join.

Mr. Enoch Tams (Church Street, Longton), the noted manufacturer of earthenware cage, etc., fittings, is putting upon the market for the coming season an improved type of nest-pan, designed to prevent the nesting material being dislodged from it. He has also a new thing in bird sprays, a nickel pump arrangement doing away with the old-style rubber ball arrangement, which is so often a source of trouble. Both articles, we think, will meet with great favour amongst bird-keepers.

Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. annual meeting will be held Feb. 10 at headquarters, at eight o'clock, write Messrs. Meades and Smith, tho hon. joint secs., when the business will include the confirmation of new members nominated at last meeting; balance sheet; revision of rules; fixture list for 1912; and election of officers. Pair Show to be held Feb. 15, when Mr. G. Hills is expected to judge and make some remarks on the pairs exhibited. It is hoped all members will be present and support both events.

As a place wherein to while away spare time, one's own garden, even if it be of the smallest proportions and yet well looked after, is hard to beat. Few places give such a good return for a little care as a garden, and few flowers are more charming in it than the Sweet Pea. The high place which this flower holds in the favour of lovers of gardening is undoubtedly mainly due to Eckford's, whose magnificent offer is thrown open to CAGE BIRDS readers. Fanciers will do well to study the announcement on page 145, for it is plain that the cultivation of Sweet Peas can be pursued with profit and without hindrance to the keeping of birds. The merest novice at gardening has an equal chance with those more proficient to secure a valuable prize, if only he uses Eckford's seeds. In any case they have the opportunity to beautify their gardens at a very modest outlay.

We have engaged Mr. H. W. Battye as judge for our open show on Nov. 30, writes Mr. R. Symonds, the sec.

We hear that Mr. J. Walsh, of Blackburn, is judging British birds, Mules, etc., at the Liverpool Open Show to be held on Nov. 1 and 2 next.

Thanks for prompt despatch of telegram with result of my winnings at Crystal Palace Show, which I received at 2.5 p.m.—very smart indeed. —John D. Horrill (Barnstaple).

Will secretaries and other fanciers please note my change of address, it being now 7, Society Place, Derby, writes Mr. H. T. G. Bamsey, assist. sec. to the Derby C.B.S.

The Pendleton and Salford O.S. are having a grand smoking concert on Feb. 10 at headquarters, where we hope to meet a large number of friends, writes Mr. J. Critchley, the hon. sec.

In their announcement on page 121, Messrs. Trower and Co. give prominence to a fact of which they may be justly proud. Their success at the L.C.B.A. Show has been repeated at the Crystal Palace. Moreover, for the excellence of their bird room appliances they have secured a silver medal. The principal of the firm has a lifetime's experience in bird-keeping matters, and the great business is carried on under his personal supervision. It is difficult, where there are so many good things for fanciers, to single out any for special mention, but three of Messrs. Trower's specialities—"Softbilo" for Larks, Blackbirds, etc.; "Cecto" for small insectivorous birds, both British and Foreign; and "Egbisco" egg and biscuit food for rearing Canaries and Hybrids—are very valuable aids to success in the hobby. Fanciers should write for Trower's catalogue, which is very handy, and something worth notice is the fact that at Trower's expert advice on matters of feeding is given free.

The Railway Again.

I entered in the competition for bird utensils, and sent the goods by passenger train on Jan. 30 to reach the Crystal Palace Show on Feb. 1, writes Mr. C. Colclough, of Wharf Street, Longton, but they never arrived until Friday midday—too late to be judged—which means a great loss to my trade.

A Whist Drive and Tea.

Will members and friends of the Halifax O.S. please note that a grand tea, whist drive, and social will take place on Feb. 24 at the Victoria Conservative Club, Gibbet Street? Tea on tables at 5 o'clock. Tickets 1s. 6d. each (which may be had from any member of the committee or of the secretary), writes Mr. J. J. Dunn, the sec.

A Slight Difference.

A pair of Rooks built their nest in one of a cluster of trees in a gentleman's grounds. The owner was delighted at the prospect of having a Rookery practically at his back door, but the farmer who owned the surrounding land didn't look at the matter in the same light. He gave his sons orders to "pot 'em" at the first opportunity. One morning the farmer received this note from his neighbour: "Sir,—I wish your boys would let my Rooks alone. I'm trying to make a Rookery." The farmer altered three words and returned the note: "Sir,—I wish your Rooks would let my crops alone. I'm trying to make a living."

Hull's Misfortune.

I very greatly regret, writes Mr. E. R. Ridley, sec. of the Hull C.B.S., to have to draw attention to the fact that Mrs. Harland, the wife of Mr. Geo. Harland, the well-known Norwich exhibitor and judge, is suffering from serious illness. This is the reason Mr. Harland's birds were absent from the Crystal Palace Show; it was his original intention to show his best team. I am sure all fanciers will wish Mrs. Harland a speedy recovery. The Hull C.B.S. seems rather unfortunate as regards illness, Mr. W. T. Pepper being confined to his room for three weeks; but we are all glad to hear he is on the high road to recovery, having been able at some little inconvenience and trouble to attend the meeting and show on Monday last.

Wee Dickie's Deid.

Ah me! I'm awfu' weary,
The hoose seems unco' dreary,
An' a' things noo are eerie—
Wee dickie's deid!

I felt like near tae greetiu'
When its kindly heart stopt beatin',
An' now I keep repeatin'—
Wee dickie's deid!

Tho' never very bonnie,
It warbled sweet as ony,
And better, too, than mony—
Wee dickie's deid!

It was a treat tae hear it
When ane it kent was near it;
Now gane: it's hard tae bear it—
Wee dickie's deid!

Better Luck Next Time.

Many thanks for sending my postcard of awards back so quickly from the Palace Show, writes Mr. A. E. Long (Manchester). You put "nil" to both entries; I add one word more, and make it "Nil Desperandum!"

The Water Bubble.

Might I once more ask, writes "Novice," if there is an instrument on the market for teaching the water bubble to Rollers? I think there is, so some of your readers might oblige me by letting me know price, and where to get same. I do not mean anything of the organ type. [A kind of whistle arrangement is sold by most of the large dealers in fanciers' goods; the price is but a few pence, we believe.—Editor.]

The White Jackdaw's Return.

I have what is probably the only living white Jackdaw, writes Mrs. Ellett (Wakefield). It got away two months ago, but on Feb. 2 flew into my shop and enjoyed a good meal whilst perched on my shoulder. I believe the snow and cold and hunger account for its return. (White Jackdaws are bred on the Continent, and are often to be bought in England. —Editor, "C.B.")

In Inverness Firth.

The stormy weather in the Far North has sent very large flocks of wild birds to Inverness Firth. Black Cormorants, Green Shags, Gooseanders, etc., are to be seen along the shores in immense crowds. It may be that the sprats and young herring in the Firth have been a part of the attraction, for the birds have been feasting on them since their arrival. As the Cormorants do a great deal of damage among the salmon fry when they reach the estuaries of the rivers Ness and Beauly, more than a hundred of these birds (says the "Aberdeen Gazette") have been shot by the superintendent of the local fishery district. Not for many years, it is believed, have such large flocks of birds been seen in the Firth.

Will all Canaries be Rung in the Future?

By C. A. House.

A Contribution Suggested by a Revolutionary Proposition put forward at the Annual Meeting of the Crested Canary Club.

Speaking with the sincerity born of conviction, and with the earnestness of the true reformer, Mr. T. Heath, at the C.C.C. meeting on Saturday said: "All I can say, gentlemen, is that if you don't adopt closed rings now you will have to do it in the near future. I have no doubt whatever that in the course of a few years rings will generally be adopted by Canary breeders, even as they have been by Pigeon breeders."

The idea of ringing Canaries with closed enamel rings similar to those in use by the Pigeon Fancy is not altogether a new thing as such rings were used last year by the British Roller Canary Club, and a letter was read by Mr. Tyson at the C.C.C. meeting explaining how the Roller Club had worked the scheme, and some of its advantages.

That Canary breeders may understand the value that these closed rings would be to them I will speak of what they have done in the Pigeon Fancy. Some five-and-twenty or thirty years ago when the Fancy began to make headway and the classification for the different varieties was increased by the adoption of classes for young birds, difficulties arose as to the ages of birds entered. With pigeons it is much more difficult than with Canaries to say whether a bird has been bred in the current year or not, as the flights are cast the first season; yet the practised eye can generally pick out the youngsters, still vexed questions did arise, and to end these the closed rings were introduced. These first used were made of different kinds of metal, but it was found they could easily be tampered with, and after a number of experiments had been made a metal ring with a coating of enamel, was finally adopted, and this ensured the fact that all birds shown in young bird classes were bona-fide young birds.

More recently experiments have been made with modern metal rings, and the ring now used by the National Homing Union is made of aluminium, and the letters and figures are raised from the surface. Fraud is prevented by the use of a waved or deckled line along the edge. The breeders of Fancy Pigeons, however, remain true to the enamelled ring which they say is quite above suspicion, in that it is impossible for anyone to take it without leaving traces of their handiwork.

What are the Advantages?

What are the advantages of a ring such as Mr. Heath suggested to the C.C.C.? In the first place it will ensure honesty in the exhibiting of young birds. At present it is extremely difficult for anyone to say whether a certain Crest, Crest-bred, or Lancashire is a young bird or not. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred one might be right, but the odd one with weighty issues depending upon it might be the very stumbling block which it had been desired to avoid. There is not much doubt that in the past some dishonest exhibitors have managed to secure prizes in young classes with birds which were not bred in the current year, whilst on the other hand honest fanciers showing a particularly strong boned bird with exceptionally developed headgear have had doubts cast upon their honour and veracity. A closed enamel ring worn by all birds would prevent injustice either way.

At the present time a man buying a Canary has no means of knowing its age. It may be one, two, three, or six years old. If the seller is honest the age, if asked, will be given, but even then, there is doubt, because honest fanciers are not all methodical, and mistakes are sometimes made. In cases where the seller is possessed of an elastic conscience the buyer has no guarantee at all as to the age of a bird he desires to acquire. Were all birds rung this trouble would not arise.

To-day Canaries are more carefully bred than ever they have been. The happy-go-lucky, haphazard matings are not so prevalent as they were a few years since. True it is that many still go on the old lines trusting to outward characteristics, but there are others who reason that if scientific in-breeding or line-breeding is the correct thing in horses, dogs, pigeons, and other things; it surely must be worthy of attention from Canary breeders. Many of these have used detachable rings for pedigree purposes, and have removed them when sending their birds to shows. Apart from the risk of mishap in the taking off and putting on of these detachable rings, mistakes are apt to be made, and confusion result. Closed enamel rings would obviate this trouble and risk.

Further, once a ring was on a Canary's leg, it would be there as long as the bird lived, and its value for pedigree purposes alone are beyond compute. Each bird would be entered up in the Stud Book and Breeding Register by its number, and it would be possible at any time not only for the owner to verify a pedigree, but for others to satisfy themselves in the same direction. It would also tremendously enhance the value of show specimens if we could speak and write of Heath's No. 99, 1912, 1st Palace, Nottingham, Cheltenham, and L.C.B.A., as being by Barnett's No. 33, 1907, 1st Norwich, Gateshead and Newcastle, out of Tyson's No. 66, 1909, 1st at Plymouth, Sunderland, and Scottish National. It would be like describing the pedigree of a Derby winner, and its influence in extending the interest in Canary breeding, and enhancing the monetary value of not only high class specimens, but their family connections as well, would be enormous.

Clearing up the Mystery.

The question often arises when a great star flashes across the horizon of the Fancy: "Who bred it?" The owner, Jack Brown, says he did; a little later Tom Jones, who sold Brown a useful sort of a youngster the year previous, declares this is the bird, and claims the honour. Both cannot be right. Closed enamel rings would avoid such disputes, as the secretary of the particular specialist club would have the register of the club's rings, and he would be able to say at once that 2,001 in 1910 was issued to Brown, and Jones's claim was false.

Cups and specials are sometimes offered for competition amongst breeders. In the higher branches of the Fancy, in which pedigrees are registered, fraudulent exhibitors have not much chance, but the closed ring is far better even than a pedigree register entry, founded upon a stud visit. A club, of which I am president, had recently to investigate a charge brought against a member of winning two club trophies in contravention of the rules governing the same, by knowing the ring number, and tracing it from the secretary of the Marking Conference, to the ring secretary of the club which purchased the ring, and from him to the man who bred the bird the case was established, and a severe punishment inflicted upon the offender. At present the Canary Fancy has no means of proving such a case. The closed enamel ring would supply the needed proofs, did occasion arise.

Some years since, a couple of decades, a then well-known exhibitor won first and special in a certain class at the Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show. The following week he advertised the winner for sale. The rush for it was so great that he thought he saw a chance of making hay whilst the sun was shining, and he did. That Palace winner was sold to twelve different individuals. The morality of the Fancy is higher to-day than it was then, and such a trick is hardly likely to be played. Still, prevention is better than cure, and the closed enamel ring would effectually prevent such an attempt being made.

The Strongest Reason.

The reasons given above are such as may appeal to the fanciers', or sportsmen's view of the matter. There is one far stronger. To-day many of our specialist clubs have a hard struggle for existence. Closed enamel rings would put an end to the struggle. The profits made by the National Homing Union run into hundreds of pounds. Canary clubs can hardly aspire to such heights, but the British Roller Canary Club last year made £16 profit on its ring scheme, and when this was mentioned at the C.C.C. meeting on Saturday, friend Ley, from Nottingham, said, "I begin to like this ring scheme. I think there's something in it; especially that £16."

And there is. In the Pigeon Fancy some very valuable produce stakes and prizes are arranged by the different specialist clubs, and apart from the profit made by the clubs they arouse a spirit of enthusiasm in the members, encourage a spirit of friendly rivalry, induce fanciers to exercise the greatest care in the mating of their birds; but, above all, they have a strong tendency to increase the value and selling price of the birds themselves. All this, and much more, closed enamel rings would do for the Canary Fancy, and the thanks of all are due to Mr. Heath for introducing the subject to the C.C.C. There is, indeed, something in it.

Birds that Took the Right Turning.

An accompanying article to Mr. Norman's Coloured Plate which is given with this issue.

"Birds that took the right turning!"—how happy a title this is, to be sure. At first glance it may be provocative of a smile. We have all heard, doubtless, of the girl who took the "wrong turning" (to suit the purpose of a playwright) and many readers have probably seen the illuminating drama written round her, and shed tears (!) at the harrowing misfortunes heaped upon her pretty head. Well, birds are equally liable to miss their way at the cross-roads—in a physical sense at any rate—and, metaphorically speaking, cause tears of mortification to chase one another down the cheek of their owner. And the analogy can be carried a step further; for it is invariably in the golden days of their youth that this deviation from the right path occurs and brings sorrow in its train. Every bird-keeper of any length of experience must at times—many a time and oft, we are afraid—have watched a cherished youngster develop all sorts of undreamed of failings, from the exhibition point of view, as it approached the adult stage, and regretfully let his hopes of possessing a future "champion" slide into oblivion.

The Really Exciting Period.

To come to the other side of the picture—Mr. Norman's side, so to speak—we hope there may be no breeder whose lot it has been never to have had a young bird take the "right turning" so far as exhibition points are concerned. To the fancier interested in the production of his own show birds it is safe to say that the summer and early autumn months are even more full of pleasurable excitement than those later months which see his birds facing the judges and endeavouring to justify their owner's confidence in their merit.

The stock birds are duly paired; the eggs are laid; the young birds put in an appearance, "swell visibly" under the tender ministrations of their parents, and eventually make their first venture upon the perches. How eagerly their owner looks them over. Has the slight failing in the cock bird (or the hen) been corrected in the progeny? Does the stock look like progressing further along the right road as a result of this season's work, and the careful thought bestowed upon it? These and similar thoughts chase themselves through his mind. Let us hope the answer may be a full-throated affirmative.

The beginner must be warned, however, against a too speedy summing up of the possibilities of his young birds. It is almost safe to say that no breeder, no matter to what term of years his experience may extend, can say with absolute accuracy exactly how good any given bird will be after it has moulted its nestling feathers. It is usually possible to make a pretty good guess, of course. But birds can be "backward" in their youth, the same as human beings, and yet attain a surprising degree of excellence once the fledgling stage has been left behind. In short, they "take the right turning." Beginners, therefore, should never be in too great a hurry to dispose of their youngsters. Give them a fair chance of developing before you come to regard them as merely "surplus stock." And it is sometimes a paying policy to keep a bird over its second moult before giving it up as a hopeless case.

The Modesty of Youth.

The writer, too, has often found beginners much too pessimistic respecting the merit of young birds they have bred. These cannot be expected to kind of jump into as good-looking a lot as their parents within a few weeks of leaving the nest. It is inevitable that by comparison they should look "weedy" in build and deficient in colour. Mr. Norman's very excellent plate illustrates this point to a nicety. The Green (like a certain young lady) is quite a "slim young thing," and weak and washy in colour and markings. What a difference once his nestling feathers have been discarded, his frame developed, and a layer of firm flesh (we'll say nothing of fat) packed around his bones! The Yorkie, too, is short and mean looking, though otherwise most certainly a promising baby. But when he has been moulted and steadied, and well handled and trained to acquire that upright, "shooty" pose, so much admired, what a change for the better comes over his appearance. He has, indeed, "taken the right turning!"

Bird Myths.

We are told that in the Orkneys the belief in the good or bad fortune brought by certain birds is not yet extinct. The Ring Ouzel takes the place which the Crow did at one time in England, and all hope is given up if one flies over the house containing a sick man.

THE FAVOURITE OF THE FINCH FAMILY

A keen Welsh Fancier discourses upon the Goldfinch, the most popular bird in "Taffy-land," and a general favourite everywhere.

By J. KERSHAW (Llanrwst).

THERE is hardly a bird fancier (whether an exhibitor or an admirer of any of the varieties of Canaries or Hybrids, or any other species of British or Foreign birds) who does not indeed desire to be the possessor of a first-class British of Foreign Goldfinch, the latter being an especial favourite amongst Scotchmen.

Some Reasons Why Goldie is Popular.

There are several reasons why the Goldie is so popular with everyone. First of all is the fact that he is a delightfully pretty bird, with a song and a combination of colours almost equal to those of any tropical bird. If the Goldfinch were taken to any part of the world where he is not to be found, I am sure the natives of the country would say it is the daintiest and prettiest bird they ever saw. Secondly, it is not on the whole a difficult bird to keep; and it is very inexpensive to cater for. I am quite aware there are many fanciers who don't quite agree with me here, but the chief fault as to why these specimens die, or don't come right out in plumage, lies with the owner. Thirdly, it is an excellent exhibition bird, and I feel justified in saying that even the best and biggest Canary breeders and exhibitors, when visiting the shows feel they must have a good look at the winning Goldies. It does not matter where you go you will always find an admirer of this perky, and sometimes vicious and cheeky aristocrat.

As an addition to the points raised, there remains the fact that the Goldfinch is the most serviceable bird to keep in any bird-room. If it is a good specimen it can be well cared for, and brought up to exhibition condition; or whether it be good, bad or indifferent, so long as it is a cock bird and healthy, it can always be mated up for hybridising, and if a large, rich coloured yellow Norwich hen is selected as its mate, you may rely upon the youngsters produced, whether light or dark Mules, to be good average exhibition birds; and if there is anyone outstanding in size, feather, shape, blaze, and condition, you will find scores ready to buy that bird at a reasonable price, or it will stand the chance for yourself of bringing honour to your name on the show bench.

How the Finch Should be Fed.

Some people seem to think that unless the bird is a good one as regards its exhibition points, any diet will do for it. Sometimes the refuse from the Canary cages is thrown in, with the result that the Goldie picks up stale food; often yolk of egg, gone stale, and other contaminated food, with the consequence that the once lively little gem is right in the corner of the cage as miserable as the day is long. Others decide upon giving the Finch a diet of either hemp and canary seed mixed, or perhaps a single diet of one sort of seed only. True it is, some excellent coloured and conditioned birds, with fine blazes, have been seen at shows, birds that have only been fed on hemp or canary seed and a lump of sugar between the wires. These are the exceptions; but one will hardly find these birds so good late in the show season, or when the summer is approaching. Of these birds I have yet to find one so fed that has the right texture of blaze, and they completely lack bloom, and are devoid of rich tan, and the blaze generally has an underground brassy shade.

Why the Best Bird Lost.

I had the experience of judging a show recently, and the best bird in the Goldie class was awarded second prize because the owner had not paid enough attention to its diet. It lacked bloom, though the blaze was bright in the usual sense of the word. The tan was washy, but it was the correct sort of tan, had it only been brought out. The owner was told that when he shows again, and the bird is fit, he will win in better company. He took the bird to an expert to be washed and have its claws trimmed, as they curved round the perch. The second time it was shown within a week it stood 2nd to the best bird at Llanrwst (North Wales) show, and beat some of the birds that had done well on the bench at some of the largest English shows. The bird might have beaten the winner had the owner paid attention to its diet in the early stages of the moult, for it was only beaten in general depth of colour throughout.

Now, to dwell upon the importance of feeding a bird; I am sure that this bird, after judicious feeding, will trouble the very best in about four to six weeks.

I expect there are many who are looking for a little secret, as to the feeding of the Goldfinch. Let me at once tell them: There is no absolute secret in feeding an exhibition Goldie. An exhibition Goldie is what nature has made it, as regards shape, type, colour and feather; it is the owner's duty to get it into condition. The best stock mixture for getting Goldies into peach bloom condition is hemp, canary, an abundance of teazle, and a little linseed. Also a ½-pound dandelion, ½-pound thistle (mixed), given as a tit-bit every day, say a teaspoonful. There is no harm in giving a little groundsel, for it seems to have, to my mind, a very beneficial effect upon the bird's system, for I know it will cure a bird, though it has "gone into the corner."

Excellent for Bringing Out the Tan.

The above-named diet is a moulting diet for adult birds only, and when all the feathers have appeared, give it a few cracked sunflower seeds (white only) as long as you show it, for this seed is excellent for bringing out the tan, though it has a rather bad effect upon the blaze if given too liberally; hence the importance of keeping it out of the list during the actual moult, for the reason really that it darkens the blaze before it gets the necessary brightness.

I need not dwell upon the necessity of giving a Goldfinch any suitable wild seed during the moult. Remember to give it as many hardheads as it will eat. Give it also a mealworm now and again, either dead or alive, and if you can get your good coloured Finch to eat privet berries, it will shine like a bottle for you, when put into a show cage for competition.

The bath is an all-important item, for unless a bird takes freely to the bath the chances of its winning are not so numerous as an exhibition bird.

Illness and How to Treat It.

When newly caught, the best diet for a youngster is, without doubt, hemp and sunflower seeds, both cracked; but when you have a Goldfinch that has gone into the corner of the cage, with head under its wings, looking, it seems, for the path leading to the place of departed spirits, then it is time for the bird to be wakened up. The thing needful must be resorted to at once, as no time can be lost, and, believe me, if your bird is a very valuable one, it is better for you to lose a day's work, as it will repay you in the long run. The best thing for a fancier to do is to ascertain at once the cause of the illness, or guess to the best of his ability, not only from the appearance of the bird itself, but also from its surroundings. If the excreta is wet and greenish it is likely the bowels are affected. Don't run for castor oil or Epsom salts, as these only aggravate the pain when they take effect, and in nine cases out of ten put the bird off its seed. Put sawdust on the bottom of the cage so as to dry up the fluidity of the excreta. Have always by you a shilling box of Spratts' Quinella (no fancier should be without it) and put some of it, as directed, in the drinking-water; force the bird to take a good draught of it, warmed for preference. Then remove the bird to a warmer spot, and commence hand-feeding.

Now comes the question of diet when out of sorts, and I am giving the following advice for what it is worth. Of course, a bird wants food when in this condition, and it has long been suggested that scalded milk should form the major part of it, for it is said to have a curative effect upon the bowels. Let that be the case. I have personally tried it, but have found that it does not always carry out its reputation.

An Old-fashioned Remedy Recommended.

Now, to give an old-fashioned remedy, as well as a method for hand-rearing birds; here it is: Don't use new milk or sweet milk, as the Sale of Foods and Drugs Act calls it, but use the stale milk, churned into what in the country is called "Buttermilk." When this is boiled, all the water remains on top, while the solids go to the bottom. When unboiled the case is the reverse. The solids become the consistency of cheese; add a little sugar to this solid, and hand-feed the bird with it every half-hour, till the Quinella has its effects upon a somewhat kept-up revived body. It is also advisable, if you can get the bird to take it, to give the patient some bran bread to eat, as it has a very costive tendency upon the system. If bran bread is not at hand, it is as well to induce the bird to take some raw bran or cereal, as sold by corn merchants, and given to horses, cattle, etc. If the bird does not partake of the dry material you may moisten it with some of the milk suggested above, and 4 drops of Cod Liver Oil, and some soft sugar, to tempt the bird to eat it. I may point out that this is an old Anglesey method of rearing Goldfinches from the nest, and when sick; but, of course, the Quinella has now come upon the market to its aid. If you get a youngster on hemp seed at once (that is to say, birds caught and not hand-reared), he is quite safe; but if given mixed packet seed the bird will likely pick out the most soft, such as linseed, teazle and niga, with the result that it does not partake of a substantial enough diet to keep alive for long, while I have found two of the above seeds injurious to first-year birds only.

Peculiarities of First-Year Finches.

My experience with first-year Finches is varied. I have seen some, but very few, doing well in a month or so upon mixed seed (very rarely linseed) with a good sprinkling of hemp and maw seeds. I have seen others that, after having linseed especially, get a big lump on the side of the breast, get loose in feather, seem to be breathing fast as though they had asthma or "Angina pectoris," i.e., heart disease, and have a voracious appetite; they live for months in this way, and probably die from congestion of the liver, and I have yet to find a cure for such birds; hence my advice to keep linseed from the list and stick to hemp, sunflower and teazle seeds for the first year. Not only are the above seeds fattening, but as first-year birds are so active, they need nourishment and strength to develop them for the future, when they steady down to caged life. Given a Goldfinch with a rich pigment in the blood a sound diet as above described to both young and old and a frequent bath, there is no need for the cry, "Why can't I win when my bird is the best?"

THE CURIOUS CROSSBILL.

Notes upon its nesting habits and food, made at Arndilly, Banff, N.B.

By SIR ROLAND CORBETT, Bt.

THESE interesting and curious birds breed here in fair numbers every year. I found two nests, both of which were placed high up in a fir-tree, quite 30 or 40 feet from the ground. The nest, built at the end of a branch, was composed of fir twigs, dry grass, etc., and lined with fine roots, wool and horsehair. The nest is much the same as that of a Hedge Sparrow (or Hedge Accentor, as it should be called), only rather larger.

The eggs are somewhat larger than a Greenfinch, but are of the same colouration. The young birds are greenish grey, with the underparts much striated with dark brown. I found a young one that had been blown out of its nest on to the ground. It was almost fully fledged, and its mouth and crop were full of the seeds extracted from larch cones. Up to the age of three weeks the nestling's bill is quite straight.

The male Crossbill is a handsome bird, with his red head and back. His mate is greenish yellow where the male is red, and her whole plumage is more striated. Crossbills live chiefly on the seeds extracted from the various fir cones, the peculiar formation of their bill enabling them to extract the seeds with ease. They are fond of the pips of apples, which they secure with dexterity. During the summer months the larvæ of insects form part of their diet.

The note is a clear short whistle, and rather resembles the call note of a Bullfinch, but it is louder than that of the Finch. If reared from the nest, Crossbills make amusing pets, and become very tame.

Black Bullfinches.

By Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE.

Interesting Views upon the Production of these Freaks of Nature.

THE phenomenon of blackness in Bullfinches has been much in my mind, and I have had some experience of transitory blackness. I say "transitory" blackness, for I have now in my possession two cock Bullfinches, both born in 1909, one showing a decided melanistic tinge during 1910, and entirely recovering after the moult in 1911; whilst the other, a splendid bird, taking first and special prizes in 1910, now shows darkness after the moult in 1911. Moreover, I bought a young hen Bullfinch in October, 1910, in nest feather, and at the time of change into adult plumage she became very black on the head, breast, back, and rump, but after the moult in 1911 she very largely regained her normal colour, though not entirely so. What she would eventually have become I know not, for death intervened.

What Brings about Melanism?

My opinion as to melanism is set out below, though whether I am right or wrong I know not :—

(i.) That the tendency to melanism is inherited, and only needs favourable circumstances to develop it.

(ii.) That it is a disease of captivity, and is not met with in wild life, possibly because wild birds are not seed-eaters, but have a larger selection of food materials.

(iii.) That it is the outward and visible sign of changes which occur in the liver, and that it is a peculiarity of certain birds. I have had ten Bullfinches, cocks and hens, in one aviary, all being fed alike, and only two of these are melanistic, whilst the others are normal.

(iv.) That melanism is the outcome of a poison secreted by the liver, and passing into the blood, which nourishes the feathers. Any injurious substance from the digestive tract will cause a fresh colouring matter to enter the feather, through the opening at the base of the quill (for the admission of a blood vessel).

(v.) That melanism is not due to the use of hemp as food, as is sometimes supposed, for my method of feeding is this :— Canary seed, 2 parts; German rape, 2 parts; hemp, ½ part; niger, ½ part; teazle, ½ part; linseed, ½ part; white sunflower, ½ part. And as my birds get plenty of exercise, I do not find this proportion of hemp too much.

(vi.) That when the poisonous substance is eliminated from the blood, the feathers regain their normal colour; hence I speak of the transitoriness of melanism.

How Food is Dealt With.

So much for theory. What really does occur is this :—

1. The food eaten passes through the crop, which secretes no special digestive juice, but is merely a storehouse in which the food remains till the stomach is ready to receive it. Whilst in the crop, the food is acted upon by a little saliva from the mouth, by a little water taken in, also by the watery secretion of the mucous membrane lining the gullet, and also by the warmth of the body.

2. Then the food passes to the proventriculus, or first part of the stomach, rich in glands secreting a very acid juice, changing the insoluble starchy matter into soluble peptone.

3. This peptone passes into the blood stream through the very thin walls of the blood vessels supplying the stomach.

4. The gizzard, or second part of the stomach, contains the portions of the food not acted upon by the juices of the proventriculus.

5. The food, having passed into the blood stream, is thoroughly assimilated, and becomes part of the bird itself; this action taking place in the proventriculus.

6. A further step in digestion is reached when the food passes to the small intestine, in a loop of which lies the pancreas. The liver lies behind the end of the proventriculus, and the fore part of the gizzard.

7. Both the pancreas and the liver pour upon the food their own peculiar digestive juices, the pancreatic secretion changing starches into sugar, and dissolving the envelopes containing the fat globules.

8. The emulsified fats pass into the lacteals in the lining membrane of the small intestine, and thence into the blood vessels, and back to the heart by the two great veins.

This briefly sums up the digestive process, and my idea of a mixed diet like the one I have quoted is that every ingredient comes under the action of the various agents in the process of digestion. But what the actual change is in the feather, from normal to black colour, I cannot tell.

In conclusion, a remarkable case of melanism came under my notice some years ago. A fine cock Bullfinch, second prize winner at Worthing Show, was brought to me for treatment, suffering from acute indigestion and diarrhoea. After much trouble I cured him, and he went into an early moult, but it proved a melanistic one. I kept him till he was all right again and singing—a period of about thirteen weeks, I think, before I returned him to his owner. His moult was peculiar, for he was quite glossy and black, with two white feathers in each wing. After a few days his owner brought him back to me, as she did not care for a black Bullfinch. He died eventually, as the result of a chill caught at a show.

Willow Wrens and Fruit Trees.

The graceful little Willow Wrens are plentiful during the summer months in the Southern Counties, especially in Sussex. They are looked upon with disfavour by gardeners and fruit growers. In the early spring they scatter the fruit buds, but whether to search for the hidden grub or not one can hardly say. Later they take toll of most garden fruit, damaging more than they eat. They are particularly fond of the fig, which is grown rather extensively in the contry.

A BIRD-KEEPER'S LUXURY.

The Indoor Bird-Room and Some "Tips" upon its Proper Furnishing and Fitting Up.

By O. E. BROOKS.

THE very name of "bird-room" seems to convey a suggestion of luxury, and well it might, for it is only the minority of bird-keepers who are fortunate enough to have an entire room at the disposal for their hobby. But it often happens that in quite small houses there is a spare room, probably a garret—too small, perhaps, for most domestic purposes, but just the thing for utilisation as a bird-room.

There are many things to recommend the reserving of a room for the birds' sole use, amongst which the advantages of a regulated temperature and the non-interference during breeding operations are not the least important. In addition to these, if one has his or her birds kept in an apartment by themselves, it is possible to feel quite easy on the subject of their making a mess with seed husks, etc. Then, again, there are numerous things one can do in the way of trying experiments in the making of observations and in the breeding of rare hybrids, if he possesses an apartment of his own, and which can be regarded as a sort of private sanctum.

It is almost superfluous to talk about the proper aspect of the room—the great difficulty is the obtaining of one—but generally a sunny one, overlooking the garden or some other open space, where plenty of light and pure air are obtainable, would be the best. But one may well be satisfied with less than this.

Give Walls Special Attention.

When the matter has been finally settled, the first thing requiring attention will be the walls. The paper on them must be removed. This may doubtless seem rather destructive, but it is nevertheless essential, as wall paper is very apt to harbour insect pests. After this has been done and the cracks and crevices in the plaster all filled in, in order to leave the surface of the wall perfectly smooth, it should be given two coats of some reliable distemper. A pale pink shade I give preference, as this lends the apartment a warm appearance. Some might possibly think blue a better colour, or even white, but unless the room gets a long period of sunshine, for the reason already stated the former is more appropriate. Paint can be used instead of distemper; but, of course, the distemper comes much the cheapest, and when used, the walls are more easily given another coat for cleaning purposes. The ceiling is best left in its original state (white), although in the event of being discoloured by smoke or dirt, it would be advantageous to clean it also.

For the floor nothing excels good linoleum, carefully nailed down, and kept clean by frequent washing. This also gives the room a more finished appearance than it would have if the boards were left bare.

The Orderly Arrangement.

Now we come to the business of fitting up the apartment, and, providing the dimensions are not less than ten feet long and six feet wide I should advise its arrangement after the following plan : On the side nearest the window, or on that which obtains the greatest amount of light, enclose this portion of the room with wire netting, for use as a flight. This flight will be found specially convenient at that period when the young birds are commencing to look after themselves, as in a roomy flight they are able to get plenty of exercise, and grow strong and lusty, better able to withstand the approaching moult. If the window happens to come within the end of this flight, it can be utilised for a purpose I shall mention presently.

On the other sides of the room racks should be built for supporting the cages, and these cages it is also advisable to make of one size and pattern, thereby fitting the racks, and looking much neater. This method of fitting up the room will often allow of a middle gangway, varying in width according to the breadth of the apartment. At one end should be placed a table (or bench), with, if possible, underneath it a cupboard. The cage racks should not reach higher than to within three feet of the ceiling; it is very much better to have the birds as much as possible on a level with one's head, as it makes them steadier and facilitates the process of looking into the cages without causing unnecessary disturbance.

The subject of ventilation demands notice, but exactly how these ventilation arrangements are to be carried out the local conditions have to decide. It may be added that although the entrance of pure and the escape of foul air must be arranged, the prevention of draughts is even of greater importance. Consequently, whatever method is settled upon, this important consideration must not be overlooked.

An Advocate of Sawdust.

For use on the floor of the flight and in the cages, pine sawdust is the most satisfactory article, as the use of sand for large areas becomes rather expensive, unless by living near the sea coast one is able to procure as much as is required without payment. This pine sawdust (which should be coarse-cut) not only absorbs moisture quickly, but in addition gives off an extremely healthy odour, which will be greatly appreciated, especially during the hot weather. Of course, a plentiful supply of gritty sand, for digestive purposes, must not be forgotten.

I do not advise any artificial heating apparatus, for the simple reason that in an ordinary dwelling the temperature ought seldom to fall too low; but if gas happens to be already laid on, and there is a bracket in the room, it would be well to let it remain, for it would certainly prove useful in many ways, not only for illumination on winter mornings, etc., but also when for some specific purpose it is desirable to obtain heat. However, no matter what means of lighting or heating be adopted, it should be remembered that any poisonous fumes from such will rise, and remain until expelled, near the ceiling. Hence the danger of hanging or stacking cages where these fumes congregate.

For those who might prefer to dispense with the use of cages altogether, and to have their birds flying loose in the room, I would advise a net being hung on the inner side of the door (or the outer, as is most convenient), and wire netting over the glass on the window.

Utilise the Window.

The use to which the window might be put is this : If the birds are flying loose, or are in the large flight previously referred to, during the warm weather the window could be opened and a sort of wired run, or rather flight, be arranged outside. This would, of course, only be practicable if the room was on a level with the garden; but even should the room be an upstairs one, a very similar, though not as large, flight is possible, if the structure is allowed to find a secure means of support either on the sill or on strong iron brackets. For the framework 2in. quartering might be used, wire netting on top and sides, and ½in. boards for the floor. In the summer time this is an excellent method of keeping the stock in health and reducing the temperature of the room; whilst in winter, if wished, the whole arrangement can be taken down, and stored away until the better weather.

The secret of keeping a bird-room in a presentable condition is to pay the strictest attention to cleanliness. A thorough scrub and clean up about once a week, using a good carbolic disinfectant throughout the summer months, combined with the habit of constantly seeing that everything is left perfectly clean, will be quite sufficient. Troubles will arise, and birds will occasionally die. These little things it is impossible for human endeavour to prevent. But other evils, that are more often than not due to our own carelessness and mismanagement, will be successfully avoided.

A Stealer of Birds.

A thief of a new genre is at present in the hands of the Paris police, says the "Morning Advertiser." Georges Riter made a speciality of stealing small caged birds from concierges' lodges. In his possession were books in which were noted the addresses of all the houses in which the porters or tenants kept birds. He was known as a bird-dealer, but the remarkably cheap prices at which he would dispose of even rare birds in the different bird markets drew attention upon him. His last bird-stealing exploit was at a house in the Rue Monfaucon. Entering into conversation with the concierge, he invented a pretext which caused her to ascend to the fifth floor. While she was absent he took two birds from a cage and placed them in little paper bags, which he secreted about his person. When arrested, no fewer than thirty bags containing birds were found upon him.

Climbing the Norwich Plainhead Tree.

By W. SPILLMAN (Devonport).

A Famous South-Country Breeder tells how the top is to be reached.

THE standard of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club leaves little or no room for improvement, but the same cannot be said of the model. It always appears to me to be minus two outer flights. Now, I am taking up my pen at the eleventh hour to put into words a picture that is highly esteemed by me. Valuable articles have appeared in the columns of CAGE BIRDS dedicated to "the Chubby Ones," which I have studied as much as any man, but I am sorry to say I have not seen eye to eye with many of the writers, and I may even term them sinners so far as the advancement of our favourite is concerned. Yes, judges as writers and lecturers are included.

Get It Into Your Eye.

We will presume that every fancier who is desirous of producing a winner has got the ideal in his mind's eye, and as you say we are to deal with the good and bad points, how to acquire the former and dispose of the latter, I meau to say just what I should without ceremony, as if I were talking to my best friend.

To get to work, let the beak be of medium size, fine in texture and clear for choice; head to be large and full throughout, with a good entrance and rise, and nicely rounded off to a short thick neck without the least hollowness, continued to the body, which should be as thick and chubby as you like, providing it is consistent with the character of the bird. Naturally, the chest must be deep, but there must be no sudden protuberances or dents, but as round as a ball, with the necessary clean-cut-away appearance behind; the sides to be beautifully rounded and the back have just a tendency to flatness rather than rise. The wings should be short and well carried, meeting at the tips, whilst the tail must be short, close, and stiff; legs to be of medium length, just showing a little thigh. The bird should stand well across the perch, and carriage should be a great consideration; the specimen should be full of life without being wild. Tightness of feather and general condition, too, play an important part. The feather should be soft and silky, and should fit without the least inclination to frill; whilst the colour should resemble that of a good deep-coloured orange.

Advice Worth the Having.

The origin of the Canary is not talked about to-day, and it would be superfluous to make mention of it here. One thing we do know: we have got Norwich Plainheads as big as ever they are wont to be, and how to maintain that size, coupled with the other great essentials that go to make a good bird, will be my sole object in giving to the world the benefit of my long experience, that it may prevent many heart-burnings and disappointments.

If I were going to start to-morrow, these are the lines upon which I should work:—I should insist on going into a noted breeder's room and have a good long chat about his birds. I should ask him to point me out his winners and the pairs from which they were bred, and I venture to say, if he is an honest, straightforward fancier, it will be a source of pleasure to do so. Just note how he pairs his birds. In an apologising sort of way, ask him if it would be too much trouble for him to show you his book that he uses during the breeding season, or you may take it for granted, if he is an up-to-date breeder, that he will keep a proper register, in which he gives every minute detail. Taking it for granted you are allowed a peep into the good things, you may accept my word for it you will come away a brighter and wiser man.

Favourably impressed with the interview, which has been an object lesson for your general well-being, you make up your mind to give your friend a trial by having three or four pairs from him, and I will predict, if you follow his advice, that you will breed winners the first time of asking. Do not forget your obligation to your tutor, and convey to your less fortunate brothers the pith of your success, that they also may have reason to sing "Fall in and follow me."

What Any Fool Can Do.

In the early part of this article I included judges as sinners to the cause, which remark I think demands an explanation. Here it is. The man who will advise the constant pairing of show birds is entirely on the wrong track. If you were to buy, say, three or four pairs of show birds and pair them without fresh introduction, why, in the same number of years you would not have half a dozen youngsters large enough for present-day competition. It is not a necessity to have a deep pocket to become a successful breeder and exhibitor, neither is it necessary to carry out half the hints that our respected friends give us. All pampering leave severely alone; feed plainly and consistently and do not be led away by any new mode of procedure if you find your present way meets all requirements. The order of the day must be size in the cocks and type and quality in the hens.

Do I hear someone say: "Why not have size in the hens?" Well, in my twenty years' experience I have only on one occasion bred anything good from a big hen. To say the least, the majority are not as good feeders as the medium-sized hens, and it stands to reason if you mate a big cock to a big hen you will naturally get birds too long in barrel. That often "abused phrase"—"a good big 'un will always beat a good little 'un"—is odious to me. Where are they? Surely they were not at the 1911 Palace Show, for if birds with good big bodies, and long at that, with heads like marbles, come under that heading, I have done. Why, any fool can breed big birds if he pairs birds in that direction, but the difficulty comes in in trying to get size in the right place. When by sheer hard work, coupled with brains, a fancier builds up a strain that produces winners year after year, surely he should reap his just reward? I am a very contented individual, and, taking things on the whole, I have been very successful.

To get on with the starting point—of taking up the variety. For the first pair I should prefer a big, high-coloured clear buff cock, especially good in head properties, for I find he has a lot to account for in that direction when mated to a marked yellow hen quite on the medium side, but typical to the letter, for short hens always keep back length in the progeny, and where they were not within the limit I should rid myself of their company. Do not ever purchase or procure hens that remind you of a Starling on the house top that is pleased with himself. Flap tails and coarseness of the feather on the hen's side especially are an abomination, and so are rock backs; or if you once concentrate snaky heads into your stock you will find this fault takes more clearing out than grafting on.

For the second pair I should have a fine large clear yellow cock and a typical marked buff hen, and one or two pairs of clears with some amount of dark blood running in their veins. My reason for using marked hens is that you breed more clears from such pairings than by using marked cocks.

In the Family Circle.

Some fanciers favour the introduction of a Crest-bred, but I do not, as feather is increased to a marked degree, and in many instances the objectionable browing crops up, and feather not of the right texture. Again, there are many Norwich Plainheads to-day that can give the Crest-bred a lead as regards entrance and size of body. Do you doubt it? Then handle them and see. Others swear by an infusion of Cinnamon blood, but I am quite content to keep within the family circle, for the chances, even in this, are quite two to one against, seeing that you forfeit type, shortness of feather, wing and tail carriage, simply for quality, of which there is plenty to be found at home.

A Parrot Lover Chats About His Pets.

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES BY THE REV. G. H. RAYNOR.

LET us begin, friendly reader, at the very beginning by enquiring as to the meaning of the familiar word "Parrot." We are told by the best authority on the origin of words, Professor Skeat, of Cambridge, that it comes into our language from the French "Parrot," of which the literal sense is "Little Peter," given to the bird as a nickname. It is also written as "Pierrot," both forms being from the French "Pierre," Peter. The fact of the French word being a term of endearment would seem to point to the probability that these birds were made pets of very long ago, and that this was the case at least some 2,000 years ago is borne out by the fact that the poet Ovid, who was born 43 years before Christ, wrote a very touching and well-known poem, of which the opening lines may be freely rendered:—

"Our Parrot, clever mimic from the East,
Is mortal, and, like you and me, will die."

To ourselves, as bird-lovers, it is deeply interesting to think that the inhabitants of this earth so many centuries ago were devotedly fond of their pet birds, and were even moved to tears at their departure, for this is what Catullus, "Tenderest of Roman poets, Nineteen hundred years ago," says, in his celebrated elegy, concerning Lesbia's Sparrow:—"Mourn, all ye Goddesses of Love, and all ye Cupids mourn; mourn, all ye sons of men that know what love is; my lady Sparrow is dead, dead; her Sparrow, my lady's pet, whom she loved more than her own eyes, for he was honey-sweet, and knew his own mistress as any girl her mother; nor would he stir from her lady's bosom, but hopping about, now here, now there, he piped his little treble to her and her alone. But now he goes along the darksome road, to that place whence they say no one returns. Alas! poor little Sparrow! Now, because of you my lady's dear eyes are swollen, they are red with weeping."

Parrots in Plenty.

But to return to our special subject, the members of the Parrot family, we are told by Mr. Seth-Smith that there are something like 500 different sorts, which are very generally distributed over the warm and tropical regions of the world. There is no country, I presume, where more kinds are to be found than in Australia, and it was during my sojourn of four years (1876-80) in that delightful land that I first took a fancy to these wonderful birds. Even so long ago as that they were hardly ever to be found in the neighbourhood of towns, but, like other natural history specimens, they had to be sought for in the bush, in forests, and in other secluded places.

The Greater Lemon-Crested Cockatoo is very common, and does considerable damage to the crops, whilst the Rosella is so abundant in many parts that it is used for the same purpose as were the four-and-twenty Blackbirds of our nursery rhyme.

They Know a Thing or Two.

Most Parrots are very wary, and consequently are not by any means easy to observe in their native haunts, so that the only feasible way of studying them is, alas! to shoot them. Consequently, I made a collection of some 200 birds, which I stuffed myself. Among these were a fair proportion of the Parrot tribe, some of which I remember very vividly.

On the Blue Mountains, some thirty miles west of Sydney, I came across my first Blue Mountain Lory, or, as it is now generally called, Swainson's Lorikeet. This is one of the most gorgeously apparelled members of the family, its body being of a brilliant green, the beak and breast bright crimson, whilst the head and centre of the breast are of the deepest purple-blue.

Never shall I forget picking up my first specimen, and seeing the life-blood trickling over its most lovely plumage. It belongs to the genus Trichoglossus, in which the tongue is furnished with bristles for the purpose of enabling it to suck the nectar from the blossoms of the Eucalyptus. Another bird that vies with this in the grandeur of its plumage I shot in the Dandenong Ranges, some twenty miles East of Melbourne. I mean the King Parrot or Parrakeet. The adult male has the whole of the head, neck, breast, and underparts bright scarlet; the back and wings are dark green, whilst the rest of the plumage is deep blue. The female, which is popularly called the Queen, has some scarlet on the flanks and abdomen, but otherwise her plumage is dark green. Mr. Seth-Smith states that it has twice been bred in England.

Experiences in Australia.

I remember very well when, in 1877, I was visiting an out of the way island in Hobson's Bay, about 100 miles south of Melbourne, firing into a flock of Grass Parrakeets as they rose from their feeding-grounds in the saltings. What species they were I can no longer recollect, but something rather good I know, for a bird-stuffer in Melbourne to whom I took three or four was immensely delighted, and eager to obtain some more. So far as I can remember, they resembled the Turquoisine, or the elegant Grass Parrakeet, of which Mr. Maxwell possesses such a splendid specimen. Australia is celebrated ornithologically both for its black swans and its black Cockatoos, and curiously enough I was equally unsuccessful in my attempts to shoot both, although in each instance I got nearly within killing range, and went so far as to expend powder and shot in vain. The former I came across on Lake Colac in Victoria, and of the latter (Banks' Cockatoo), which is of a glossy greenish-black, I saw several specimens at Bulli in the picturesque Illawarra district, 50 miles south of Sydney. The Calyptorhynchus Banksii (i.e., the above-mentioned Black Cockatoo) was far too cunning to let me shoot at him, except from a very safe distance. The wariness of this bird is indeed so proverbial that a very good tale hangs thereon. Somewhere about 1850 the Sydney Museum authorities were so anxious to secure a Black Cockatoo that they offered £5 for the first dead specimen brought to them. Many people made many vain efforts, till at last two Chinamen put their heads together, and on viewing a live specimen perched upon a gum-tree some way off one of them made a detour and drove the bird on to another distant eucalyptus behind which the second Celestial was concealed, and he made a good shot and brought the bird to earth. Whereupon these two heathen Chinese began to quarrel as to whom the bird belonged, and one grasped the tail whilst the other seized the head, with the inevitable result that there was still no representative of the Black Cockatoo in the Sydney Museum.

The Commencement of the Craze.

It was not till 1892, twelve years after my return to England, that I possessed a living Parrot, namely, a very fine cock specimen of the above-described King Parrot (Aprosmictus cyanopygius), which came to me from that well-known lover of the Parrot tribe, Canon the Hon F. G. Dutton. I was then living in a remote part of Lincolnshire, and it can easily be imagined what tremendous excitement was caused among the natives by the arrival of so gorgeous a visitor to Panton Rectory. "Billy" was in splendid plumage, and, besides whistling a couple of tunes very accurately, was an accomplished gymnast, and was altogether so graceful and sprightly as to belie most emphatically the charge of dullness some have brought against him.

By making enquiries in London I succeeded in finding him a partner—by name "Queenie." She was apparently a young bird, and in the best of feather, but the few eggs she laid were not fertile. Billy died, seemingly of old age, in 1907, and his widow was purchased by a Suffolk gentleman. Billy won 1st prize the only time he was exhibited, which was at Chelmsford in 1897. In that year I purchased a pair of Cockatiels (Calopsittacus Novae-Hollandiae), which I placed in a tarred wooden fowl-house in a sunny spot, with the result that four youngsters appeared on the scene. One of these when full-fledged turned quite black in the nest and never recovered. Of the other three, all cocks, one escaped, and presented as pretty a sight as I ever saw, flying gracefully backwards and forwards among some forest-trees in my grounds here at Hazeleigh. His flight seemed to partake of the nature of a Hawk's and Swallow's combined. Needless to say, I failed to recapture him, although he is the only Parrot I have lost of the many that have at various times escaped. The other two young cocks are still in the land of the living, and in my own possession, nor do they show any signs of ageing, although born 15 years ago.

A Bird-lover in India Seeks a Fancier Friend.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me, through CAGE BIRDS, to say that I should be very pleased to correspond with any Canary fancier in India who may care to do so. This with a view of helping each other for the benefit of the birds, and to give each other tips as to how and where to buy seeds, etc.; or anything which pertains to bird-keeping.

Prize Money at Guisborough Show.

Sir,—At the above show (Jan. 6) the prize-money offered was 8s., 4s., 2s., 1s.—half prize-money to be paid if seven or less entries. I was an exhibitor, and was awarded first in the Hawfinch class, 3rd in the Goldfinch class, and 4th in the Bullfinch class. Full prize-money was paid in the Goldfinch and Bullfinch classes, amounting to 3s. There were only six entries in the Hawfinch class; therefore I am entitled to half first prize money—4s. The secretary has only sent me 3s., so I think that there is still 4s. due to me as winner in the Hawfinch class. I have written to the secretary twice, but fail to get a reply. He still withholds this prize-money, and has not even the courtesy to reply. Perhaps some of the committee will notice this and make enquiries.

To Combat the Cold Weather.

A Cheap Hot Water Device.

Sir,—I am sending you a drawiug of a portable hot-water device (my own make) which I use for heating my bird room, which is 9ft. by 10ft., with no chimney, and a window facing north-east. The tin holds four gallons of water, and this is kept hot, almost boiling, by a common lamp, with only 1in. wick. A gallon of oil lasts me four or five days, burning night and day, and almost without any attention, only to refill with oil every third or fourth day. The flue-pipe goes through the window, and takes away all fumes from the lamp. I can regulate the heat by turning the lamp up or down. I hope my letter will help other readers who want a cheap and good hot water device.

A Dispute Concerning a British Bird Cup.

Sir,—I notice in the Feb. 3 issue of your paper that some individual signing himself "Douvres" has taken up the cudgels, and is endeavouring to mislead brother fanciers of the Kent County C.B.A. by making erroneous statements. In the first place he says that he thinks the argumentative powers of the merest novice should be sufficient to convince me that I have always been treated with justice by the Headquarters Committee of the Association. To this statement I reply that I have the greatest respect for every member of that committee, and have never had cause to disagree with their actions till this case arose, and if he is of the opinion that I have been "justly treated" over this matter, then I sincerely hope that he may have the courage of his convictions and vote in the right direction when the time arrives. He goes on to say that my contention as to having gained the highest number of points fails in the face of facts, because, providing my exhibit was admissible, I am non-suited by the new rule which was passed last year, which states that points shall not count where there is but one competitor. Well, uow, if "Douvres" had thought a little before putting his pen to paper, and had got some friend to have given him a definition of this new rule, I am positive he would never have made the statements. In the first place, if he will kindly refer to the catalogue of Canterbury Show, and turn to the class iu question, No. 123, he will see for himself that there were five other competitors besides me in that particular class. It is quite evident that he does not know the meaning of the rule. If he is under the impression, and intends to imply, that the rule was made to debar exhibitors from counting points gained in their respective classes because no other member of the association had nominated in that particular class, then I must tell him that he is absolutely wrong. The rule was framed as Mr. Wickham pointed out last week, to stop exhibitors from nominating in classes where they had got it all to themselves, or, as "Douvres" puts it in his own letter, "where there is but one competitor." Well, now, if this uew rule is to be taken to imply that there must be more than one competitor nominating in the same class before the points can count, then all I can do is to point out to "Douvres" that under this system Mr. Wickham must be "counted out" altogether, because at Dover Show, in Classes Nos. 112 and 113, and at Canterbury Show, in Classes 119 and 120, he was the only competitor who nominated in those classes; therefore, in the face of these facts and figures, he is not entitled to count one single point towards the cup.

L. A. BRETT.

Sir,—Allow me space briefly to answer Mr. Brett's letter in your next issue. Mr. Brett would like to know why I protested after admitting that nothing is mentioned in rules about selling classes. In the first place, I protested on my own behalf; secondly, to stop a recurrence of birds being nominated in selling classes, a thing not one fancier in a hundred would think of doing. Referring to the statement sent me by the Kent County C.B.A. secretary, viz., that Mr. Brett had shown in selling classes before and was prepared to prove it, this statement Mr. Brett contradicted at the meeting. The secretary said there was a misunderstanding; he thought Mr. Brett did make the statement, and was sorry for the mistake. My letter was in CAGE BIRDS before the secretary wrote and informed me of the mistake, so Mr. Brett will understand that I am not trying to make use of reports that I knew to be false. I do not know what birds Mr. Brett possesses, nor do I care; but I do say this: four British classes stood at Canterbury, and there was no reason for Mr. Brett to nominate his birds in selling classes. Mr. Brett does not know me, or he would not suggest that had he only got v.h.c. in selling class and made his aggregate two less than mine, we should not have heard anything of it. I am no "cup hunter," but I will have fair play for one and all, if possible. Immediately I saw Mr. Brett's bird nominated in selling class I wrote to the secretary and rightly protested. I do not wish to encroach on your valuable space, so will leave it to the K.C.C.B.A. members to decide who is in the right.

A Society for the "Mother Town" of the Potteries.

Sir,—I daresay when some of your readers glance at the headlines above, they will think that somebody is mad. But it is true, nevertheless, that Burslem fanciers have begun to realise that they are numerous enough to form themselves into a club. The first meeting took place at the Barnfield Inn on Feb. 1. Mr. R. Smith was appointed chairman, with Mr. Harry Hassell as vice-chairman. Mr. H. Hulme was voted treasurer, and Mr. Leonard James, sec. It was decided to hold a table show on Feb. 24, the sec. being requested to write and ask Mr. Hawley, of Yorkshire fame, to adjudicate. The subscriptions were fixed at 2s. 6d., and the next meeting is to be held on Feb. 15 at 8 p.m., at the Barnfield Inn, Pleasant Street. All fanciers are cordially invited.

The Siskin and Its Chances of Being Crossed with the Bullfinch.

Sir,—The Siskin has now become very popular with most exhibitors, especially Scotsmen, and I expect it will be to them that the credit will go of getting the first Hybrid between the Siskin and Bullie. The Siskin is a very charming little pet as a cage bird, its ways are so very captivating; and it can be taught a great many tricks if one likes to take the trouble to train it. It contrasts nicely with the other Finches in a large aviary or in a bird room. As a show bird it is very interesting, and some grand specimens are being shown. As a Hybrid breeder it has a great future before it, and I am looking forward to fanciers going in for this cross strongly this season. Siskins can at this time of year be easily got, and anyone wanting a specimen should get one at once, and especially see that it is a recently caught one. I know that a great many birds are imported from the Continent, but some can be procured which are caught in England or Scotland, so that they can be steadied down and got used to being handled. If house-moulted birds can be got, so much the better. If anyone has the chance of a large outdoor aviary, I should certainly advise him to put in some hen Bullies and cock Siskins, for I believe that with several pairs—according to the size of the aviary—this will be the way the cross will be effected. The Hybrid will be much easier to get this way than by trusting to breeding cages.

Late Entries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—I am sorry to say I had my entries returned from the Palace owing to being late, but a gentleman who sent his entries in a day later than mine had his accepted, and I see he was amongst the winners. I have supported the Palace, as well as most shows, for some years now, and it seems hard to be dropped on in this way, though I admit I was late in entering. But why pick and choose?

A Bullfinch which Flies About the Garden

And Will Not Leave Home.

Sir,—It gives me great pleasure to send you a photograph of a friend of mine with his pet hen Bullfinch perched on his finger, in the garden. I understand the bird was caught at the end of the winter, and the photo was taken during the following summer. She is very tame, and very fond of her master, and also the little dog (all appear in the photo). She is quite delighted when taken into the garden, and the first place she flies to is the currant bushes, and there she sits as happy as can be, pecking away at the young buds. This is no doubt a very fine opportunity for the bird to take her freedom, but, strange to say, although she has been left for some time in the garden, she never makes the slightest attempt to fly away, and is always willing to go back to her cage when it is held out to her. Several people who have formerly been opposed to keeping British birds in cages now agree with me that with kindness and good treatment (which I am sure every fancier gives his pets), they are quite as happy as when they are flying about in the open country exposed to all sorts of weather and hardships. Being a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE and a lover of birds, I thought this might interest other members and readers of our valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS; also help to convince some of the faddists that the keeping of birds in cages is not so cruel as they try to make it appear.

JAMES HENDERSON.

The Secret of Trapping Birds.

The Writer says it is the Food.

Sir,—I have seen inquiries made by some young fanciers how to trap birds. I have in my time taken a large number of all kinds of birds in various ways. If anyone should live in the country and has a garden, he can often take lots of birds from a double trap cage, home-made, about 18in. high and 2ft. long, with two traps and call birds at the bottom. The trap is about 9in. wide, and used either by a spring or by a piece of elastic; and it is baited with seeds (hemp, etc.), also a meal worm or two tied on, which would attract nearly all kinds of birds. I have caught in this way with call birds and hen Bullies and hen Goldfinches placed at the bottom of trap such birds as Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Chaffinches, Robins, Blackbirds, Thrushes, Nuthatches, Starlings, Linnets, Greenfinches, a Hawk which was after the call birds, a Jackdaw, all kinds of Tits (Cole, Oxeye, Blue, etc.), and many a good bird was amongst them. I also had the wire traps, oval-like, which are now illustrated by advertisers in CAGE BIRDS; it is covered when set with either leaves or fine soil. Another kind of trap I used was a large iron hoop from a tub. I placed strings across it, and from the strings I placed several dozen horse hair nooses; in the middle of the hoop I threw the cleanings-out of my birds. I also used to throw the cleanings-out into the garden on the paths all the winter; this is what attracted the birds. Here is the secret—plenty of food of all kinds put out to bring the birds to the place; then the trapping is not so difficult. I have never put down limed twigs, as I do not believe in bird lime when other methods will answer.

NIMROD.

Why Are Some Fascinating Canaries Unpopular?

A Plea for Three Declining Varieties.

Sir,—Your review of the entries for the Crystal Palace Show (published in your issue of Jan. 27) is interesting as showing how extremely popular are several varieties of Canary; but it also brings into prominence the fact (if the number of entries be any guide) that several other varieties, equally beautiful and fascinating, are not so much in favour with fanciers. Why this is so it is hard to understand, and with your permission I should like to draw attention to three of these neglected varieties which I think should certainly be more extensively bred than appears to be the case at the present time. First place must deservedly be given to the Belgian. This noble variety has much to recommend it. When standing at ease it does not present a very kingly appearance; but when worked into position the transformation is amazing; and to see a good Belgian stiffen its back as it heightens its shoulders, at the same time depressing its head, accompanied by a tremulous movement not unlike that of a Fantail pigeon, is a sight not easily forgotten, and I feel sure the bird would find favour with many more fanciers, if only they had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with its unique characteristics. It has the credit of being a somewhat indifferent feeder, necessitating the use of foster parents to rear the young; but so also has the Crest, yet this variety does not lose its popularity on that account. A good Belgian will always command a price above the average of most other varieties, and there is also the additional advantage of both Scots Fancy and Yorkshire breeders constantly looking out for Belgians to improve their stocks. As an exhibition bird a good specimen will always get into the money in the A.O.V. class, where no other class for it is provided. The second variety to which I would draw attention is the Cinnamon. This variety may perhaps claim to have the highest quality plumage of any (which is saying a lot), and those varieties which run it close in this respect probably owe their beautiful quality of feather to the presence of Cinnamon blood not very far from the surface. It is one of the most attractive varieties of Canary we have, and is, I believe, quite hardy, notwithstanding what may sometimes be said to the contrary. The best birds of this variety at the present time seem to be in the hands of quite a few fanciers, but I cannot help thinking that good stock birds could be procured, and that anyone determined to succeed with this variety could, in a few years, build up a strain which would hold its own with any other that it might meet in competition, and I am sure societies would only too gladly put a class or two for Cinnamons in their schedules if they could reasonably expect to get them filled. The third and last variety to which I would refer is the "Green Canary." This variety, as is well known, is bred in three different types, viz., Yorkshire, Norwich, and Border Fancy. The Yorkshire Green, to my mind, is the most beautiful, but whatever may be the opinion of others as to this, they all possess great beauty, and are deserving of better support by the Fancy generally than they at present receive. I think the reason why they are not more extensively bred must be that, comparatively speaking, few fanciers have had an opportunity of seeing good Greens, or I am sure more would have taken up the variety. To those who are opposed to colour-feeding, the variety affords an excellent chance to adopt a bird which does not require to be "fed" in order to stand a chance to win on the show bench, for it is quite agreed, I think, that colour-feeding spoils a Green, giving it a bronzy tinge which is quite opposed to the pure shade of green which is seen in a good specimen. Complaint is sometimes made that our shows lack variety; the addition of classes for the above three varieties would at least remove the ground for this complaint to a large extent. But it is, of course, impossible for societies to give the classes unless and until there is a genuine demand for them. At this time of the year fanciers are selecting their stocks for the coming season's breeding, and I thought this an opportune time for putting forward (feebly, I am afraid) the claims of the above three varieties, in the hope that perhaps some fanciers will endeavour to make room for a pair or two of one or other of them; and as each year there must be many beginning in the Fancy, I would urge upon them, in deciding which variety to take up, to consider whether it would not be more to their advantage to take up one of the three which I have mentioned. I cannot help thinking these varieties will some day be much more in evidence, and be more widely distributed, than they are at present, and the man who is first in the field will stand a better chance of working up a good strain than those who come along when the varieties are booming. In advocating the claims of the above three varieties only, I do not for one moment wish to infer that they are the only ones worthy of encouragement, as I well know that all varieties of Canaries are beautiful, but those which I have mentioned are the ones which appeal more to me than any which I have not touched upon

SLASHING ATTACK BY THE CHAIRMAN ON THE OPPONENTS OF BIRDKEEPING.

Enthusiastic Reception of Our Programme.

A Photograph of a few members and friends accompanies this issue.

A Splendid Success.

That was the verdict of all present at the first great annual gathering of the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE on Saturday afternoon, held at the Crystal Palace. Nearly two hundred members and sympathisers were present, many ladies amongst them, and the tea provided by Messrs. J. Lyons and Co. was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Carl occupied the chair, and in the course of his remarks, reviewed the reasons for the initiation of the LEAGUE, the work it had done during the nine months of its existence, and the work which lay before it in the future. Before the inception of the LEAGUE the professional humanitarians were becoming more and more active in their endeavours to abolish altogether the hobby of bird-keeping. Not only were they bringing actions against bird-dealers, but they were circulating the most mendacious statements as to the conditions under which birds were kept in captivity. Under the title "The other side of the bars," they had published and circulated throughout the country a pamphlet filled from end to end with the grossest of mis-statements. The avowed object of these people was to suppress the keeping of birds in captivity in any circumstances whatever.

Useful Work Accomplished.

He would not, said Mr. Carl, detain the members with any long detail, but he could not do less than point out the imperative necessity of such a body as CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE to protect the individual bird-keeper against the unprincipled attacks of prejudiced opponents. They would all have seen that their secretary, with his remarkable dialectical skill, had from time to time controverted very effectually the mis-statements made by these people. Nothing that they had said had been left uncontradicted by him. A detailed reply to their pamphlet had been drawn up and sent to every newspaper in the country. Latterly, no answers were vouchsafed to his criticisms. The length to which our opponents were prepared to go was evidenced by their action at Millom, where they had served individual bird-keepers with official notices to get rid of their birds. The Millom fanciers brought the fact to the notice of the LEAGUE, and after legal advice taken by the Secretary, the LEAGUE was able to suggest action to these fanciers which resulted in the threatened proceedings being withdrawn.

Hopes for the Future.

Mr. Carl said that he could say much more upon the matter, but would content himself by pointing out that the LEAGUE had other objects besides the defence of the hobby of bird-keeping. For instance, the establishment of a bond of good-fellowship among fanciers generally. That this was already an accomplished fact so far as the members of the LEAGUE were concerned was palpable from the gathering which he had the pleasure of seeing around him. He hoped that it was only the first of many annual meetings, each one gaining in importance. Then there was the object to be considered of inculcating the proper principles under which birds should be kept in captivity, and it was gratifying to know that very much had been done in this direction by CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. A system of granting certificates to properly kept bird-shops was in process of being carried into effect. Members could depend that their Secretary would continue to combat the misrepresentations of our opponents. Legislation was threatened in the immediate future, and this legislation, so far as it affected bird-keeping, would have to be combated. Much work lay before them, and it would all be done in due course if only bird-keepers would assist the LEAGUE by joining in their numbers and persuading others to do so as well. He would end by paying a final tribute to the valuable assistance rendered the LEAGUE by the Patrons, Vice-Presidents, etc., by expressing his appreciation of the work of Mr. Fulljames, as Secretary, and thanking the large number of members present for their attendance. He hoped to see them again in many successive years.

Mr. Swaysland proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and coupled the name of the Secretary with the same. This, having been seconded, was carried by acclamation.

The Chairman and Secretary briefly responded, and the first meeting of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE terminated, all present appearing thoroughly confident that there is a big future in store for the organisation, and unanimously resolute to achieve its aims and ideals.

Fascinating Foreign Birds at the Palace.

Hints on How to Keep Them.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., &c.

The figures on our plate—Brown's Parrakeet, Black-headed Caique, Blue-rumped Parrot, Yellow Tanager, Ribbon Finches, and Green Cardinals—include among their number only one probable first appearance on the show bench, and two of the so-called common (freely imported) species. But all were gems of their respective species, and form a pleasing variety of birds, not difficult to keep, once the prostration following importation has been overcome.

Brown's Parrakeet.

This is a beautiful Australian species (Platycercus browni), which has never been common, and, alas! is soon likely to become extinct on the bird market as soon as present supplies are exhausted, unless it can be perpetuated in English aviaries, which, as the supply is limited, is extremely doubtful. No less than four specimens were exhibited, but Mr. Edmund's fine male, from which our figure was drawn, is one of the best we have seen; its markings were clean and sharp, its colouration pure and intense, also very silky and tight. Its plumage is difficult to describe in a few words, but a reference to the plate will enable my readers to interpret the following sketchy description: General body colour pale sulphur-yellow, with black centres to the feathers of the mantle and wings; wing-coverts, flights, and outer tail feathers, bright blue on the outer webs and tips; head and neck, black, with indistinct yellowish margins to most of the feathers; cheeks, white; ventral region, red; beak, greyish-horn colour. Some individuals red on the head are washed with blue on the breast and back.

They are very pleasing birds, either for cage or aviary, but especially so in the aviary, where they are very alert and lively. They appear to resent the company of Budgerigars, and show this by an occasional murder. And they are very hostile to birds of the Finch, Bunting, or Thrush tribes, and show their resentment as above, as opportunity offers. The colonists call them the "Smutty Parrakeet," a name it certainly does not deserve, for, gorgeous as many of the Platycerci are, in the writer's opinion, the subject of these notes is as beautiful as any.

Treatment: A seed mixture, half the bulk of which consists of canary and white millet seed, and the other half of oats, hemp, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in about equal proportions. Also such varieties of fruit as it will eat, green food (chickweed, lettuce, green oats, and other cereals and seeding grasses), grit and cuttlebone. Some speak of them as uninteresting and also unintelligent. In a cage this may possibly be true, and I have never come across a talking Brown's Parrakeet. In the aviary they certainly are not lethargic, but are active and vivacious the greater portion of the day. Protected from draught, this species is hardy and enduring.

Black-headed Calque.

A fine specimen of this species (Caica melanocephala) was exhibited by Mr. L. W. Hawkins, and a richer or tighter feathered specimen we do not remember to have seen. It is a native of Guiana and the Amazon region, and is a very gaily clad bird: green above, tail feathers tipped with yellow, wing primaries and primary coverts black, the former having the outer webs green edged with blue; crown, black; cheeks and throat, bright yellow; lores and streak below the eye, green; breast and abdomen, creamy-white; under tail coverts, yellow; thigh, golden orange; beak, naked ring round eye, and feet, black.

This handsome and intelligent bird is by no means common, yet it is a most desirable acquisition. With careful training some individuals, at any rate, should make good talkers. They soon become tame and fearless, so much so that instances are on record of their following their owners about like a dog. But, like its congener, the Hawk-headed Caique, the temper of individuals is very variable.

GOSSIP FROM THE PALACE SHOW.

While making our way back through the Centre Transept we heard a familiar note, and, looking round, saw a Robin sitting on the stem of one of the tropical palms and singing in spite of the constant passing and repassing of visitors within a few feet of his perch.

The True Sporting Spirit.

"Personally I have not much to boast of at the present show; but if I have not been successful to-day, I shall try again another year. If defeated, we can all be Englishmen and come up again."—Mr. E. Baker, President of the S.N.P.C., at its annual meeting.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Mrs. Askham, of Wimbledon, the well-known exhibitor and breeder of Canary-Bullie Hybrids, is on a holiday trip to the East. She determined not to part with her pets, however, and arranged to have them taken care of during her holiday. One of her favourites was shown and secured third prize at the Palace.

From Taffyland.

A jolly party from South Wales journeyed up to the show in spite of the weather and the Rugger International played on Saturday at Swansea. They did the show thoroughly, and were still at it (or somewhere near it) at a late hour, when we left. We hope they arrived home safely. They looked a bit weary, but so happy!

A Puzzle in Yorkshires.

One fancier stood a long time in front of two birds trying to make up his mind which to purchase. One was a young 'un, and the other a two-year-old. The latter was a shade the better, but the purchaser argued that the youngster might grow, and decided to have him. We hope he made no mistake, especially as he wanted the bird for stock, to pair to young hens.

The "Wee Gems."

Southern admirers of the "little 'uns" were hugely delighted at the grand display of their pets. We overheard many methods of mating to produce such charmers, but winners are not bred from every pair, and are quite as difficult to get as in some of the larger and more expensive varieties. A grand hen was claimed by a southern novice for two guineas. We wish him luck.

Five Shillings for a £5 Bird.

No, dear reader, it was not bought for five shillings, nor sold for five pounds; but sent on approval for the bigger figure. But somehow the gentle railway company which carried the prize-winner managed to smash both cage and bird in transit, and all the owner obtained was five shillings for a valuable specimen that had scored more than one win. Moral: Insure, if only for a small amount. It is much safer.

Cinnamons Wanted.

We met several fanciers looking for fair-priced Cinnamons, but evidently the demand exceeds the supply, for we were told by one well-known Norwich breeder who desires to take up the "chocolate ones" that he fears another season will go by without his being able to get what he is looking for. Does he expect too much for his money; or are the breeders of Cinnamons determined to keep them?

What are the Odds?

It is always interesting to watch the doings of a certain bird upon the bench. A grand uearly green Yorkshire belonging to a popular amateur has gradually worked its way to the front. Seconds and thirds have been its position in the open classes up to the present, bnt the odds are heavy about its coming out on top eventually. The doings of this bird should be particularly gratifying to the owner, as he bred it himself.

If You Win, What Matters?

If you can breed winning Canaries, does it matter how you do it? One fancier who has been well in the money picked his birds up quite "promiscuous like," and, having no cages, knocked some up out of soap boxes (or was it sugar boxes?), and in these bred some real good birds. We did hear it whispered that he borrowed the show cages to exhibit them in! But we don't believe that; it must be a yarn set about by the man he beat.

"Wrong Classed."

One of the most amusing things at a bird show is the curiosity of some fanciers respecting the wrong-classing of an exhibit. One fancier we know puzzled himself all day on Friday, and nearly drove himself and friends mad on Saturday wondering why a certain bird was wrong-classed. Finally one of our staff, in confidence over a cup of tea, suggested it might probably be a cock bird in a hen class. And he had never thought of that!

Encouraging the Novice.

The Novice Border men are delighted at getting a class or two all to themselves here and there, as they have done this season. At the Palace they chirped quite loudly around their pets. They hope to see even better classification provided for them at the Glass House in the future, which no doubt Friend Ramsden will attend to. Comparing some of their birds with the champions, one is inclined to think there is no more difference between them than there is in other varieties 'twixt novice and champion.

Visitors from Abroad.

We heard that two gentlemen from distant parts—one from the South of France and one from South Africa—were present, and thoroughly enjoyed the grand display. The South African gentleman timed his visit to the Old Country so that he could see the bird show—a sufficient proof of his keenness as a bird-lover.

Summer in Winter.

The call-note of that summer visitor, the Grasshopper Warbler, and the song of the Nightingale, are seldom heard at this time of the year, in the midst of frost and snow; and still more rare is it to hear the song of the little gem from India, the Sunbird. Yet these birdie expressions of content were in evidence at the Palace, despite the arctic weather conditions.

Pardonable Pride!

"Actions speak louder than words," said a lover of the White Canary at the show. "Last year the men in the A.O.V. class grumbled because the White Canary won, and now, this year, when Whites are given a class to themselves, and the A.O.V. men have a clear field, we muster nine entries and they muster—nil! Even the Cinnamon Crests have but two entries in a class all to themselves."

Buying Experience.

One lady visitor purchased an expensive Yorkie, and afterwards asked one of our representatives to tell her what it was, as she was not sure whether it was a yellow or a buff. Fortunately, it was the quality of feather she was looking for to breed into her birds at home. She is determined to have some good ones. We wish her the best of good fortune, and hope she will not find her experience dearly bought.

The Energetic Manager.

In spite of the weather and the hard work of previous days, Mr. Ramsden turned out in good time on the Sunday morning and personally inspected every cage and bird, and saw that all his charges were comfortable and properly fed and watered. For which energy we know exhibitors from a distance will be truly thankful. The birds gave proof of the attention of himself and staff by their good condition at the end of the show.

Under the White Rose.

ONCE again the Great National Show at the Crystal Palace is to be reckoned as a past event. Wishes and yearnings have been settled, successfully or otherwise, the successful ones to live on their success and the others to steel their hearts for another try next year. No doubt we profit by our failures; many say we learn more by failures than by successes.

A GLIMPSE through the Palace catalogue at once shows that the usual number of first prizes in the Yorkshire Section have not come, as formerly, to the county from which it takes its name. Blackpool air seems to have scored a few points; perhaps another year some will be sent to that bracing climate to condition up a bit. Still, Sandy Lane-cum-Chellow Dene ozone has not done bad, and the Bolton Woods (I was going to say perfume) seems to agree with the birds so far as keeping up in condition counts. The novices have not done bad; they get a nice little cut in amongst the prizes, and in the British bird and hybrid sections the county of broad acres has done remarkably well, the new firm doing much to uphold the prestige, and good support has been given them by several others. Taking the show throughout, we White Roseites—or "Tykes," as some call us—have held our own another time.

THE annual distribution for the Yorkshire Union and all the various Specialist Clubs has been arranged to take place on the second Saturday in March, at the usual place, the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, and it is hoped it will be as successful as usual. There has been some talk of getting a larger place, and a small delegation visited the most likely rooms; but nothing very satisfactory could be found, except at a fairly large cost, and as the evening has always been free, and the committee could not see their way to make a charge, it has been decided again to have the usual rooms. A good concert is being arranged, and the prizes will be quite equal to, if not better than, the usual. Don't forget to keep the date open.

LAST week I mentioned the frost. Little did I think we should have a full week of it, and still likely to go on. Every day water glasses are frozen up, and it takes courage to stop in the bird room for an hour, the thermometer registering several degrees of frost. But the poor birds outside are faring badly; they seem as badly put to it for water as for food. A plate of dinner scraps, potatoes, puddings, etc., will cause such a fight if you put one out, and it is a treat to see it.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

About Seeds and Foods.

A. N.—(1) Most oily seeds must certainly deteriorate by keeping, more or less, but it really depends very largely upon the manner of storage how long they might be kept, and still used with safety. As long as the outer husk remains entire, and the kernel remains sweet and free from mustiness or rancidity, I should say the seed was quite safe to use. Rape is better for being properly stored for a year before use, and probably remains good longer than almost any other oily seed. All the rest you name, hemp, linseed, niga, and maw, are better used without such storage. No definite limit of time for keeping could be stated to suit all conditions. (2) In practice German rape and summer rape are synonymous terms used to indicate the small brownish red rape with a mild and nutty flavour. So-called winter rape is charlock, ketlock, or wild mustard, as it is variously called, and black rape is generally cole seed. To go into details of all the varieties is quite beyond the limits of this column. See "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds," which our manager will send you post free for 1/2. (3) Again, it depends solely upon the manner of storage how long egg-foods will keep in good condition. Personally, however well kept, I should not care for them after, say, twelve months old. You can never tell the age of these proprietary articles, for which reason, whenever they are used, it is wisest to get the supply direct from the makers. They should be mixed fresh twice a day. How long they will keep before going sour depends upon the prevailing weather, the atmosphere in the cages, and the nature of the food whether any preservative is used in making. Really, my dear sir, these queries are a trifle indefinite.

Loud Singing Rollers.

An Old Reader.—As a rule there is no great effort required to get a train of loud singing Rollers. On the contrary, the trouble is to keep them sufficiently soft and low, and if no effort is made to do this the birds will, if allowed a free hand, as it were, a liberal dietary similar to other fancy breeds, and always kept in a good light, develop a song sufficiently loud for anyone with a bent in this direction quickly enough. But with connoisseurs of high class song this type of Roller will not go down, and as it is always present among the lower grade of cheap Rollers it seems almost waste of time to make special efforts to cultivate a strain. Still, if you find a demand for such a type, you should have no difficulty at all in breeding it, by adopting the line suggested above, and contenting yourself with consistently weeding out "choppers," and birds with similar undesirable notes. You need at least one more cock to add to your present stock. Get a so-called Seifert or St. Andreasburg, a clear for preference. You do not say what any of your Rollers are—yellow or buff—but the introduced cock should be the opposite colour to the hens. Mate the original cock No. 1 with his last year's mate, No. 2, again, and also with the wing-marked hen, No. 3, and the fresh cock mate either with the other two Rollers, Nos. 4 and 5, or with the green-marked, No. 5, and the Yorkshire hen. You will thus have to run each cock alternately with two hens. By using the Yorkshire hen you can keep the type of song you desire, and will get an improved type of bird in size and appearance. By judiciously mating the young from each cock with each other, and breeding back again to these cocks, you will be able to go on two or more seasons without fresh blood. You will find more details how to proceed in Part XVI. of "Our Canaries."

Outdoor Birdroom.

Rito.—Before setting out to erect this proposed birdroom, let me advise you to consider seriously whether you can manage another 18in. of space in the width, thereby making it 8ft. by 6ft. Just consider, you have only 4ft. 6in. from back to front. Now, say the cage, which should be arranged along the back, takes up 12in. of this space, which they certainly will do, or rather more when the drinkers and seed hoppers are taken into consideration, you will have barely more than 3ft. of space to move about in, and you cannot go into the room without being cramped for space and almost brushing along the cage fronts besides. The extra space suggested would be a very great convenience. The window you should put in the middle of the front, not close up to one end. You should make an outlet for foul air at the highest part: either a louvre on the highest part of the roof, or suitable apertures in the highest part at each end would do, and an inlet for fresh air should be provided near the floor in the centre of the front, with a suitable cover inside to divert the current and prevent it going direct to the cages. If the back wall is structurally sound and dry, there is no necessity to cover it with boards, assuming, of course, that it belongs to your place. In this case you should give it two or three good coats of whitewash, instead of tar. You should keep your birds in the coldest part of the kitchen, consistent with freedom from draught and great fluctuations; that you could safely transfer them to the outdoor room in about a month hence, and during a spell of nice mild weather.

Initial Experiences?

Crown.—Your letter is certainly not very clear. Am I right in thinking the cage in which the bird was bought was infested with red mites and the bird in bad plumage and bare on rump? If this was so you did right in clearing out the insects, and you should continue to give the bird a bath with a few drops of quassia essence in it twice a week for a short time, and also touch the ends of the perches with the same fluid occasionally. I suppose you mean you applied goose-grease to the bare places on the bird. I fail to see the necessity for this, unless the bare places were sore or inflamed, in which case a little cold cream or Lanocyllin would have been better. Still, the goose-grease, if properly applied in moderation, would have no harmful effect. The reproduction of blue feathers on the rump is quite a novelty. By the bye, what is the general shape of the bird, particularly the beak and feet, and arrangement of claws as it perches? I ask this, because I really have some little doubt of its species. Pending more particulars, you might give a staple diet of plain canary seed, with a pinch of rape every second day, and a little mixed seed twice a week. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food for a week. There is no reason why you should not breed with it if it comes into proper breeding condition. You would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our manager would send you post free for 7d. It will prevent you making many mistakes in the beginning.

Makes Whistling Sound (An Ignoramus).—The hen seems badly affected with asthma, and I doubt its permanent recovery. Closely follow the instructions given to "Anxious" for a month, and then report progress, when I will advise further, if necessary.

Partial Moult (Breeder).—If the bird keeps in such good condition and song as you describe, there is no reason whatever why he should not breed successfully. It would not be wise to try to force him into a moult, unless he showed some signs of starting to finish the moult voluntarily. This question is fully dealt with in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which you should not fail to see.

Taking Life Easily (Constant Reader).—I am inclined to think there is little, if anything, wrong with the birds, and you ought to have said how you fed them, etc. Give a staple of plain canary seed only. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week on the alternating days a similar quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On each of the remaining days give a spray of watercress or tender young dandelion, if obtainable in good condition. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food for a few days. If not well in a fortnight, write again.

Greenhouse Aviary (Cumbra).—If, as I presume, the greenhouse is fairly well sheltered by other buildings, your alterations will leave none too much glass. I should, however, advise you to board over the glass in topmost section of the end facing South instead of the lower section marked on sketch, and if ventilation apertures do not already exist at or near the ridge of the roof, you should provide same in the highest angle at each end. I suppose part of the glass front is made to open; if not, it would be an advantage to have it made so, and the space covered with netting, so that you could open these "lights" in very hot weather. For use in winter, movable shutters for the front would also prove invaluable. The method of transferring your birds which you suggest would be an excellent one.

Sores on Head (L. M. Nicholls).—You should carefully examine the cage for red mites, and the bird itself for signs of grey lice, and if either of these pests are present clear them out. Give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed three times a week for two or three weeks, and add 20 drops of whiskey and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece to its water twice a week during same time. Anoint the bare spot sparingly twice a week with Lanocyllin. It is not very uncommon for sores to develop in this way on the progeny of double-Crest pairs. Is this the case with yours?

Eats and Sleeps (T. T., Glasgow).—Treat as follows for two or three weeks: Staple diet plain canary only. In addition give separately half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for a fortnight a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a spray of green food if obtainable in good condition, three times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea for two days, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. If not better at end of fortnight, write again, referring to this reply, and repeat particulars.

Makes Pitiful Noise (Seifert).—What kind of a noise is it—a wheeziness connected with its breathing, squeak of alarm, or what? Try following treatment, and if it does not quickly improve, write again and give these particulars. Give plain canary only as a staple diet. Every second day give separately a pinch of rape and a morsel of banana, and the alternate days a piece of stale bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled lightly with soft sugar. Also give a pinch of maw on these days. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niga, millet, and teazle. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards the gentian mixture as advised to "T. T., Glasgow," for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary. Keep cage and perches quite clean, strew floor with gritty sand, and see that bird is free from draughts and extreme fluctuations. The seeds sent are both of very good quality.

Arrangement of Bird-room (S. G. McCoubrey).—It took me quite a long time to make anything of your sketch, which is somewhat difficult to understand. If you try another any time, do not try to show thickness of walls. I take it your breeding cages will be of the usual box pattern, in which case you should arrange them chiefly on the wall opposite window between the door and fireplace. As the latter is never in use there will be practically no risk of the birds in box cages being affected by draughts. You might also, if required, add a few breeding cages on the North-West wall at the right-hand side of door, as shown on sketch. The 5ft. flight you should place on the right-hand side of the fireplace. Instead of making this flight 4ft. high, I would advise you to make it only 3ft., which will still be a nice height, and you can then place it on a staging 10in. or 12in. high, and place another similar flight on top of it if you wish to increase your accommodation later on.

Moving Birds (No Nom-de-plume).—If you move the birds from a very warm room to a very cold one at this season you will probably throw them into moult. When this spell of severe weather passes, move the birds into the coolest part of the room where they now are, but see they are not exposed to draughts or very great fluctuations. Keep them there until about the middle of March, and then take advantage of a spell of nice mild weather between that time and April to move them to the cold room where you are going to breed with them. Do not actually put them together until you have completed the change of quarters.

How to Mate (Cinnamon-Green).—In these days it is practically impossible to predict the result of crossing green and cinnamon blood in the Yorkshire, because the latter blood is so generally diffused through the breed that it is almost impossible to tell whether any given bird is potentially green or tinctured with cinnamon blood. Therefore I can only say what in my opinion you may reasonably expect in the circumstances named, and do not dogmatise, especially as you omit to say how any of the birds have been bred. If the clear hen, No. 2, is pink-eyed, mate her by all means with No. 1, Cin.-marked cock. The produce will be Cin.-marked and ticked and clear pink-eyed. If you mate No. 1 with Cin.-ticked hen No. 4, the produce will be Cin.-ticked, more or less heavily, and unevenly-marked, with a smaller proportion of Cin.-marked and clear pink-eyed. If the green-marked cock No. 3 has no Cinnamon blood in him—a rather unlikely circumstance—the result of mating with No. 4 hen will be green selfs and variegated. It is not a suitable union, and you would do better to replace him with a suitable Cin.-bred cock, or to work No. 1 cock with both the hens alternately.

CANARY QUERISTS,

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Strains and Shakes (Glensides).—You ought to have said how you feed the bird. The fault probably lies in its dietary, in which case this should be corrected. Get the Nutshell booklet on the "Canary," or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," see inset, for detailed information on this point. For the present cut all hemp and linseed out of the dietary. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea in its drinking water every second day for a week, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for the next week. Break open a grape and fix on the end of its perch for it to peck at for a few days.

Mating and Sex (J. Goodchild).—(1) It is clear the birds were not so forward as you imagined. That is the reason they simply carry the stuff about the cage and make no serious attempt to build a nest. You ought not to have put them together just yet. It is impossible to say how long they will be before seriously settling to work. It depends solely upon their condition and the warmth of your kitchen. If they have made no better start now, separate them for two or three weeks. (2) I am inclined to think both these birds are cocks. Feed them up as if for mating for three or four weeks, then try the supposed hen beside a real known hen, and if it feeds or sings to her you may pretty safely decide it is a cock. It is quite possible for anyone to be deceived in the sex of individuals occasionally. A vendor is not very likely to knowingly send a cock for a hen. If the bird should prove a hen, its singing will be no material bar to its breeding.

How to Know (J. E. Wood).—An unflighted bird is one that has not yet dropped the flight feathers and tail which it acquired in the nest. These feathers are not moulted at the first moult. They are a little shorter, and a trifle narrower in web than the adult feathers will be, and if the bird has been colour-fed these feathers are, of course, not affected, but retain the natural colour, which is quite a washed-out sort of greeny yellowish-white in comparison with the coloured plumage. The feathers under the wings are no index whatever to a flighted or unflighted bird. There is no means of ascertaining the real age of an adult bird, but large coarse scaly legs and feet indicate the shady side of life. Some birds, however, get coarse, scaly feet earlier than others, though not before a few summers have passed.

A Singing Roller (Esperance).—There is no importance to be attached to the vast array of trade names for these birds. Get a trained, soft-singing St. Andreasberg, Seifert, or Leipzig. It is immaterial what name it goes by. Ask to have it sent on approval, depositing the cash with our Editor, as per rules. Then you will hear bird sing before closing the deal, and cannot be deceived by having something unsuitable. You should get a nice singer for the price you name, but it will not be the highest class of these birds by any means. If properly treated, they will retain their song a number of years. They are more apt to get loud when kept among other birds in open cages. It is not really necessary to keep them in closed boxes. These are very useful to help to keep the birds soft and low, but are used chiefly for highly trained contest singers. The box type of cage—that is, a cage with wire only in front—is the best for general use, and 12in. long, 14in. high, and 7in. deep is a nice size for a singing bird. They enjoy a bath same as other varieties. Get the Nutshell booklet on the "Roller" for full details about feeding and general treatment.

Not Singing (H. M. S.).—The "small red fleas"—which are really red mites—must be exterminated as a first step. Place bird temporarily in another cage, and whilst there offer a bath daily in which a few quassia chips have been soaked overnight. Thoroughly overhaul and clean his ordinary cage, well washing it all over with a solution of Jeyes'—two teaspoonfuls of the fluid in half a pint of water—and using a small paint brush to work it well into all joints and crevices. Repeat once or twice at intervals of a day each time. Then drop a drop of the pure fluid into each crack or joint, and when dry repaint, distemper, and varnish, if necessary. When quite dry the bird may be returned. Do not omit attention to wall, nail, etc., where cage is hung. Keep in a comfortable and equable temperature, and feed for a month as already advised.

Irritable (M. H.).—If you have not already done so, probe joint of door with a pin and remove perches and examine the ends, and if you discover any red mites deal with them as advised to "H. M. S." Give a staple diet of plain canary for a month. In addition, give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana every second day. On the alternate days give a scrap of bread and milk, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur in the first week, and afterwards with two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it each time, and each time finally sprinkled with maw seed. Give a pinch of the mixed seed once or twice a week. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a small pinch of Epsom salts to its water for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. See that bird is kept in a comfortable and equable place, quite free from draughts and fumes of burning lights in the evenings.

Makes a Noise (Anxious).—The bird is probably in a bad way with asthma, and beyond much material help. Keep it in a cosy and equable temperature, not overheated, nor yet on the cold side, but quite free from draughts, extreme variations, and the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Feed generally as frequently advised here or in the Nutshell booklet on the "Canary," but give a pinch of maw about every second day, and for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it three times a week. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece every second day for a week, and afterwards fifteen drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will supply, two days in every three until better. Mixture: Two drams each of oxymel of squills and ipecac. wine, one dram each chlorodyne and chloric ether, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. You should not breed with this bird unless it makes a complete recovery.

Border Hen and Baldness (Serin).—(1) I'm afraid the hen is getting beyond help, as she has made no improvement. Alter the treatment a little, and try the following for a month. Then report result. Keep it in a fairly warm place, not overheated, but still quite away from the cold side, and see that the warmth is fairly equable. Continue the same general dietary, but instead of the sponge cake give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in milk, drained, two drops of a mixture of equal parts cod liver oil emulsion and syrup of iodide of iron on it, and sprinkled lightly with soft sugar. Give this twice a week, and on each remaining day, when not giving rape, give a quarter teaspoonful of maw. In the drinking water give fifteen drops of the mixture advised to "Anxious" three times a week. As you cannot tell whether the bird moulted at proper season, I cannot advise you to try to force on a moult. (2) The open wire cage and draughts are probably largely responsible for the loss of feathers. See that the latter and extremes of heat and cold are avoided. Give a scrap of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, three times a week for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw. Slightly moisten the bare patch twice a week for a month with Lanocyllin. In the water give the same medicine as the Border hen for a fortnight.

Hen Calling and Wheeziness (E.H.H.).—(1) The manner in which the cock behaves, pecking at your finger, etc., is an indication of tameness rather than breeding form, although he is doubtless coming forward nicely. Still, I see no reason for you to mate him for a few weeks to come, when the season will be more suitable. The way the hen calls seems a natural response to the cock, and will not affect the song of the young. It is not natural for the chest of the cock to very clearly indicate its breathing, though a slight motion sometimes may be of no importance. If it is continuous, or exaggerated, give it the aperient mixture advised to "T. T., Glasgow," for two days. (2) See that the Crest-bred cock is kept in a cosy and equable temperature, quite free from draughts, and give it the medicine advised to "Anxious" for a fortnight or so until better.

Birds seeing each Other (Silverdale).—It is not true that two cocks will not sing so long as they see each other. There are certain individuals which act in this way, maybe they are shy, but they are the exception rather than the rule. Some birds are incited to sing more than is good for them by the presence of a rival singer. If you move the Mule into the window recess and the effect is to stop both birds singing, they would begin again on being returned to their old positions. By the way, the window recess seems a very unlikely place for the temperature to be more equable than elsewhere. Of course it all depends upon the particular spot, and I take it you are quite satisfied that it is, as you say, the most equable place.

Deformed Toe and Mating (F.A.M.).—(1) You omit to say which toe it is, and how long the trouble has existed. If the deformity has lasted a few months do not interfere with it, especially seeing that bird perches without difficulty. If of recent occurrence, get Part vii. of "Our Canaries," which explains and illustrates different methods of treating such injuries. (2) You ask if a "C. yellow cock" would be a suitable mate for a buff cinnamon hen. The most important point is hidden behind that "C." If you mean a cinnamon yellow cock the reply is certainly; if other points, such as size, shape, markings, and quality of feather, are also suitable. But if you mean a clear yellow cock then it depends upon whether it is green or cinnamon-bred. If the latter, it will be pink-eyed, when the above reply would again apply here. If green-bred, with no cinnamon blood, you would get nothing but greens, self, broken, and variegated in all probability. See reply to another query on this subject this week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Grey and Amazon Parrots.

Thos. Williams.—Yes, most Parrots are fond of sunflower seed, but it would not be well to let them indulge ad lib thereon. The following will be a good mixture to suit your birds:—2 parts each canary, white millet, oats, and sunflower seeds, and 1 part each paddy rice, hemp, and wheat: well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Add a little maize to the daily supply of seed for the Amazon. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, and green food. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. I prefer white sunflower seed to any other variety. The chillies sent are an average sample and all right. Byno-phosphates would be a better tonic than port wine.

An Ailing Amazon.

J. Holmes.—You give me no idea how this bird has been generally fed and treated. Give it every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls). Stop the cold mixture for a week, at any rate, and see how it goes on. Get a box of honey and borax, and put a little into its mouth once or twice daily, with either a quill or camel-hair brush, which must be cleansed after use. In addition to the usual dietary of seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts, give a little boiled maize daily, prepare so: boil till soft (grain should remain whole), strain off all water, spot over it half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates, and when cool supply to the bird. Note: it only keeps fresh one day—a tablespoonful should be sufficient for the day's supply. A pinch of grit should be added to the daily supply of seed, and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept hanging in the cage. Report progress a fortnight hence. Of course, if the bird becomes scoured you must stop the magnesia till voidings become normal again, and then give as required.

For Outdoor Aviary.

F. P.—See reply to "Whiskers," but you have not room for all these. Be content with two pairs of Budgerigars, and one pair of Cockatiels, as your aviary is but small, and as these birds only require seed, greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water, they will give you as little trouble as any birds you can keep. Note: though they will agree fairly well together, I expect the Budgies will occasionally amuse themselves by breaking a Canary's leg or wing. Get Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, it will help you. You must not put out newly imported or indoor birds till late April or early May; if you do, most of them will promptly die. The alterations you are making in aviary will tend to the comfort of the birds. In so small an aviary only the front and one end should be open netting, the back and roof would be better boarded in, but a window (covered with netting on the inside) must be inserted where necessary to keep it light. The front of shelter would be better boarded up, leaving an opening 4ft. high, by 1½ft. wide, for the birds and yourself to get in and out at. Hope I've made all clear.

Parrakeets and Budgerigars.

Whiskers (1): The Moustache Parrakeet has the whole of upper half of body darkish grass-green; nape and back of neck brighter green; head and cheeks, yellowish-grey; throat and breast, vinous-red, remainder of under-surface yellowish-green; a broad black moustache streak adorns the lower part of the face, and a narrower black streak extends across the forehead to the eye; beak, red; feet, greyish-pink. (2) The Madagascar Lovebird, sometimes called Grey-headed, is bright green; the whole of the head of the male is a sort of delicate pearl-grey, that of the hen is all green. General: If you supply a mixture of canary and white millet in equal parts, and another mixture of oats, paddy-rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; millet sprays occasionally, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit (dry), greenfood, with, of course, grit, cuttlebone, and water, it will meet the needs of all your birds. In an aviary with a flight of 10 x 12 feet, and a small shelter, I kept together with other birds, Budgerigars, Madagascar Lovebirds, Cockatiels, Rosella and Moustache Parrakeets, and they agreed together perfectly. The Madagascar does not always survive a severe winter out of doors—the others are perfectly hardy.

What Bird (L. Morris).—I am sorry I cannot give you a really definite reply, but it appears to me that your bird is one of the South American Jays, of which there are several, which come very near to the description you give me—so near to each other, that it is very difficult to distinguish them save from a very minute, technical description; but I am keeping your query by me, and next time I am at the museum I will look the group up and insert a further reply. But there is little doubt but what it is one of the Green Jays. A rough outline of the bird, as nearly proportionate as you can make it as regards the respective parts—that is, beak, head, body, and tail, would prove of great assistance to me in finally defining the species.

"Cussedness" of Hen Budgerigars (A.M.).—Young hens are often guilty of this practice during their first year, and, moreover, it would appear that they are not yet thoroughly settled down, and their instinct prompts them against nesting in such weather. I do not think you need be at all anxious, for I expect the birds will duly choose a husk in the spring, and rear you some young birds. Yes, some kind of screen partially shielding the husks will be an advantage. If mice find their way into the husks, they will drive out the birds. Ordinary movement should not scare them. I have known Budgies rear their young in a small all-wire cage in a bird dealer's shop.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Foster Parents.

P. W. Street.—You are certain to need foster-mothers. It is not absolutely necessary to find foster-mothers for them. Give them a nest and some building material, and they will, when they feel they must (so to speak), put up a nest and commence to sit. It hurries them up, however, when one permits them the attentions of some high-conditioned, pushful male bird. I always found hen Mules—most of mine were small to average-sized Goldie-Canaries—devoted mothers and excellent feeders. A lot of latitude is permissible in the changing of the eggs, etc. I have put eggs under a hen Mule which have hatched out after she has been sitting but three or four days, and she has fed and brought up the young quite as if that were the usual thing. They are not particular as regards sitting a day or two over time, either. Young, common German hen Canaries make good foster-mothers, too; likewise Border Fancy hens; and both are cheap. I would advise you, as a beginner, to go in for Canary hens, young healthy birds.

Good Thrush Food Wanted.

Bermondsey.—Some packet foods are very good, but if the cheaper kinds be used, I like to vary them, or even to add something else as a regular thing. The cheapest satisfactory way which I have discovered is to get a bag of some good brand of puppy meal, or dog meal, such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox," from a corn dealer's, thoroughly soften this with hot water, then mix into it some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture; it should leave the finished food just crumbly moist. You will soon find the right quantity of each to use for the daily supply (it must be made fresh daily), and find it very cheap. Variety is good, of course, and you should give some vegetable or green food with it frequently, used as grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some live insects, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. If necessary, crush the "Melox," or whatever brand of dog cakes or food you use.

More About Muling.

New Reader, Manchester.—I am a stickler for roomy breeding cages, and know from experience they are far and away the best. A cage which is only cheap because of its very small size, is in reality very dear to any fancier, and the sooner the young fancier realises this the better it will be for him. My minimum length for a single muling cage is 20 inches, and 24 inches is a much better size. Any yellow Norwich hen should be a grand mate for a Linnet; you could not get a better kind. When the Linnet is in stout song, and his beak has turned a distinct deep slate-blue colour, you will know he is quite fit for breeding purposes. The hen, when ready, will be noticed bouncing vigorously from perch to perch, flapping her wings, and frequently calling in a shrill voice. Give her a little wool, nesting moss, or even a little teazed-out string, and she will carry it about in her beak, and be looking all over the cage for something to pop it in so as to commence to nest. When you see these signs, you can start your hen off with confidence.

Breeding Goldie Mules.

T. F. Smith.—As you have a double breeding cage, run the wired slide down the centre, leaving the Goldfinch on one side, and the hen Canary on the other. When the Goldie is in breeding condition and vigorous song, they will not take long to strike up an acquaintanceship. Probably he will commence to sing to her through the partition wires; also to feed her. These are the first signs of an "understanding." When you notice these things, put a few coarse pieces of material (moss) out of a nest-bag into the hen's compartment. If she commences to carry these about in her beak, you can hang in the nest-pan (or box), giving her at the same time a little more nesting material. Should she carry the latter into the nest-pan, and appear bent on nest building in earnest, hang the nest-bag up against the wires, or put it in the nesting rack, if you use those appliances. First thing next morning (the earlier the better) withdraw the centre partition, letting the Goldie run with the hen. If you retire quickly and discreetly on the other side of the room, you will no doubt see the hen "call" to the Finch, and he, if really in breeding condition, is not likely to lose any time in doing the needful towards ensuring fertile eggs. Keep an eye on the Finch at first, until you learn his disposition. Some pull the nest about, and some will put their beaks through the eggs when laid. Such birds should be run with the hens only for an hour or two each morning and for a short time in the evening, too, being shut off during the day, and entirely (with the solid wood partition) as soon as the hen commences to sit. This procedure applies equally well to all Finches, besides Goldies. Don't "rush" the hen Canary; the Goldie will be weeks yet before he is ready to mate with her.

Fresh-caught Linnets.

Puzzled.—It is a pity you have lost the birds. Are you quite sure, however, that they were in really good condition when you got them? It is evident that some of them were, seeing that three are alive and well. But a long train journey often upsets newly-caught birds. Fresh-caught specimens should always be kept in cages with inside seed troughs and water vessels, so that their food is directly under their noses, so to speak. I prefer to give them a few days in a cage resembling a catcher's store cage, with canvas top; such is very useful to get them well on to seed, and over the first stages of captivity. Keep them in a quiet, well-lighted spot. The great mistake most fanciers make when buying fresh-caught seedeaters, is to condemn them at once to a diet of dry, hard seed. The sudden and complete change upsets them. I have often dealt with this matter. Fresh-caught Linnets should have soaked seed of some kind (such as soaked rape). For their stock food mix one pint of each of best canary, and sound, ripe teazle, with half a pint each of genuine summer rape, linseed, and charlock seeds. In addition to the stock mixture, in a separate dish I give an unlimited supply of maw seed and ulger, also lightly cracked hemp seed. These I gradually discontinue, arranging to drop them altogether after the birds have been in my possession twelve or fourteen days. As green food (or "soft-seed" food), I provide summer rape soaked in cold water until just commencing to germinate (dabbing it dry in a towel before giving it to the birds), and seeding shepherd's purse, plantain, and chickweed and flowering groundsel tops, when obtainable.

Keeping Claws in Order.

E. E.—Overgrown claws cannot be avoided, but they are not at all difficult to keep in order. It is absolutely dangerous to leave them very much overgrown. Catch the bird and place it on its back in the palm of the left hand, holding it gently but firmly, taking care not to squeeze it. Let the thumb fall over its throat, and the third and little finger (or middle and third, as most convenient) each side of its legs, the latter projecting between them. It will then be easy to get at the bird's feet and claws. The latter should not be cut too close to the toe, or they will bleed, and likewise hurt the bird. Roughly speaking, a tiny blood vessel runs into the nail from the toe for about a quarter of an inch (in a small bird), and one needs to always cut outside this. If a bird has white nails (like most Canaries) this blood vessel can be plainly discerned on holding the foot to a good light. Use a pair of sharp scissors, cut quickly and firmly, and this necessary operation is easily performed. It is not at all difficult, in fact, and quite painless, when properly done. Any dealer, or experienced fancier, would attend to the matter for you if you doubt your own ability to carry it through.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage-birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. F. Dallin.—Septic Fever.

W. Whiteley.—Bird fever, a specific infectious disease. The liver was the principal organ affected, and in an advanced stage of disease. Pneumonia was the exciting cause of death, secondary to the existing disease.

Edwin Wilcox.—Fatty degeneration of the liver is a very advanced degree. The case was quite incurable, owing to structural alterations in the liver tissue.

Leither.—Death occurred from ulceration of the bowels, due to infection by way of the digestive system at some period. The lungs were also complicated as the result of septic absorption. You could not have cured the condition; it was too advanced.

G. H. Howie.—Impaction of the bowels owing to imperfect digestion, and consequent absorption into the system of poisonous products generated in the contents of the bowels. There was no inflammation present, and the bird was otherwise in very fine condition.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Press Cuttings (J. Russell, G. Forrest, T. Moss, F.T.B., and others).—We tender you our thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

A Disqualified Yellowhammer (Natural Head).—Your letter is not one that any paper could publish without being landed into the law courts—unpleasant places at the best of times. We do not know whether the party mentioned has been "reinstated"; why not enquire of the secretary of the club concerned?

A Lady's Watch (Reader of C.B.).—We cannot supply ladies' watches at the same prices as those for gentlemen, but can send one for 7s. 6d., or its equivalent in coupons.

A Stove (Cymro).—We have had no personal experience of the particular stove you mention, but the reputation of the manufacturers is so high that we feel sure you can safely take their word with regard to its suitability for the purpose.

ROCHDALE O.C.

Committee meeting held in our grand room, York Place, Feb. 5, Mr. J. Nadin in chair. We had before us a letter from one of our brother societies, asking if we were in favour of an amalgamated show for young birds with a radius of six miles, but after a discussion lasting about an hour we decided not to entertain the idea. We had a crowded meeting, also elected a few new members. Our next discussion will be Feb. 11th, by Mr. Blincoe, our worthy sec., on "General Licence of Birds, etc." Note: Our British bird show will be held Feb. 27. There is certain to be a big entry; rally up and enter all birds you can.—C. Whitehead, Reporting Sec.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 30th, Mr. Taylor in chair. Balance sheet for 1911 read and considered satisfactory, showing upwards of one pound balance on a turnover of £45. The smallness of balance is through loss on open show, but our members have decided to hold another open show on Nov. 13th. Will secretaries note date to avoid clashing? Also decided, to raise subs. from 3s. to 4s. per year, as we find the lesser amount does not pay unless with a large number of paid-up members. Also decided, to hold annual pair show, Feb. 17th, with a charge of 2d. (Mr. W. C. Wells, judge), and to open show at 3 o'c. We trust to see fanciers and friends.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

ROMFORD AND DISTRICT F.A.

General meeting held White Hart, 11th Jan. Report and balance-sheet adopted. It is gratifying to note the deficiency of £5 has been cleared and the society start 1912 with a small balance in hand. Election of officers and a strong committee followed. It has been agreed to hold a young stock show second Thursday in September, and grand annual show second Thursday in December, and Corn Exchange, High Street, has been booked for these dates. New members elected: Messrs. A. Cattle, O. Hitch, A. H. Parker, J. Pearce, C. Spencer, H. W. Kirner (Romford); Mr. A. Gollnitz (Ilford); Mrs. Hayes (Romford); Mr. Haslen (Rainham); Mr. R. Howe (Harold Wood); Mrs. C. Ives (Romford); Miss MacLaren (Witham); Mrs. Rice (Pettendon) Common, Essex; Messrs. Young, F. G. Saunter, Sarling (Romford), Mrs. Fox (Romford), Mr. L. Scott (Upminster), Mr. W. Gulliver (Cranham Park)—all paid-up members for 1912. Old members be guided by the young in this case. Committee meeting night altered. Members do not forget second Monday in each month at 8 p.m., White Hart. Next meeting, 12th Feb. It is hoped the year-book will be ready next week.—C. Ives, Hon. Sec.

GARSTON B.B.A.

Annual general meeting held Baptist Schoolrooms, Earp Street, Feb. 1. Balance sheet submitted for old show, showing a profit of £3 4s. 9d.; whilst the general account showed an increased balance on last year, and naturally was received with applause. Two new members were admitted, and several names proposed, and, from what was said, everything points to a successful year. Col. Walker, M.P., was elected president; J. Jones, chairman; H. Mullock, vice-chairman; H. D. Greene, treasurer; A. T. Mullock, asst. hon. sec., and A. Wilkinson, general secretary. We are holding a social evening very shortly, and will give further particulars later.—A. Wilkinson.

LEIGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual dinner and presentation of cup and medals held Railway Hotel, Jan. 27th, when about 30 sat down to a good dinner provided by Mrs. Twentyman, the wife of our President. After we had dined Mr. Twentyman took the chair. He presented the cup and medals. The cup and gold locket were won by Mr. J. Lomas, one of the oldest members. The medal given by Mr. Farnworth for runner-up won by Mr. H. Taylor; 2nd runner-up medal (given by Mr. Roberts), Mr. W. Ordish; and medal by Mr. Dawson for most points in British at two shows, Messrs. Gaskell Bros. We had plenty of singing, songs being rendered by Messrs. Sumner, Dawson, Ordish, Hart and Bailey, and Mrs. Charleson, Mrs. Hampson, and Miss Mackie. We concluded a very pleasant evening by a vote of thanks to Mr. Sumner. At meeting held Jan. 1st we had a washing competition. There were 10 washers—a good muster to get them dry by 10—to be judged by Mr. Hart. 1, W. Ordish; 2, H. Chadwick; 3, J. W. Hampson. Will members please bear in mind that the pair show is Feb. 14th, and that I should like to see a good number there?—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

Is This Man Gifted with Strange Power?

Prominent People Say He Reads Their Lives as an Open Book.

Do You Want to Know About Your Business, Marriage, Changes, Occupation, Friends, Enemies, or What to Do to Achieve Success?

TEST READINGS FREE TO ALL "CAGE BIRDS" READERS WHO WRITE AT ONCE.

Attention of the mystically inclined seems to be centred at present upon the work of Mr. Clay Burton Vance, who although laying claim to no special gift of super natural powers attempts to reveal the lives of people through the slender clue of birth-dates. The undeniable accuracy of his delinations leads one to surmise that heretofore palmists, prophets, astrologers and seers of divers beliefs have failed to apply the true principles of the science of divination.

The following letters are published as evidence of Mr Vance's ability. Mr. Lafayette Redditt writes: "My Reading received. With the greatest amazement I read as step by step you outlined my life since infancy. I have been somewhat interested along these lines for years, but had no idea that such priceless advice could be given. I must admit that you are indeed a very remarkable man, and am glad you use your great gift to benefit your clients."

Mr. Fred Walton writes: "I did not expect such a splendid outline of my life. The scientific value of your Readings cannot be fully appreciated until one has his own Reading. To consult you means success and happiness."

Arrangements have been made to give free test Readings to all readers of "Cage Birds," but it is especially requested that those who wish to avail themselves of this generous offer make application at once. If you wish a delineation of your own life, if you wish a true description of your characteristics, talents and opportunities, simply send your full name, the date, month and year of your birth (state whether Mr., Mrs. or Miss), and also copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

"Your power is marvellous
So people write,
Please read my life
Are my prospects bright?"

Send your letter to Mr. Clay Burton Vance, Suite 278, No. 14, Rue de Richelieu, Paris, France. If you wish you may enclose 6d. CORRESPONDENCE.

Departure of an Old Fancier and Judge from the North.

Sir,—Kindly allow me through your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to express my sorrow (and that of others) at the loss of Mr. J. Shephard, who has left us for the South-country. Mr. Shephard worked with me for five years, and during that time he has made many fanciers and persuaded them to take your valuable paper. We made Mr. Shephard a handsome presentation—a token of esteem and good-fellowship from his late colleagues and novice friends at the shop. Mr. Shephard made a lot of friends about Newcastle and district, and was always willing to assist the fanciers in judging their shows and giving his experience and telling them the best way to moult, etc., British birds, in which he was an expert. The district sustains a great loss in so able a fancier. Even the boys in the shop will miss him, for he took a great interest in their welfare, and has given them birds to try and get them to be kind to birds and animals I personally regret the loss of Mr. Shephard, and would like to thank him on behalf of the novice fanciers of the district. What the North has lost the South has gained, and I have no doubt he will make as good friends in the South as he did in the North. We wish him and his family every success in their new sphere, and hope to see him back soon judging some of the North-country shows.

G. R. LOCKER.

How Heat and Cold Affect Birds.

Sir,—Kindly grant me a small space in your paper on birds going in the moult out of season, which is caused by a sudden change in the temperature. Here is a little point that even many old fanciers do not know. If you take a bird from a hot room and put it in a cold room you will put it in the moult, sure. But if you take a bird from a cold room and put it in a hot room you will only bring the bird to a forward condition—but you must keep it there; you cannot put it back in the cold room without risking the moult. Every fancier ought to know that he should never shift a bird from heat to cold, especially in cold weather. I have bred birds (Scotch Fancies and Crests) for sixteen years, and cold-room moult all my birds; but I breed them in my living room. I get an early start by doing this; when I bring them down from the cold room to the warm room they nest right away. As the young reach the age of five or six weeks, I put them upstairs, and by the end of the breeding season I take the last nests of young along with the old birds and put them upstairs. If the weather is a little cold at that time, so much the better; the old birds go right away in the moult, and there I leave them all to moult. I never have any soft moulting birds. I see by CAGE BIRDS that many have young birds in November and December—early birds. We may just as well call them late birds, for they are not in season at all. I would not like to risk young birds so early with a costly pair, such as high-class Scotch Fancies or Crests. It is a hundred chances to one that they would moult out of season and spoil you for the shows. It would play havoc with the old ones, too, seeing the seasons are all very late nowadays. It pays best to keep birds back as long as one can, especially if breeding in a cold room, as cold days, when the hens are laying, are the first thing that will cause egg binding.

OLD SCOTCH FANCIER.

The Secrecy of the Ballot.

[Appended is the copy of the resolution referred to in Mr. J. R. Hyland's letter (published last week) as having been sent to Mr. Holley; this was accidentally omitted.—Editor.]

[COPY.]

To the Hon. Sec. Y.C. and C.B.S. of Scotland.

We the undersigned request you to convene a special general meeting to be held before the forthcoming annual general meeting, which is due to be held on or before 30th day of March, 1912, for the following purposes, according to Rule viii., proposed by J. R. Hyland, seconded by J. P. Rooney or J. Dowling:—"The seal of any envelope marked 'ballot paper' received by the hon. secretary or other person or persons authorised by the Council to receive same, can only be broken by the scrutineers appointed at the annual general meeting." Also appoint two auditors.

Catching a Cold at the Palace Show.

Sir,—On the first day of the show I arrived at the Palace at twelve noon, and, to my disgust, was informed that visitors would not be admitted until 3 p.m. Consequently I had to cool my heels for three hours in a bitterly cold building, on an exceptionally cold day, with a result that I have been ill in bed ever since with a severe chill. I think it shows a great want of consideration to the public not advertising the time of admittance. I was informed that the same thing happens every year, much to the annoyance of early comers. I may state that I had a railway journey of two hours to the Palace. This kind of treatment, I submit, is not at all calculated to improve the popularity of this show.

NEW ZEALANDER.

[We sincerely regret our correspondent's ill-luck in the matter of the cold, but would point out that the times of the opening and closing of the show were stated in the schedule, and were given prominence in our own columns by an advertisement in "Twitterings" in last week's issue, and in the extended review of the schedule we printed in a previous week's issue.—Editor.]

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Annual General Meeting.

Annual meeting held February 3rd at the Old Parr's Head, Aldersgate-st., E.C., when Mr. F. A. Lester presided. Others present: Messrs. A. Gloeckner, F. King, F. E. Fisher, A. H. Chillcott, F. J. Randall, A. Kremner, C. W. Whittlestone, H. Veen, H. Mason, W. Yardley, Dr. A. E. Read, J. A. Ives, J. C. Schluter, M. Stolle, J. B. Hesling, E. T. Williams, M. Jacquemin, A. Gooding, W. J. Bird, J. Humphries, W. H. Shepley, M. Munro, P. Slade, M. Neugebauer, W. F. Buffin, and J. W. Norris (the hon. sec.).

Minutes of last annual meeting having been read, five new members were elected to membership. The balance-sheet (showing a credit balance of £12 9s. 10d.) was passed, Mr. Lester remarking that everything was growing, including the profit on the rings.

Mr. Williams moved, and Mr. Neugebauer seconded, "that no member be supplied with rings until he has paid his subscription."

Mr. Williams: I think members should have paid their subscriptions to the club to which they belong, that is for 1912, before they can be supplied with B.R.C.C. rings; and if a member has not paid last year's subscription he should be made to do so before being allowed to purchase rings, even if he has already paid the 1912 subscription; that is to say, he must not be in arrears.

Mr. Hesling: It does not seem fair that the B.R.C.C. should issue rings to outside clubs and yet hold them from members of the B.R.C.C.

After a protracted discussion, on the motion being put to the meeting it was lost.

Mr. Norris, on behalf of Mr. Firth, moved "that no member be allowed to have medals unless he has been a member for at least one month before the date of show." Mr. Munro seconded the motion. The mover stated that when a non-member won a position at a show which would, if he were a member of the club, entitle him to one of the club's medals, he naturally decided to join the B.R.C.C. in order to get the medal. In the past this had been allowed: the exhibitor had paid his 4s. 6d. subscription, and had thus practically bought the medal. The principle of such action was wrong. A considerable amount of argument took place, and finally Mr. Yardley asked if there were just cause for new legislation in this matter, as, if there were not, he would move as an amendment that the meeting proceed with the next business. Mr. Kremner seconded. Mr. Norris proposed "that with the exception of rule relating to subscriptions, all rules be strictly adhered to in future." This was seconded by Mr. Ives, and (Mr. Yardley's point being thereby covered) was carried unanimously.

Mr. Norris read the result of the voting of officers, as follows: President, Mr. H. R. B. Tweed; vice-presidents (same as before); secretary and treasurer, Mr. Norris; committee (same as before); these were elected on the motion of Mr. Yardley, seconded by Mr. Whittlestone.

The secretary next read out the suggestions that had been received from members (the idea of asking for these on the voting papers being undoubtedly the best), a good one.

On the question (arising out of correspondence received by secretary) of the legitimacy of the subletting by a member of the club of B.R.C.C. rings, it was decided to take no action in the matter further than requesting members, if they hear of any such underhand practice, to let the committee know of it.

Mr. Norris stated that he had received a letter from Mr. F. Oldroyd resigning his membership of the club, and he moved that the resignation be accepted. This was seconded by Mr. Veen.

Mr. Lester: It was with very great regret that I heard that Mr. Oldroyd was going to judge at the Crystal Palace Show in the Roller section; and no one seems to know what are his reasons.

Mr. Hesling: The Wakefield Society met about a fortnight or three weeks ago, when we decided not to support the Palace Show. We had another meeting, and Mr. Oldroyd told us that he had had an invitation to judge at the Palace, and that he had accepted it. I don't think if I had been he I should have acted as he has—I should have left it to the club to decide. I shall not, however, vote for his resignation being accepted, because I think he did what he did just on the spur of the moment, and I am sure every member is sorry he did it. A great many remarks were here made affecting the dispute between the club and Mr. Ramsden of the Crystal Palace, but as the matter is sub judice we refrain from printing them.

Mr. Whittlestone said eventually: I will move that we do not accept Mr. Oldroyd's resignation.

Mr. Hesling seconded the amendment, which, however, was lost, the original motion being carried by nine votes for and none against.

Mr. Norris: Supposing Mr. Oldroyd writes to give his reasons?

Here Mr. Schluter proposed, and Mr. Slade seconded, "that we give every opportunity to Mr. Oldroyd to explain his conduct to the committee." This was carried unanimously.

The presentation of cups (to Messrs. Veen, who won the challenge trophy of the club, Randall, Humphries, and Ives) and diplomas (to Messrs. Stolle, Randall, and Humphries) was then made.

Votes of thanks concluded the meeting.

A Good Week.

Since the first rush of members to join the LEAGUE in its earliest days no week has brought such an addition to our ranks as the one just gone by. This was mainly due, of course to the Palace Show, some sixty members joining personally at CAGE BIRDS stall. Among these we have to welcome a new Patron, Mr. Harold Blackett, of Sunninghill, and a new Vice-President, Mr. Baker, of Cowes, whose names go to swell our list as above. Among those included in the following list are some names known wherever the cage-bird hobby is represented. I am sure that all members will hail with pleasure the announcement that Mr. Crabb, the respected President of the L. and P.O.S. has joined our ranks. Mr. Ramsden, the world's greatest show organiser, has also become one of us, and conspicuous among the others joining this week is the widely known judge, Mr. Mundell, "Pa Mundell" as he is affectionately termed by some of us who have known him for more years than we care to count. The full list is as follows:—

Mesdames Towers, Keighley; T. Ogden, Bradford; Cousins, Guildford; Boizot, London; Messrs. Clark, Hemel Hempstead; Brown, Scunthorpe; Blackett, Sunninghill; Baker, Cowes; E. Pretty, R. J. Pretty, Goodchild, Crabb, Seeney, Broughton, Brunning and Ramsden, London; Frostick and Sandy, Balham; Hill and Mundell, Bradford; Towers, Keighley; Chase and Lay, Thetford; Wellings, Prescot; Thorpe, Cowley, Furniss, Crookes, Scott, and Fallding, Sheffield; Wallman, Cambridge; Cousins, Guildford; Jones, Runcorn; Sherwood, Itchenham; Leavers, Brookes, and Smith, Swindon; Barrett, T. Bowler, and F. Bowler, Aylesbury; Jiggins, Chelmsford; Couzens, Lee; Pallett, West Norwood; Little, Whytelcate; Philips, Herne Hill; Steaines, Beckenham; King, Wanstead; Laceby, Ely; March, Upper Clapton; Alexander, Queen's Park; Shephard, Newcastle; Bird, Bennell, Williamson, Hately, Edmunds, Breeze, Bear, Greenfield, and Simpson, King's Lynn; Watts, Buckingham, Watford; Abbott, Holloway; Adams, New Cross; and in the Junior, Witherby, Felling-on-Tyne; Smith, Sheriffhill; Harring, Ratcliffe, and Wainwright, Castleford; Thorndyke, Doncaster; and Mesdames Child, Rugby; Marshall, Rugby; Brown, Scunthorpe; and in the junior branch, Miss Stubbs, Worthing; and Master Garratt, Rugby.

Greetings at the Palace.

The Palace Show has come and gone. It will be ever memorable to LEAGUE members as affording them the first chance yet provided of showing the bond of good-fellowship which exists amongst them. There they were in their twos and threes, their twenties and thirties, and, at the meeting, in their hundreds, and wherever they were gathered together were to be heard expressions of satisfaction at the ready means of introduction afforded by the little coloured badge. Scores of fanciers who, before the Palace, were utter strangers to each other are now friends, and if the LEAGUE had done nothing else there would in this be sufficient to justify its existence. For myself, I have been many times a stranger in a strange town, but after the Palace, there will be few towns of importance through which I shall walk friendless. The many expressions of kindness with which I was greeted by one and all, left an impression which will not readily be forgotten. Our Patron, Sir Roland Corbet, and our latest Vice-President, Mr. Malcolm Roberts, both made themselves known to me during the show, and expressed their pleasure at being members of our LEAGUE, and every one of the very large number of our members present on one day or other of the show had a pleasant word to say. Once more I say "thanks" to all those present, and to the hundreds who have written expressing their regrets at their enforced absence I would wish "better luck next time."

An Appreciative Letter.

I have received the following letter from Mr. Geo. Gardner, one of our oldest and most widely known judges, and I am very glad to think that some such thoughts as those expressed by Mr. Gardner must have been in the mind of everyone present at our great meeting, a report of which appears on page 141.

Sir,—I have attended the Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show for a great many years, but I do not remember to have been present at a more interesting gathering than that in connection with CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. A couple of hundred or more of representative fanciers, hailing practically from John O'Groats to Land's End, took tea together, and in a brief quarter of an hour afterwards did more practical defensive work, and gave evidence of greater cohesion in defence of their hobby than I have ever before witnessed. Such an organisation is bound to be a power. It is real, and its members are in earnest. It was a remarkable gathering.

G. G.

Our First Portrait Group.

In spite of the bitter weather prevailing during the exhibition, and of the fact that the ground was covered in snow, more than fifty members of the League—fifty-seven, to be exact—assembled on one of the terraces of the Palace on Saturday afternoon for the purpose of joining in our first pictorial record. The picture is reproduced this week as a supplement. It required considerable courage to leave the shelter of the show tent and face the Arctic conditions outside, and many who were at the Palace at the moment shirked the ordeal. Nevertheless, it was a very fair muster, and the photographers, Messrs. Everitt, are to be congratulated on a very successful picture. I am very sorry indeed that the members were driven in by the cold before I had an opportunity of taking their names, and that owing to a delay caused by frozen pipes, the photographers were unable to furnish a proof of the picture until most of the members of the group had left the Palace on Saturday evening. I am sure that a large number of members will like to have copies of this our first group, and these may be purchased at half-a-crown each unmounted and rolled in a tube, or at two shillings and tenpence mounted on a plate sunk mount and packed flat for posting. These prices include postage, and if members will send me their orders, with remittance, I will pass these on to the photographers for immediate attention.

I hope next week to deal with a number of suggestions received from members, and with other matters of interest. With the pressure of the Crystal Palace Show making itself felt, I may not occupy any further space this week.

Secretary, CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

A Lover of the Moors.

The moorland is the home of the Ring Ouzel. Before migrating, he feasts upon the berries of the mountain ash, whose roots are buried deep among the crevices of the rocks. His call note of alarm warns his comrade, who joins him, and the two make off and settle some distance away, their white gorgets standing out clearly against the dark heather. Their nest was built among the tall plants in the hollow, in construction and materials very like that of the Blackbird, and not even an expert can always distinguish the eggs of the two species.

A RED-LETTER SWEET PEA YEAR.

£1,000 FOR SWEET PEAS.

£250 for Lady or Gentleman keeping one or more Gardeners
£250 for Professional Gardeners

£250 for Amateurs
£125 for Cottagers
£125 for Girls or Boys under 16.

The great Sweet Pea Competition alluded to above, and which has been organised by Eckford's on behalf of the hundreds of thousands of growers who pin their faith to Eckford's seeds, is undoubtedly the most comprehensive and satisfactory floral competition ever devised and placed before the public. Eckford's have considered the interests of all, and by fair and careful classification have made it possible for every one who enters to do so with the most reasonable hope of success.

Read the details which follow, and it will then be seen that even the smallest grower has an equal opportunity to gain one of the 200 cash prizes which Eckford's have such pleasure in offering.

Beyond any doubt, the Sweet Pea is now the most popular flower in British gardens, and, judging by the numerous orders which Eckford's receive from abroad, is destined to achieve universal favouritism. There is the best of all reasons for this—because a more delightful and fragrant flower does not exist. No other flower has its wealth of varied colour, its profusion of bloom, its prodigality of scent, and no other flower so beautifies the garden. Yet, with all, the Sweet Pea demands no extraordinary skill to grow to perfection. Just an average amount of intelligence and care, and you can rely upon a Sweet Pea display which will afford the utmost gratification.

What Eckford's have done on behalf of the Sweet Pea scarcely needs recapitulation. To its culture they have brought to bear the most infinite expert wisdom, and to their unceasing endeavours is due the phenomenal regard in which this dainty flower is held. What is more due and fitting, then, but that Eckford's should signalise their close connection with this most delectable of Earth's blossoms by stimulating their patrons to increased excellence.

Last year was a Sweet Pea year made memorable by the enterprise of the "Daily Mail," who, with characteristic generosity, gave away a £1,000 prize. This year will certainly be recorded as for this famous firm have organised another competition, perhaps on broader and more general lines. Briefly, the principles are as follows:—

£1,000 in all, in cash prizes.

Sections for professionals, assisted amateurs, self-reliant amateurs, and also children.

This means that no advantage accrues to any one person—that all are on a common level, for each section is distinct and apart, and all, to use a sporting metaphor, start at "scratch." There are no irksome conditions—the one great underlying principle being that all entries must have been grown from Eckford's Seeds, procured direct from that firm. This is essentially fair, and as practically every Sweet Pea grower buys from Eckford's, it is neither harsh nor forbidding.

Eckford's are proud of their association with the Sweet Pea—they prize their reputation, for it has been built up upon the most undivided application to "the cult of the Sweet Pea." They have developed it from every point of view, not merely confining their attention to an abnormal increase of one special characteristic. No, the Eckford Sweet Pea from the root upwards is natural and normal. Strong in stem and stalk, abounding in vitality, carrying flowers which, for purity of pedigree, for richness and rareness of hue, cannot be surpassed.

The Judges' Luncheon.

New Toast Enthusiastically Honoured: Splendid Representative Gathering of Bird-Lovers.

A Dispute with the British Roller Canary Club.

One of the most pleasing functions in connection with the Palace Show is the Judges' Luncheon, and this year it touched a record in the number of visitors—evidently those who come once come again and bring their friends. Mr. J. Crabb, the highly esteemed president of the L. and P.O.S., occupied the chair, and was supported, amongst others, by Madame Feist Madewell, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ramsden, Mr. and Mrs. F. Thynne, Mr. and Mrs. G. Mortlock, Dr. Arnold Read and Miss Lena Read, Mrs. Sydney Morrin, Dr. and Mrs. Anningson, Miss M. Holland, Rev. G. H. Raynor, Messrs. Thos. Heath, H. R. B. Tweed, G. E. Russell, H. Norman, F. Greenway, W. Swaysland, J. Brotherton, R. J. Pretty, W. A. Shepherd, E. S. Lugg, W. A. Dickins, Jas. F. Dewar, James Wones, Herbert Broadley, W. Mundell, H. W. Battye, J. C. Barnes, H. G. Parkinson, Geo. Ramsden, C. Roehl, F. Oldroyd, J. Thomas, Geo. Garduer, F. Carl, F. S. Matthes, H. T. Camps, F. Finn, S. Baines, J. Robson, J. Hazell, G. W. Graham, W. Kiesel, H. J. Fulljames, W. A. Lott, F. T. Day, J. Hodder, F. J. Wickham, T. R. Trower, Harold Prentice, R. A. Newley, F. Lathlieff, A. Cooper, J. Oldaker, C. W. Law, H. Schneider, Frank Hirst, W. R. H. Garland, G. E. Weston, and C. A. House.

A New and Deserving Toast.

Rising at the conclusion of the luncheon Mr. Crabb said he wished to say how pleased the committee were to see so many visitors present, especially the ladies, who certainly were more numerous than usual. In the name of the L.P.O.S. he welcomed them most heartily. It showed that they took an interest in the hobbies of the men, and he hoped that interest would be carried into the homes. He was pleased to see so many prominent fanciers round the table, with so many stars, great stars, in front of him he felt like a farthing rushlight. At such a time it was well to remember those who had been with them in the past, and since the last show they had lost one of their original members, one of the founders of the society. At such a time it was only right they should remember this, and pass their condolences to the relatives of their old friend. It was only customary to have one toast at this luncheon, but he was sure they would forgive him for breaking a rule when he asked them to drink the health of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsden and Mr. Geo. Ramsden. There were many show managers sitting round the table, but he knew they would forgive him in styling Mr. Ramsden the show manager par excellence; in fact, he knew they would agree with him. It must be remembered that Mr. Ramsden's work did not lie just round the show date; the mere getting in of the entries and running the show was not the work that told—it was all the year round work which made for success and led up to the fine shows which they had under Mr. Ramsden's management. From one show to another he was always thinking and working for the show to come. They must not forget the invaluable assistance which Mrs. Ramsden and young George gave. They were deeply indebted to both. (Cheers.)

How the Trouble Arose.

Replying on behalf of Mrs. Ramsden, his son, and himself, Mr. Ramsden said they appreciated the thanks bestowed upon them very much indeed. They certainly did their best to make the show a success, but their best would be of little avail without the aid of the committee, who certainly worked well, most heartily and cordially. The show was an average show. The entries were not quite so many as last year; still, they could not complain, and he thought that visitors, when they saw the quality of the exhibits, would say the show was as good as usual. He was pleased to say they had one record this year, and that was in the number of lady exhibitors, some of whom had done very well. There was one item he wished to call their attention to. He hoped they would bear with him in mentioning, but the reputation of the show was at stake, and the incident had caused a great deal of pain and annoyance to himself and his fellow-workers. He was sorry that the matter had arisen, but he must deal with it. He had been asked to explain the reason of the Roller Section failing to secure a fair entry, and said:

"I therefore give you the following facts.

"In November I applied for the British Roller Club patronage, and stated that whilst I was unable at that date to guarantee the use of a separate room, I promised to use my best endeavours to secure a suitable room for them. The Club refused my application.

"Early in January I published the schedule of the show, and there stated that the birds would be judged in a separate room, and afterwards staged in an annexe to the Show Tent. Also stating further on that 'every endeavour will be made to have the Rollers judged and staged in a suitable room free from draught. Roller fanciers can therefore send their most valuable specimens with every confidence.'

"A few days after the Roller Canary Journal, the official organ of the British Roller Canary Club, was published, and contained the following paragraph, signed by the Secretary:—'Re Palace Show, no doubt the great majority of members know that the Club has refused its support and patronage to this show on the grounds that your birds would be judged in a lavatory and the manager of the show would not guarantee a separate room for the birds to be staged in after judging. This means that your birds would have to be placed in the open show with the other birds. This decision, you will be pleased to know, has been supported again by the different Roller Clubs. On the present occasion, at the last meeting, the news that the Provincial R.C.C. had fallen in line with the B.R.C.C. again was received with loud applause.'

"On Jan. 20 I published in the Fancy Press the fact that a room had been secured for the Rollers. On Jan. 25 the B.R.C.C. published their balance sheet, which contained the following notice, signed by the Secretary:—'As members no doubt know, the B.R.C.C. are not supporting the Palace Show this year. The arrangements put to the Club to accept are no better—in fact, worse. Your committee decided not to give support or patronage. In this decision they have been upheld by all the Roller societies. Any member who has made entries not knowing the facts will be well advised not to send.'

Legal Action Taken.

"As the matter is now in the hands of our solicitor, I cannot make any comment beyond stating the fact that the Rollers are again staged in the room referred to as a lavatory. I hope you will all inspect the room and report to your friends your candid opinion of same. I have received the following letter from Dr. A. E. Read, vice-president B.R.C.C., dated Jan. 26:—'Dear Mr. Ramsden,—When I remember you did me the honour of consulting me, as one of the vice-presidents of the B.R.C.C., with regard to approaching the B.R.C.C. with the object of their giving their patronage to the Roller Section of the London and Provincial O.S. Show, to be held at the Crystal Palace, I think it my duty to bring before your notice as the show manager of the L. and P.O.S. the enclosed balance sheet of the B.R.C.C., and to state that in my opinion the statement of Mr. J. W. Norris as regards your show arrangements for the Roller Section is grossly misleading.—Yours faithfully, Arnold E. Read.'

"Owing to the action of the British Roller Club we are 100 entries short. The room which is described as a lavatory by Mr. Norris is one of what is known as the King's Rooms, and is used by King George when he visits the Palace. I think therefore it should be good enough for the Roller Canaries. Still, I hope you will not be influenced by my remarks, but will visit the room yourselves and see if it merited the description given it. In connection with all shows there are some disadvantages. If the room is warm it is all right for the foreign birds, but it is not so good for the Canaries and British, and if it is cold it is the reverse. So far as I am concerned, I do my best to meet the wishes of all, and the welfare of the exhibits. I try to avoid all draughts and keep the temperature as level as possible. I thank you on behalf of myself, my wife, and my son, and can assure you it is a pleasure for us to do the best we can for the success of the Palace Show." (Applause.)

Mr. Crabb, in proposing "The Judges," said he had received a telegram from their old friend Mr. J. F. Hills. It read: "Hearty good wishes; my love to you all.—Old Joe." It was pleasant for them to know old friends were thinking of them and of the old show. It was also pleasant to welcome another of their old friends that day—Mr. George E. Russell—who was one of their oldest fanciers when some of you were in your cradles, and even when I started he was one of the leaders of the Fancy. To-day we can also think of other old friends, such as Joe Bexson and Sam Cook, two of the best. He was pleased they had such a good show, and so many attractive exhibits.

Messrs. Wones and Oldroyd briefly replied, the latter regretting the misunderstanding which had arisen in connection with the Roller Section. It was a misunderstanding and nothing more, he was certain, and one which could be removed. So far as the room mentioned was concerned, he could say it was one of the best he had been in, and quite fitted for the purpose.

Mr. Swaysland proposed "The President," and Mr. Crabb responded.

BUSY ANNUAL MEETING: THE USE OF CLOSED RINGS: REVOLUTIONARY PROPOSITION PUT FORWARD.

Mr. R. Rhodes presided at the meetiug of the C.C.C., which was held in the Board Room of the Crystal Palace on February 3rd, and was supported by Mr. and Mrs. Thynne, Mrs. Litchfield, Dr. Twigg, Messrs. T. Heath, F. W. Barnett, G. C. Ley, W. A. Shepherd, T. C. Pickard, G. Crabb, W. H. Cook, A. Lazarus, T. Taylor, J. Robson, C. Dobson (Dobson and Son), R. S. Bewick, Evins Bros., J. Tatman, J. Franz, G. M. Greenwood, F. Burson, J. Broad, and J. Tyson, hon. sec.

In his report Mr. Tyson mentioned that there had been a slight decrease of membership during the year, and the figures were six less than twelve months since. He thought that the lack of progress was due in some measure to the selfishness of some members. When they had a good bird or two likely to do some winning they were enthusiastic, and would work for the club, but unless they had a chance of winning they would not do much. He instanced one case of a man winning a cup and a teapot. After he got the cup and teapot his interest ceased because he was no longer a novice, and he felt he had not much chance against the champions, and although asked to assist the club, did nothing. As illustrating how persistency is rewarded, Mr. Tyson said: "Quite recently I succeeded in securing 4s. from him more than two years after he took the specials out of the club." There were others, however, who were always ready to do what they could for the club, and one most generously offered that if he (Mr. Tyson) would let him know what debt there was on the club at the end of the year he would send him a cheque to balance, so as not to have the usual whip-round at the annual meeting. During the year the novice competition had been very poorly supported, but that for champions had been a big success. Mr. Tyson spoke most warmly of the good work done by the sub-committee in putting the finances of the club in a strong position. Twelve months since they had a debt of £14 17s. 1d., that had been cleared off, and to-day there was a balance in hand of £5 12s. 10d. Their assets were in cash and kind, £58 6s. 8d., and their liabilities, including the Palace specials, and rent of room for that meeting, were only £4 4s. 6d. This was the result of the splendid spirit of sportsmanship shown by the sub-committee.

Mr. Rhodes said the credit of the most satisfactory statement which they had heard belonged to Mr. Tyson. He had worked whole-heartedly and earnestly to put the club in a solid position, and he had accomplished it. Messrs. Ley and Shepherd supported this, and the report and accounts were adopted.

Mr. Tyson announced that Mr. W. E. Greeves had written withdrawing from the committee, and suggested that Mr. Bale should take his place. He was pleased to say Mr. Rhodes had again been elected president.

The President, in returning thanks for his re-election, urged the members to support Mr. Tyson in every way they could, and make his work as light as possible. They had a good secretary, and the position of the club that day was in every way due to Mr. Tyson, to whom it was most creditable.

Mr. Tyson announced that Messrs. Evins Bros. had won the Roberts Cup with a total of 345 points, and Dr. Twigg the novice competition with 61 points, Mr. Wharam coming second. In reference to the competition for most points scored with 4 birds in six classes, it had not been decided which show should have the honour. He suggested that it should be drawn for. This was done. Plymouth was the successful show, and Mr. Bale the lucky winner of the three-guinea tea service.

In the discussion on Mr. Smith's motion regarding "the advisability of withholding support to shows which extend over Sunday," Messrs. Ley, Evins Bros., Shepherd, Taylor and Rhodes all pointed out that it was much more advisable to have the birds in the show room on the Sunday than to be knocking about on the railway. Further, some of their best shows could not exist without the Saturday gate. As there was no seconder, the motion fell through.

In introducing the question of "the adoption of closed rings," Mr. Heath referred to their use amongst Poultry and Pigeon men, and said that he had no doubt rings for Canaries would be adopted in the future, if not at once, and it certainly right they should be; he had only put the subject on the agenda to get the opinion of the members. The use of rings would ensure the fact that birds when shown were young birds, they would also be useful in telling the age of a bird when it was sold, and it would preserve for them the name of the breeder. Mr. Tyson expressed himself as in favour of the idea, and read a letter from the Secretary of the Roller Club, explaining how the ring scheme was worked in that club, and it was most satisfactory, especially to the finances of the club, which it had helped to the extent of £16. He also read letters from Messrs. Hesketh and Woollard opposing the use of rings. Messrs. Rhodes, Ley, Shepherd, Taylor, Barnett, Evins Bros., and Greenwood and Burson all supported the idea, only Mr. Lazarus opposing it. Messrs. Evins mentioned that one of the Barnstaple members had asked them to say he was against rings. It was eventually decided, on the motion of Mr. Shepherd, seconded by Mr. Barnett, that the members be asked to vote on the matter.

The question of "The adoption of a uniform show cage" was brought forward by Mr. Tyson at the suggestion of several members. He personally supported the idea, as did Messrs. Ley, Franz, Greenwood, Taylor, Evins Bros., Heath, Rhodes, all supported the idea, but Messrs. Heath and Ley thought it should not be rushed, and when finally decided the members should be given some time in which to use up their present stock of cages. On the recommendation of Mr. Rhodes a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Tyson, Heath, Taylor, Ley, and Greenwood were appointed to obtain sample cages and make a selection of one suitable for the use of club members.

A letter was read from Mr. Colledge suggesting that when two members exhibited as a firm their points should be counted as to two members, and not one. The feeling of the meeting was decidedly hostile to the suggestion.

The three following resolutions were brought forward by Mr. T. Taylor:—

"That, so far as the funds of the Crested Canary Club will allow, all specials and cups be handed over to their respective winners before issue of balance sheet. Balance sheet to state holders of cups; guarantee from holder to be presented to auditor when doing annual audit."

"That all paid-up members of the Crested Canary Club have a 'star' placed opposite their name on Crested Canary Club list distributed, or be kept separate from unpaid members, and members be instructed to deal only with paid-up members."

"That the Club strike an average total amount and that they curtail the expenditure so far as can be assumed by alloting, say, three-quarters of the average amount to next year's expenditure, thus leaving a balance of a quarter of the total to be carried forward, till a sufficient sum is in hand to procure the following season's outlay, which should be obtainable in four years, and put the Crested Canary Club on a sound financial footing."

The discussion upon each was very brief, and generally agreed that the principle of the first was right, and, as far as possible, it should be acted upon. In reference to the second, it stated that the names placed on the list by Mr. Tyson were those of members who had paid, whilst as to the third, it was felt it would be rather awkward to work owing to the variation in the income, and cost of working. Messrs. Heath, Evins Bros., Ley, and Rhodes all thought that with Mr. Tyson as secretary they need have no fear as to the Club not being able to pay its way. Mr. Rhodes emphasising the revolution in the Club finances this year compared with last. Mr. Tyson said that Messrs. Rhodes, Ley, Heath and Crisp were really to be thanked for this. In reply to this, Mr. Ley said Mr. Tyson was bluffing, the Club's position that day was due to Mr. Tyson.

Mr. Tyson brought forward a motion:—"To extend the novice limit to three first prizes at three shows." In supporting it, he said that the present system rushed the novices too much, and they were put amongst the champions almost before they knew how to breed or stage a bird, and not being able to win, became disheartened and fell out. Messrs. Ley and Heath supported the suggestion. Mr. Robson suggested that a novice should be a novice for three years, and then should become a champion, no matter how many prizes he had won. Mr. Heath said if Mr. Robson would include twelve prizes in the three years, and that when a man had won that number he should become a champion, even if it was before the three years were up, he should agree. Mr. Robson accepted Mr. Heath's suggestion. Mr. Taylor said it might be easier to win twelve prizes than three first prizes. Plenty of men could win seconds and thirds, but could not touch a first, and it might happen that at a small show a man would win 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and if he did this in two classes there would not be many left to complete his twelve prizes. He would second Mr. Robson's proposition if he dropped the three years. Mr. Robson then said he hardly knew where he was. Mr. Heath would support him if he added the twelve prizes, and Mr. Taylor if he would take away the three years. Messrs. Evins and Franz spoke in favour of the present system, and Messrs. Rhodes and Tyson pointed out that the rules of other clubs and societies must be considered. It was decided not to alter the present status of the novice.

The meeting closed with very hearty votes of thanks to Messrs. Tyson and Rhodes for their work as secretary and president, and these gentlemen responded.

A Loose Cage Front.
Sent by Mr. J. Miles, 55, Chestnut Street, Ashington, Northumberland.

I send you a simple sketch of my style of loose cage front, which I have not seen in use elsewhere. The ordinary front can be transferred into same with little trouble. A and B show the loose wire (not soldered) for front to work round on same as hinge; C is a staple ¼in. long, driven into cage and leaving ¼in. hanging down; D is one of the long wires in front, which, instead of being pushed into cage top, is made into a crook which slips into the staple C and pulls down in the ordinary way, the same as fixing any other front. All you have to do is to lift the front up, and then your crook slips out of your staple and swings round on loose wire A and B, and acts as an ordinary door. When cleaning out you have the whole cage front open. I use the perches which fix on the cage front, and do not touch the back of cage at all, and when cage is open I just give them a scrape up; there is no need to take them out. This style of front is specially useful for double breeders, as you can run birds into one compartment while you are cleaning out the other. I may say that I never bother with loose slides in my cages.—J. Miles.

To Keep Mice at Bay.
Sent by Mr. F. B. Rawston, A, Blackley Cottage, Tunnel Avenue, East Greenwich,

Enclosed is an idea which I have used to keep mice at bay. Obtain a small tin box about 10in. square and cut holes in the sides about 1in. diameter. Then get a piece of ordinary cage wire and bend into rings a little larger than the holes in the box. Get some small pieces of steel wire about 2in. long and solder round the rings about ¼in. apart; then bend the steel wires in towards each other, so that they are about ¾in. apart at the end. Solder the ring just round the hole in the box. Now cut a hole in the lid of box, leaving about an inch all round. Get a piece of ¼in. mesh wire and solder it over the hole. Now just darken it with paint and put your bait in and set. The mice force the wire open, but when they try to get back the wires will not give.—F. B. Rawston.

Special Descriptive Report by our Staff of Experts.

IT is probable that the majority of the bird-lovers who wended their way to the Crystal Palace Show last week-end (Feb. 2nd to the 6th), look back upon this great annual carnival with somewhat mixed feelings. The event itself was as interesting and pleasure-giving as any similar fixture of past years. But King Frost played us a scurvy trick. He laid his icy fingers on the land when least wanted (from the birdic-man's point of view), and left all of us who ventured to the great glass house powerless to escape his chilly grip. But though we fanciers had perforce to shiver and stamp (some of us did sundry other things besides) we refused to allow our enthusiasm to be quite "frozen-out." We made a great muster out Sydenham way, despite weather conditions that would not have disgraced the arctic regions.

On the Friday the attendance was good, while on the Saturday—most popular day of all—the long aisles held the usual crowds of sight-seers. We noticed many fanciers present who had travelled a great number of miles for the pleasure of having the last peep of the season at the cream of the exhibition birds of to-day. A number of Tyneside enthusiasts travelled up by the trip run in connection with the Sunderland-Crystal Palace football cup-tie; while Welsh and West-country visitors mustered in considerable force, and the men from Lancashire and Yorkshire were quite a little army in themselves. And that we all enjoyed ourselves goes without the saying; the prospect of "cough mixture" looming in the distance seemed a trivial thing indeed.

The Show Manager's Successful Efforts.

In coping with the situation created by the exceptional cold, Mr. J. W. Ramsden once again proved his great worth both as a show-manager and as a genuine lover of birds. Nothing that he could think of as likely to add to the comfort of the birds and of the visitors was too much trouble to carry out. The huge steam-pipes (which were originally erected in the show enclosure at his urgent representation) were kept going night and day, the walls were hung with thick curtains, and the roof also once the judging was over, while the electric light was left burning. The more delicate birds were allotted the warmest and most sheltered spots. We heard any number of eulogistic remarks made concerning Mr. Ramsden's foresight, and he well deserved them. It is, perhaps, needless to add that in every department the management was up to the highest possible standard—the "J. W. R." standard. Mrs. Ramsden lent her husband invaluable aid; the amount of work got through by this estimable lady it is not easy to gauge, so unassuming is the manner of its performance. Mr. Geo. Ramsden, jun., too, is a "chip of the old block," so far as the work at a bird-show is concerned. The kind things said of them at the Judges' Luncheon were thoroughly deserved.

In its president, Mr. Geo. Crabb, the London and Provincial O.S. (under whose auspices the show is held) possess one of the most respected members of the Fancy to-day, and his presence and support go far to ensure the success yearly achieved by the Palace Show. The hon. sec., too, Mr. C. W. Law, is a most excellent official, able and tactful, and one of the hardest of workers.

The committee comprised Messrs. G. Mortlock, F. S. Matthes, J. Oldaker, W. Laskey, C. R. Bullen, A. Cooper, G. H. Couzens, J. Hodder, R. J. Pretty, W. Salter, G. Graham, W. Kiesel, R. Bamber, F. J. Day, J. Hazell, F. Lathleiff, and G. Thurling, and they "pulled together" as well and strenuously as ever, nothing daunted by long hours and the adverse conditions. We congratulate them heartily on the undoubted success they were instrumental in achieving.

A Department in Safe Hands.

Those very old and esteemed servants of the Crystal Palace Company, Messrs. Grutchfield and Small, once again ably performed their annual duty of feeding and watering the birds. For the remarkable total of close upon 50 years these fanciers (we feel justified in terming them such) have been piling up the debt of gratitude due to them from bird-keepers patronising the Palace Show. A record to be proud of. They were assisted by various skilled members of the L. and P.O.S., who kept an eye on the requirements of the delicate British and Foreign birds, etc. The supplying of the seeds for the birds was again undertaken by Messrs. J. Carter and Company (known to a wide circle of bird-keepers as "Good Old Carters"), of Raynes Park, London, S.W.; while the insectivorous food, yolk of egg, etc., were provided by the well-known firm of Trower and Company (442, Caledonian-road, London, N.). These two firms did their utmost to ensure every bird having such food as would best enable it comfortably to face the unusual degree of cold prevailing during the show. And that their laudable efforts were crowned with success was evidenced by the fine condition of almost every exhibit when packed for the homeward journey. That some of the birds should be upset by the weather conditions was inevitable.

Some Points of Interest.

There were no particular "sensations" for the scribe to chronicle, the chief item in this line being the dispute which has arisen between the management and the British Roller Canary Club, particulars of which are given in our account of the Judges' Luncheon. We heard of one protest being lodged; it was against a light Linnet Mule for alleged missing wing feathers, a matter dealt with by our representative reporting this section. The "talk" of the Canary section was the class for White Canaries. The excellence and beauty of these birds, it is safe to say, astounded every Canary fancier. They are truly charming, so exquisitely silken in plumage, and snow-white in colour; and we venture to predict that this new variety has come to stay. Among the Hybrids the Greenfinch-Chaffinch aroused the greatest interest, this latest novelty looking in excellent fettle. British men had to have a peep at the Dipper, of course, this being a hitherto unknown quantity in British classes. The winning Hawfinch, too, aroused the admiration of all beholders. Its owner, by the way, created quite a little sensation, for though the name of Burr is new to the majority of us, this gentleman secured the diploma for best British bird with the Hawfinch, besides firsts in the Linnet and Siskin classes, and second in the Goldfinch class. A remarkable performance on, we believe, a first appearance at the Palace.

The task of adjudicating upon the exhibits was this year entrusted to Messrs. J. C. Barnes (Novice Norwich, etc.), H. W. Pettye (Nor.), H. Broadley (Novice Yorks., etc.), [illegible] T. Camps (Parrots), J. F. Dewar (Hybrids and Belg.), F. Finn (Foreign), H. J. Fulljames (Brit.), G. Gardner (Lancs., White Canaries, etc.), T. Heath (Crests and part of the Yorks.), C. A. House (Liz., Nor., Yorks., and Bord. Greens), W. Mundell (part Yorks.), H. Norman (Novice Hyb. and Brit., etc.), J. Robson (Bord., Scots. Faucies, Frills, etc.), W. Swaysland (Brit.), G. E. Weston (Brit.), and J. Wones (Cinns.). It must be at once said that their work was made unusually difficult this year by reason of the intense cold, for not only did the birds feel the "nip" of Jack Frost, but the judges themselves could not help feeling a little "off colour" by way of sympathy. My word, it did freeze! The chances of several good exhibits were spoiled by reason of the birds looking down in condition; apart from this regrettable but quite unavoidable state of things, however, we do not think that many birds were placed wrongly in the prize list. We are not going to say that we heard no adverse comments after the cards were up. But most of these were prompted by individual preferences for certain show points at the expense of others, and not by the patent fact of the rightful winners being left "down the course." The most unfortunate illness which has befallen our friend Mr. A. Silver, made it impossible for him to keep his engagement to judge, and the classes originally allotted to him in the British bird section were officiated upon by Mr. Fulljames.

A Fine Array of Stalls.

As usual, the fine array of stalls attracted a great deal of notice from fanciers and visitors, and some of them were so interesting and contained so many choice articles required in the cage bird cult, that one looked at them with longing eyes. Mr. Joe Thomas, from Halifax, was in his usual position, near the show manager's office. Mr. Thomas looks upon the Palace Show both as an "outing" and as a means of displaying the hundred and one useful articles he provides for the Fancy. Cages of all kinds, feeders, hoppers, drinkers, egg mills, etc., etc., were on view. Looking along the stall one was struck with the very fine breeding cages, both single, double, and three compartment; these were beautifully made and finished, and fitted with all needful requisites. During the coming season Mr. Thomas expects to exchange several hundreds of these for hard cash to fanciers who know a good thing when they see it. His display of birds, too, was a splendid one.

Mr. Chas. Roehl was located upon the opposite side and made quite an imposing show with his cages and fittings. Although Mr. Roebl provides cages and fittings of all kinds, he is more especially interested in Roller Canaries, and pet Canaries and other birds. His stall held all the appliances used by lovers of the sweet voiced Rollers. He also had on view some specially made drawing-room cages and aviaries. These were something quite exceptional and exquisitely finished. He had also a fine lot of Roller Canaries on view.

"Good Old Carter" exhibited fine samples of all known seeds used by fanciers. This firm makes a speciality of supplying only the best. Many old fanciers have dealt with this firm for long years, and one sees them at the Palace renewing their acquaintance at the stall and placing orders for future supplies.

At the Entrance.

Several stalls were arranged in their usual positions at the entrance to the show enclosure. Messrs. Trower and Co. being the first to catch the eye. Here was displayed a grand array of seeds. Mr. Trower makes a speciality of canary seed, the staff of life for most of our birds. His samples ranged from very superior Spanish to good Turkish, the former being a bulky, clean seed at a fair price. "Nu-Seed," introduced by the firm some twelve months ago, does not appear to make much headway among conservative bird-keepers, but a few who have used it regularly speak highly of it as a staple food. The firm caters for all branches of the Fancy and every variety of bird, hard or soft bill, and during the show we were informed did excellent business.

Messrs. Spiller and Baker had a tastefully arranged stall, with a large and splendid assortment of seeds, etc., on view. This firm has a big demand for their special Finch mixture and wild seeds These seeds are not only used by keepers of Finches, but Canary men who know anything always keep a few packets in use among their stock.

Messrs. Hyde and Co.'s stall made quite an imposing show. This well-known firm caters for all branches of the Fancy. Their packet seeds are known in nearly every household, and extensively used. They are well known, too, as the purveyors of shell grit and sand, various packet foods, and medicines, of which the firm send out huge quantities during the twelvemonth.

Messrs. Edwards made an excellent display, and did splendid business during the exhibition. All their packet seeds are put in yellow paper covers, which at once identifies them, and we are told the seeds used are of the best possible quality only. Certainly the sample shown to our representative was of very high merit.

The Molassine Company were exhibiting the well known foods and requisites, medicines, etc., sold for many years by Messrs. Welham and Co. The quality of these goods is remarkably high. The Harta Mountain bread we remember in our youth, and we were told the sale is still very large, and now steadily increasing. Messrs. Welham's medicines are well known, and have been satisfactorily tested by most bird keepers.

CAGE BIRDS stall was placed, as usual, at the entrance, and during every day of the show the pressure of buyers round it was quite as strong as the attendant could cope with. The numerous books displayed, including "Our Canaries," were always a source of attraction, many visitors taking this opportunity of "seeing before purchasing."

One attraction inside the show was the fine collection of stuffed birds got together by Mr. Geo. Crabb, the well-known chairman of the L. and P.O.S. Mr. Crabb is still in want of a few first-class specimens of all kinds—Canaries, British, and Foreign—and would be glad if fanciers would remember him when any well-known winner goes on his "last journey."

Mr. J. W. Ramsden displayed a neat case containing samples of his well-known colour food, both ground and in the original pods. Many fanciers had not seen the latter before, and were naturally very much interested in this exhibit of high-class tasteless peppers.

Wild-Bird Life.

Linnets in Mid-Winter.

After a lot of rain we generally get a fair share of foggy mornings and this winter has been no exception to the general rule. Some of them have been usually thick. Although fog and mist are very objectionable to human beings, wild birds do not appear to be affected much by them. They sing quite as cheerfully, and as strongly as in bright sunshine. It really appears as if birds cannot help singing when they are in good form. They sing because they must. As Tennyson says: "I do but sing because I must, and pipe but as the Linnet sings." As we all know, the poet was a keen student of Nature, and of wild birds in particular, and of these he had his favourites—the little brown Linnet being one of them. He mentions it several times, and in a manner that shows he thoroughly understood its habits.

The Linnet is an incessant and sweet songster, and loses nothing in comparison with other Finches for variety, some notes are particularly pleasing, full and melodious. But these are the individual notes of good performers. To hear a flock of them singing and twittering together, the one impression is the pleasing sweetness of the chorus. A few days ago the writer sitting in the winter sunshine was fortunate enough to get near a flock, most of them twittering and recording their song. One bold fellow nearer us than were the others was particularly conspicuous for his size, and song. He was perched on a twig of an old ash stump, away from his companions, his notes were clear and loud. He stood out so boldly, that he appeared to be quite the chief performer. They appeared to be having a little relaxation from their usual occupation of foraging for food, they had evidently been busy all the morning, and then retired to this sunny spot to enjoy a little rest, and possibly song. Of course rest in the afternoon is the usual thing with wild birds, and then an hour or so before retiring for the night is given up to feeding, and their supper is not a light one, the crop in some cases being stuffed to almost bursting point. The writer has shot Woodpigeons just before roosting with the crop so full that it has burst open with the fall, possibly a shot or two had started the fracture, but to see the contents laid out afterwards, one would hardly credit the possibility of a bird managing to cram so much matter into such a little space.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

After balance sheet had been adopted, the auditors' report of the ballot was read, showing the following gentlemen had been elected, viz.:—President, Mr. R. Heggie; vice-presidents, Messrs. T. Penman and F. Bowman; secretary and treasurer, Mr. R. B. Gibb, 96, Middleton Street, Ibrox, Glasgow. Decided, to reduce number of committee men to five; following elected:—Messrs. A. Girvan (Ayr), J. R. Reid (Cowdenbeath), and C. Martin, J. F. Park, and R. T. Anderson (Glasgow); auditors, Messrs. D. F. Webster and W. Simpson. Rules were gone over, and a few minor alterations made. Secretary's report of the season's progress was considered very satisfactory. The average entry at our patronised shows worked out at about 10 birds per class, and the quality was in advance of previous years. President handed prizes as follows:—Club's challenge rose-bowl and gold medal for most points over season, to Mr. C. Martin, 88 points; half set of china, presented by Mr. A. Girvan, for runner-up, Mr. J. McLellan, 66, whose nearest opponents were Misses Heggies and Girvan, with 62 and 52 points respectively. Mr. Heggie's novice special (a cake basket) won by Mr. J. McLellan; winners of Mr. Bowman's specials for most points in Y.B. classes at the four country shows were: Lochgelly, Mr. G. MacRobbie, Ayr Mr. C. Martin, Kilmarnock Dr. Syson, Lochore Mr. A. Girvan. At club show held at Glasgow and district fixture, Mr. R. F. Barr's gold medal for best young bird was won by Mr. C. Martin; club's specials for most points in Y.B. classes: Champ. Section, 1st Mr. G. MacRobbie, 2nd Mr. C. Martin, 3rd Mr. G. Crichton; Novice Section, 1st Mr. W. Sanderson, 2nd Mr. J. C. Sinclair, 3rd Messrs. W. Simpson and A. Hendry (tied). Decided, to hold only three meetings during year. Past and prospective members specially invited to note we also decided to hold a F.F. show during summer. I shall be glad to hear from old members intending renewing their membership.—R. B. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

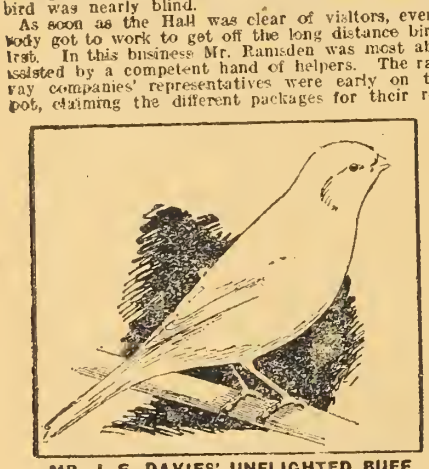
Although the sales did not quite reach last year's record cash total, they equalled that of 1910, £260 worth of birds changing hands. None of the sales, however, were at high figures, some of the biggest being £5 for a grand yell. Belgian and £5 for an unflighted buff Yorkie from the novice section, purchased at the time of the show closing, another yell. here going for four guineas. The winning yell. novice Norwich was not dear at £3. As usual, few of the birds in the '30s. selling classes journeyed home again, another proof of the demand for decent birds at this figure. There were many sales in the British bird section. An unnoticed Goldie found a new owner at £2, and the second prize Siskin at two guineas. An unnoticed Greenfinch was also claimed at the same figure. Mr. Williams' grand Hawfinch, which stood second, was not dear to his buyer at the catalogue price of five guineas. Other sales among the British included the 1st prize Reed Bunting, £3; Blackcap, £2; Wheatear, £2; Bramble-finch, £3, and Twite, 45s. Curiously enough, no sales took place out of the novices' British and Hybrid classes, and very few Foreign birds changed hands, which is attributed to the weather conditions keeping would-be purchasers of these beauties at home. As usual, a great number of birds were sold from the popular extra stock class; and quite two-thirds of the cages entered were disposed of. We heard that several people wanted to buy the first prize Mule in the Limit class, but the show manager refused to sell it on the ground that the bird was nearly blind.

As soon as the Hall was clear of visitors, everybody got to work to get off the long distance birds first. In this business Mr. Ramsden was most ably assisted by a competent hand of helpers. The railway companies' representatives were early on the pot, claiming the different packages for their respective lines, and everything worked with exceptional speed and smoothness. The show-room was emptied before the clock struck ten; a really great achievement of the officials. The birds looked in very fine condition, too, considering the terrible weather, and at the end of the show many looked quite fit to attend another such function and hold their own with freshly staged birds.



MR. J. E. DAVIES' UNFLIGHTED BUFF NORWICH.
Winner of diploma for best Nor. in show.

The most welcome change in the weather to milder conditions delighted the management, as the birds could travel home much more comfortably, and at no risk of delays en route. Many fanciers journeyed up to town to take their pets home, although, as they said, there was no reason for them to do so, but as they had previously made arrangements to do this, they carried them out. Possibly an excuse for spending a few more hours at the show had something to do with it, eh?

CHAMPION NORWICH SECTION.

Judge, Mr. H. W. Battye.

The Norwich Plainheads made a magnificent display. Birds of superb type and wonderful substance, teeming with quality and with colour of great richness were to be seen in every class, right through the entire section. Truly a sight, leaving in one's mind an impression not likely to be forgotten. It was an object lesson as to what can be obtained by the careful and judicious breeding of this most popular variety. Those who had the opportunity of inspecting the "studies" present, were satisfied to the fullest extent, we do not hesitate in saying. The aisle in which the "short and thick 'uns'" graced the benches was crowded at times; one met there fanciers from North, South, East and West, all scrutinizing the many beautiful birds on view.

Mr. J. E. Davies (Stockport) the N.P.C. cup winner three years in succession, put down some wonderful specimens. His unflighted clear buff cock, which has proved the "trump card" on many occasions this season, took the diploma (champion section) special for best Norwich in the show, also both the Victorian Society's specials (per Mr. F. White) for best unflighted and best Nor. It is well worthy of these great honours, being a true model; its equal we have not seen for many a long day. Mr. J. Smeaton sent all the way from Musselburgh, Scotland, some "bonny lads and lassies." The Scotch representatives were hard nuts to crack, and sweet as the kernels therein; three firsts and other honours went to the land of "whiskey and cakes." The special for 2nd best went to an exceptionally fine cl. yell. cock, the property of Mr. J. Thomas (Halifax), of rare size and shape, and lovely colour and carriage. Mr. H. W. Sheldon captured the Challenge Cup, also sp. for best bird in classes 1 14 (members of the L. and P.O.S.), with a magnificent cl. buff cock. Mr. J. W. Ramsden's special (for hottest fed bird) went to a cl. yell. cock, quite a "ball of fire," the successful owner being Mr. W. Collins (Devonport). Best vhc, Mr. J. Howard (Norwich); best hc, Mr. W. Collins.

Norwich Greens.

Judge, Mr. C. A. House.

With an increased entry, the Norwich Greens also exhibited an improvement in colour and feather. The majority of the exhibits were of a good grass-green hue, and exceptionally fine in feather. Further, the elongated half-bred Yorkshires are now quite a thing of the past, but even yet some of the birds staged are quite long enough. One point we would like to impress strongly upon exhibitors is that a green is as much improved by a wash as is a clear Norwich. It is impossible for the quality of the feather to show itself if it is covered with smoke and dirt; further, the beautiful grassy tone of colour is completely obscured. The special for the best bird in the section fell to Mr. Handley's winning yellow, a magnificent bird for quality and colour, and of true Norwich type. It is a pied, 'tis true, but its short, compact body, neat wings and tail, placed it well ahead of the rest.

YELL. (12): 1, sp best Nor. green, Handley, pied tail, lovely colour and feather, short compact body, nicely moulded head, well marked, capital wings and tail, shown very fit; 2, vhc, sp best, vhc, Lawson, magnificent quality of feather, rare chest and shoulders, capital wings and tail, not so grassy in col., and a bit browy in head, staged in the pink, vhc capital col., nice quality of feather, good wings and tail, not so well marked; 3, Jenkins, pied tail, fine bold bird, better col than 2nd, being deeper and richer, but is not so chubby in shape, and is longer in wing and tail, capital head, good quality of feather; 4, c, Harding, pied throat, neck, and vent, capital head, nice quality of feather, good colour, not so well braced in wings, and tail and rather longer, e very pretty pied, nice col., not so compact in feather; hc, Hales, lovely col. and quality of feather, grand style, but not chubby enough. BUFF (12): 1, Harrison, pied tail, rare shape, plenty of chest, grand head and shoulders, lovely silky feather, very neat wings and tail; 2, sp, best, 3rd, Lawson, grand shape, deep round chest, grand shoulders, splendid wings and tail, magnificent feather and carriage, not so deep and rich in col., and is also narrow in head, most beautifully shown, 3 fine big bold bird, of splendid rich deep col., rare quality of feather, longer in wings and tail, and wings are not so smartly carried; 4, Smeaton, very typical and stylish, good head, chest, and shoulders, nice silky feather, but shows a bit bronzy on top, and in flight coverts, hardly so well shown; vhc, Handley, very nice, rich col., good quality of feather, short in wings and tail, but not so much substance, and does not carry its tail quite so nicely as it should, a bit soft; hc, Hodder, grand col. and quality, nice wings and tail, on the slim side; c, Jenkins, pied throat, vent, and tail, nice shape and col., but a trifle browy, and rather inclined to frill on chest. HEN, YELL. (6): 1, Lawson, rather heavily pied, but rare shape, sound, rich, grassy col., splendid silky feather, stands well; 2, vhc, Barker, rare shaped body, very nice col. and quality, good shaped skull, short in wings and tail, but does not carry her wings quite so nicely as she should; vhc fairly varieg., capital shape, needed tubbing; 3, Godfrey, splendid col. and feather, neat head, rather slim in body; 4, Harding, nice col. and feather, fair shape, but drops wings; absent, 207, Godfrey. This class was not nearly so good as the cocks. BUFF (6): 1, Barker, pied throat and tail, splendidly rich in col., very compact in feather, nice chubby shape, good head, smart wings and tail, in grand form; 2, Jenkins, pied wing, thigh, and tail, most beautiful col., capital quality of feather, very stylish, good wings and tail; 3, Lawson, pied neck and tail, very nice col., neat body, compact silky feather, not quite so clever in wing carriage; 4, Harding, rather longer in body, wonderful rich col., grand quality of feather, a big bouncing hen, but could do with a bit more meal; vhc, Bloor, nice, smart body, shape, good colour and style, but a bit rough at thighs, which was difficult to understand in such a bird, possibly not well washed; hc, Enever, very nice col.

THE CRESTS & CRESTBREDS.

Judge, Mr. T. Heath.

The Crests and Crest-breds were by no means large classes, but numbered many fine birds. The yellow Crests seem well-nigh defunct, and those that did turn up we thought but shadows of some of the lights of other days. The yellow Crest-breds, however, had some fine birds amongst them. Messrs. Radley's buff Green Crested cock is a noble bird, and Mr. Lazarus' hen a gem of the first water. Both came in for a deal of admiration. The Crest-breds came up well, Mr. Barker putting down a topper, and Mr. Bewick, with the famous "Duchess," coming in easily first and securing the diploma. The current year's birds were a really nice lot, and of high merit, and we regret that our old friend of so many years, Mr. J. Dobson, could not, alas! be present to see his favourites. Though dead, he is not forgotten by his fellow-members of the L. and P.O.S. It seems a pity that the Palace Show does not now attract a larger entry of Crests, and those who remember the fights of bygone years on this national battle ground can scarcely understand it.

CREST. BUFF CK. (12): 1, Radley and Son, mealy green, a very fine crest, grand centre, beautifully arranged, great length of feather all round, nice back, crest, and good body; 2, Bewick, similar as to body marking, not quite the girth of crest or beauty of arrangement as winner, just a suspicion of open centre, yet a grand bird; 3, vhc, Greenwood and Burson, 3rd grizzle crest, smaller in body than some of the others, a full crest, neat centre, good length, vhc not quite so uniform, but a nice one; 4, Mrs. Thynne, wing mkd. D.C., hardly so well finished in formation as leaders, good length of frontal, and, in fact, all round, just a shade open at back; hc, Lazarus, cl. body D.C., a very nice bird, with a meritorious crest; c, Dobson and Son, varieg., with veiny crest that would win at many a show. HEN (10): 1, 4, Lazarus, my word; a fine pair, especially the winner, which has a splendidly

D.C., just a trifle open at centre, but dense and full of quality, a good one in good company; vhc, Barker, large crest, with good density droop and thickness; hc, Bewick, grizzle, neat, but not quite the quantity of some; c, Bette, variegated, just a wee shade large in centre, nice lot of it, however. CREST-BRED, BUFF CK. (13): 1, Barker, monster in head, domed grandly, rare width of entrance, splendid lashing, massive body, great length and width of head feather, a topper; 2, Tope, cl., beautifully rising cushion, dense and long over beak, fine lashing and back skull, wide entrance, big body, another gem; 3, Bewick, varieg., fine lashing, just a wee shade narrower at entrance than leaders, but nice formation of skull, and good lengthy head feather; 4, Mrs. E. Litchfield, nearly green, well lashed, good width of entrance and clothing over beak, a fine specimen; vhc, Lazarus, lightly varieg., a beauty, fine lashing and shape of skull, length, and density; hc, Slade, heavily varieg., a trifle narrow, but good length; c, Mason, nice. HEN (7): 1, Bewick, grand head, clothing, and lashing, fine body, wonderful length, density and width of feather; 2, Dobson and Son, varieg., fine head, not quite the girth or density of winner, but a bonny bird; 3, vhc, Evins Bros., somewhat wider entrance than 2nd, but not quite the length or density of feather, still a grand head, vhc very attractive bird; 4, Lazarus, just a wee trifle narrower in head, but beautiful length and very dense, a good one in most points; he, Radley and Son, nice length of feather; c, Slade, varieg. CREST, YELL (3): 1, Evins Bros., varieg., good one, leads easily; 2, Mrs. Litchfield, grizzle, nice frontal and, indeed, all round. C.B. YELL. (10): 1, Wallace, good head, entrance, and lashing, full of quality, fine body, rare length and width of head feather; 2, 4, Brotherton, former varieg., fine head properties, good length of feather; 3, Smith, wider at entrance, nice lashing; vhc, Waltham, nice skull; he, G. E. Slade, lightly varieg., some seemed to like better; c, A. J. Slade, green, just a trifle narrower at entrance, but nice length of head feather. CURRENT YEAR CRESTS, BUFF (8): 1, Greenwood and Burson, varieg., massive head, fine droop, good body, a really magnificent crest, a good one all through; 2, Smith, wing mkd., beautiful crest formation, although not so massive, lovely quality of crest feather and droop, a good one; 3, Brotherton, very dense and fine droop and frontal, rare length of crest feather, just a wee bit short at sides; 4, Hammett, wing mkd., fails to leaders only in size and density of crest, pretty one: vhc, Gale, neat

C.B., BUFF (9): 1, Dobson and Son, varieg., with a noble skull, grand entrance, good cushion and lash, fine length of head feather; 2, Tope, green, narrower at entrance, fine length of turn back; 3, Groves, similar col., fine shape of head, good body; 4, Brotherton, nice rise to skull, not just the length and density of leaders; vhc, Radley and Son, varieg., grand lashing, loses only in length and density, but good body; he, Day, narrow head, but really taking bird; c, Barker, smaller, nice head. CINN. CREST OR C.B. (2): 1, Mrs. Thynne, Crest, good length, a wee bit broken as if from moult, else a fine bird; 2, Jenkins, C.B., good head, very nicely clothed.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARY SECTION.

The Yorkshires this year were not up to the average either in numbers or quality, and why it would be difficult to say. The judges are old favourites who have oft been in the limelight, and exhibitors should know how to suit them. The diploma for the champion Yorksbire fell to Mr. H. H. Towers' handsome young Buff, a beautiful example of what a Yorkshire bird should be, but he was not looking so well as when we saw him earlier in the season. Like many others of the Yorkies, he seemed to be feeling the cold somewhat, but when handled he pulled himself together well. Mr. J. Bailey's famous Cinnamon-marked yellow, which secured the diploma for that variety, must have run Mr. Towers' exhibit very close for the premiership. Another remarkably fine bird was that of Mr. Dykes, which won the Green-marked championship. A slashing trio this, and one which would give a new hand a real good start. We have oft heard it said that the old hands were certain to win at the Palace. This year's results must have been disappointing to those who believe in that fallacious idea. A trio of the old hands who had anything but a happy time this year were Messrs. W. H. Shackleton, J. Wilcock, and Ogden Bros. These felt a draught even if their exhibits did not. In more than one instance we thought the hand of fate had dealt this Yorkshire triumvirate a nasty knock. Still, it's all in the game. Up to-day and down to-morrow, but with the weather as it was on Friday anything might have happened. Judges at work in top-coats and mufflers, and the birds looking thoroughly "clammed" with the cold." The Clears were rather disappointing, but the Ticks were better. Mr. Binns won in each of the classes with smart, stylish, nicely feathered birds, but neither of them could afford to give away much to the exhibits of Messrs. Bailey, Ogden, and Hawes, which followed them home. The non-flights were two bonny classes, and we liked some of the birds out of the tickets quite as well as those that were in; the competition was close indeed, and those who failed to get home need not have felt disheartened or disgraced, for the youngsters were far better than the old birds. It was somewhat of a surprise to see a Southern hen getting home first in Yellows, and Messrs. Hawes are to be heartily congratulated upon the achievement. They are triers all the way. Some most lovely birds were shown by Messrs. Bailey, Thomas, Dykes, Smith, Atkins, Chippendale, Townsend, and Ogden. The Green-marks are improving rapidly, and this year's collection we think, for quality of feather, length, style, colour, and markings, were quite the best we have seen at the Palace. Many of them looked as though they had been in the ups and downs of show life, and that a good rest would benefit them. It is some years since we saw so many Yorkies at the Palace "gone in neck," and some of these Green-marks had suffered; still, the expert eye could see their natural beauties despite this drawback. Some very fine birds were staged by Messrs. Dykes, Morrison, Townsend, Brown and Son, Bailey, Ogden, Towers, and Thornton and Bower. The latter were amongst the old hands who had some bad luck, but "Little Jimmy" took it smilingly. In Cinnamon-marks Mr. Bailey's two famous birds stood well away; they were in wonderful condition considering the work they have done this season. We doubt if a better than the championship yellow has ever been seen. Amongst the remainder there were some bonnie birds, and the classes generally were good. Messrs. Ogden scored in Yellow hens with a really smart little lady, and other choice exhibits were those of Messrs. Allen, Cooper, Morrison, Towers, and Brown and Son.

Judge, Mr. T. Heath.

BUFF (15): 1, Kearns, fine long stylish bird, capital wings and tail, splendid colour and feather, nice head, stands well up, gone a bit in neck; 2, he, Hirst, smart, shapely and stylish, lovely quality of feather, nice head and neck, good tail, but does not use his wings over well, we liked the he very much, a grand little bird, of rare quality, shape, feather and carriage; 3, Wilson, a little gem, but just a shade too little, he has shape, though, and such style, whilst his feather is simply lovely; 4, Hall, long stylish bird of good shape, nice head, not so tight in feather; vhc, Stewart, rare length, good head, neck, and back, nice tail, not over neat in wing carriage; c, Hill, nice stamp of bird, but uses wings badly; Nos. 319, Wilcock, 322, Shackleton, 321, Ogden Bros., a nice trio, which we liked, but it was not their turu to-day; their luck was out. TKD. BUFF (18): 1, Binns, very nice cheek tkd., good head, neck, back and tail, capital colour and feather, shapely body, just a bit awkward with flights now and then; 2, vhc, Ogden Bros., very smart thigh tkd., rare head, neck and shoulders, wings and tail, nice length, stands well up on perch and tapers nicely right through, splendid feather and colour; vhc, neck tkd., dashing bird of rare shape, splendid quality of feather, well braced wings and tail; 3, Hawes Bros., wing tkd., capital head, rare shoulders, wings and tail, nice level colour, beautiful quality of feather, but seemed to be feeling the cold when we saw it; 4, Bailey, thigh ticked, grand style and quality of feather, but rather strongly built, hardly up to Jimmy's usual style; he, Parrott, very slim and racily built, lovely quality of feather, plenty of colour, well shown; c, Kearns, capital colour and feather, good shape, not quite so smart in carriage. UNFLIG., BUFF (24): 1, Towers, wins the Yorkshire championship diploma, splendid length, grand head, shoulders, wings and tail, very nicely cut away behind, stands like a soldier, rare quality and colour, but showing signs of the season's wear and tear; 2, Clark, not a large one, but very nicely modelled, carries a wealth of colour, and is beautifully feathered right through, splendid carriage; 3, Thomas, another little one, neat and dapper, feathered like glass, stands like a guardsman, but is somewhat pale in colour; 4, Smith, nice length and style, good head, wings and tail, not quite so clean cut in front; vhc, Robertshaw, rare shape, colour and feather, rather short, good head, very neat wings and tail; he, Kearns, smart, shapely neck tkd., very neat, nice style of feather; c, Chippendale, stylish, well feathered, good wings and tail. THE YORKSHIRE GREENS.

Judge, Mr. C. A. House.

Yorkshire greens showed a nice increase in numbers, and the quality certainly was splendid. Looking at the type of birds shown to-day, and looking back in memory's panels to the birds of twenty years ago, one wonders how the change was wrought. So far as type is concerned, the greens to-day are equal with any other colour in the Yorkshire section, and judged for type alone, many of them can hold their own well with their paler coloured brethren, but in the green Yorkshire so many things come into the reckoning, and type is only one of the many. It so often happens that a bird which is almost ideal in shape, fails badly in colour; its thighs are smoky or its wings bronzy. Another superb in colour and quality shows evidences of the heavy wings of the birds of the Rooney days, a third may be splendid in type and colour, but it has all the old-fashioned coarseness of body feather. These difficulties all meet the earnest breeder, and in a modified form they meet the judges, and there is no judge of our acquaintance who is over anxious to tackle the greens; in fact, most of them give a big sigh of relief when they find that one or other of their colleagues has the greens. Mr. Walker won the special here with a good solid coloured buff of grand length, and beautifully feathered, whilst he stood up like a guardsman. As a class, the buffs were superior to the yellows, even though several of them showed a bit of bronze in the wing. Where they excelled was chiefly in feather and smartness of carriage. Amongst the hens, the yellows were better than the buffs, but both were good.

THE CINNAMONS.

Judge, Mr. J. Wones.

The Cinnamons were a grand lot, both in point of numbers, quality, and type. There was a decided absence of that nasty green cast of colour which has so often marred the beauty of the Cinnamon. There were sixty-four entries in five classes, an average of near upon twelve per class, a nice compliment to Mr. J. Wones, who judged for the first time at the Palace. The birds generally were very pure in colour, and full of quality. There were some fine-headed, beautifully burnished birds to be seen. Altogether the average of merit was very high. Mrs. Deacon and Messrs. Godley and Dormer fought out some hard battles for supremacy.

CINN. YELL. CK. (12): 1, 4, Dormer, good depth of cinny col., level and of right tone, carried right up the throat, fine head, well burnished, teeming with quality, 4th fine quality, pure col.; 2, 3, Godley, 2nd another lustrous and silky feathered bird, not quite so stout in body and shaft, fine head, rich tone of col., but not carried quite so full up throat as winner, very little fault to find, 3rd smaller, not quite so pure in col., just a wee sign of weakness at throat, nice one; vhc, Nason, a good one; he, c, Deacon, former smaller, nice col., good quality, latter fails only in depth of col.. BUFF CK. Deacon, sound cinn. col. all over except a trifle pale at throat, silky feather, good head and bloom, close after 2nd in merit; 4, vhc, Heys, a trifle paler in col. but soft and rich mealing; vhc, a trifle feathery, which spoils its compactness; he,

THE LIZARD CANARIES.

Judge, Mr. C. A. House.

Only two classes were provided for these charming and deeply interesting little members of the Canary family, and the entry was not at all good, falling short of last year's figures even. Still, some very nice birds were staged. Mr. J. Dewsnap's Gold secured the two specials for the best, also Ramsden's colour-feed special, and well it deserved them. It is a bonny bird all through. It was closely run by its stable companion; some preferred one and some the other, but there was little in it. Mr. F. Ramer's feeding Silver was a lovely quality bird and grandly spangled.

GOLD (11) 1, 2, c, three spls., including Ramsden's colour feed, Dewsnap, superb shape, lovely rich col. right through, very even in rowing, clear bright spangles, splendid chest and sides, full of quality, neat cap, and rather better shoulders, but not so good on thighs, capital col., a larger bird but hardly so shapely or well finished; 3, Barnes, very nice shaped broken cap, not so rich in col., grandly round, nice sides, good wings, just a bit rough and open in tail; 4, hc, Hamer, lovely col., full of work, very nicely arranged, good shape and style, grandly feathered, just a trifle light in wing coverts; hc, smart and shapely, plenty of work, but not so well put on, and is not so bright in col.; vhc, Oliver, very shapely broken cap, plenty of work, good wings and tail, nice shape and style, good feather, not quite so bright in col. SILVER (9): 1, 3, Hamer, fine bold shapely broken cap, magnificent col., feather and spangle, beautiful wings and tail, capital shoulders, breast and thighs, in rare form; 3, splendid back, fine bold spangling, beautifully arranged, full of quality and col., nice head, sound wings and tail, but is inclined to drop wings; 2, hc, Dewsnap, very rich coloured broken cap, grand shape and style, beautifully feathered, fine bold, regular spangling, good shoulders, but not quite equal to winner in breast and sides; hc, rattling good bird, full of work and col., nice feather, but very wild; 4, c, Oliver, very nice shape and carriage, neat cap, plenty of work, but not quite so regular, sound wings and tail, but paler in body col.; c, shapely, nice col. and spangling, open in tail; vhc, Barnes, very nice shape and size, good col., grandly feathered, carries a lot of spangling, but it is not quite so bold and distinct as the leaders; No. 697, Riseborough, had injured its foot and could not stand.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARIES.

The "yee gema" came up well, and gave the judges plenty to do sorting them out, for without doubt visitors to Sydenham saw the best collection of these little charmers ever staged in the glass-house. Looking them over carefully, one was surprised at the merit of the many birds standing cardless. There were real good ones without any decoration whatever. In several classes a bird could have been chosen almost at random among the first half dozen, to win. This equality of merit was particularly noticeable in the buff cocks and yell. hens. The latter class was simply marvellous, and any exhibitor getting noticed at all among such lovely damsels has something more than an ordinary specimen in his bird-room. A dozen even-marks made a most interesting class, a good one generally having its share of admirers. That old breeder, Mr. Geo. Meekley, of Carlisle, staged the winner, a lovely yell., beautifully marked, the markings being just heavy enough to show up well on an even ground.

Judge, Mr. J. Robson.

Green Borders.

Judge, Mr. C. A. House.

With fifty entries in the four classes, the Green Borders came up remarkably well and showed an increase on the figures of last year, as did all the Greens. Yellow cocks were the strongest class both numerically and in point of merit, whilst the buff hens were the weakest in both respects. The former made one of the best classes we have seen staged. Mr. Richards' special winner was an exceptionally fine bird, slim and stylish, beautifully feathered, and full of lustre and finish. One of the best of his colour we have handled for a long time. Good in colour and style were the buffs, but many of them were rather strong in head, whilst not a few had a tinge of that peculiar smokiness which affects buff greens. Most of the hens were inclined to chubbiness and were not so erect as we like to see them. Still, all in all, they were a very nice lot.

YELL (16): 1, sp. best Green Border, Richards, finely drawn, slim body, beautifully moulded, no awkward angles, tightly braced wings and tail, very erect and steady in carriage, fine silky feather, rich grassy green col., well finished all round, and as smart as a new pin; 2, Johnston, beautiful shape and position, neat head, lovely gloss and finish on feather, not quite so rich and deep in colour, full of nerve and style, grandly carried wings and tail, in rare form; 3, Parker, superb col., rich deep grass green, feathered like a Java, very neat head, nice shoulders, wings and tail, not quite so slim, one of the old-fashioned sort, but rare colour and quality; 4, Stovin, more the correct shape, slim and tapering, rare carriage, very smart and piquant lovely col., not quite so fine in feather and lacked bloom; vhc, Kerr and Smith, another that errs just a trifle on the stout side, very neat head, well braced wings and tail, sound rich col., beautifully feathered and full of style, in grand form; hc, McQuillan, capital shape, beautifully feathered, nice compact feather, smart wings and tail, but rather dark in col., loses in bloom; c, Williams, smart, stylish, nervy bird, nice head, back, wings and tail, capital colour, good shape but is a trifle harsh in feather. BUFF (13): 1, Wilson, a grand little fellow, stands well up on perch and shows the delicacy of his outline beautifully, very neat in head, rare back and wings and tail, lovely col., beautifully finished right through; 2, Green, hardly so neat in head, splendid back, wings and tail, sound rich col., beautifully feathered, full of style, a real bonnie bird and well shown; 3, Johnston, just a shade stouter and does not get quite so erect, very neat head, beautifully balanced wings and tail, lovely rich grassy tone of col., feathered like a Java and as fit as a fiddle; 4, Cubby, for shape and style perhaps the best in the class, one of those birds which catch the eye of a judge immediately and lingers there, difficult to put down, his one fault hollow in back, very neat wings and tail, and lovely col. and feather; vhc, Graham, magnificent rich grassy green col., rare shape, very slim and stylish, nice head, well balanced wings and tail, hardly so silky and close in feather; hc, Gentleman, rare style, grandly feathered, beautiful rich grassy tone of col., splendid head, back, wings, and tail, a shade too full in chest; c, Kerr and Smith, very smart and stylish, grand wings and tail, capital feather, very nice body col. but just a shade bronzy in wing coverts; No. 878, Ferguson, lovely col. and feather, was very soft and fluffy, evidently had caught a chill. HEN, YELL. (11): 1, Ferguson, a real beauty, recalled to mind some of the champions of the last decade that used to come out of the Morecambe stable, a real model of a Border, lovely col., beautifully feathered, rare style, has a slight tick in neck; 2, 3, Johnston, very sound, rich tone of grass green col., lovely silky feather, well put on, neat head, grand wings and tail, full of style, hardly so slim as the winner, 3rd grand head, wings and tail, beautifully feathered right through, full of nerve and handles well, hardly so clear on back, and a bit more substance; 4, Green, for shape and style one of the best in the class, beautifully moulded and stands so as to show off her graceful outlines to the best advantage, nice silky feather, but not so rich and bright in col.; vhc, Parker, a trifle flat in head, neat shoulders, grand wing and tail carriage, handles well, hardly bright enough in col.; ho, Bexon, capital col., nice silky feather, plenty of style, well balanced wings and tail, on the chubby side; c, Gentleman, rattling good little Border, grand under-colour and feather, rare style and shape, just a bit bronzy on back. BUFF (10): 1, hc, Johnston, very neat and smart in body, capital head, nice level back, well balanced wings and tail, beautiful carriage, plenty of nerve, very sound and rich in col., nicely finished, hc grand body col., beautiful quality of feather, very nice shape, full of style, but shows traces of bronze on back; 2, Gentleman, rather larger than winner and carries a bit more chest, magnificent rich deep tone of col., grandly feathered right through, full of quality and shown as fit as a fiddle; 3, Green, very neat head, capital shoulders, wings, and tail, nice under-colour, just a shade dull on back and not quite so clean cut behind the legs; 4, McQuillan, better shape than the last, with any amount of nerve and style, and whilst showing plenty of col. it is not quite of the true grass green hue; vhc, Parker, very smart and stylish, neat head and shoulders, well balanced flights and tail, grandly feathered, but lacks warmth and brilliancy of col.; c, Hocking, another grand little bird of good shape and style, with capital feather properties, but shows bronze on back.

LANCASHIRES AND WHITE CANARIES.

Judge, Mr. Geo. Gardner.

The Lancashires made up in quality for what might be lacking in numbers, and although this feature was observable in both Coppies and Plainheads, yet there was a slight predominance in favour of the latter, which were also the stronger in numbers. Mr. G. Fitton—a name associated with the variety ever since the writer was a "boy" in the Fancy, and that is a day or two ago—secured the championship diploma with a massive buff Plainhead. Mr. Hordern's grand buff coppy came a good second, and secured the bronze medal. While the Lancashire is not bred in such numbers as the elegant bird of the County of Broad Acres, yet there are a few plucky breeders who stick to "the giant," and it is refreshing to find "Owdham" still to the fore, and the banner being held aloft by an old name.

LANCS. COPPY (5): 1, bronze medal, Hordern, a grand fellow, massive body, well rolled together and well packed up, grand front, very nice shaped coppy, might perhaps have been a bit fuller, good bird; 2, Beattie, very similar in make-up, except that it was a little looser perhaps, grand bird for size and substance; 3, Fitton, yell., lacking the substance, of course, of the two leading buffs, very good length of coppy feather for a yell; 4, Thurling, fine bodied bird, with a grizzled coppy, which was neat but just lacked the frontal finish of leaders; vhc, Thurling, again nice. PH. (9): 1, championship diploma, 2, 3, Fitton, a clean sweep and a grand team, a buff, yellow, and buff in the order named, leader very massive, finely proportioned, grand neck, and nice width of well clothed skull, a Lancs. all over; 2nd well after winner, massive headpiece for a yell., plenty of substance in build; 3rd fine fellow, not quite the "nobility" of head of winner; 4, Hordern, yell., not quite so massive in build, but full of Lancs. properties; vhc, Kay, fine length of body, just lacking the substance of leaders; hc, Beattie, again nice; c, Thurling, buff. WHITE CAN. (9): All of the Yorks. persuasion, although there was one Nor. type entered, it did not put in an appearance: 1, 3, 4, vhc, hc, Kiesel, first very pure in col., as pure in col. as the Snowflakes, beautifully washed, nice shape and feather, abounding in quality, every feather in place, said to be a son of last year's winner, which to-day was 3rd, beaten a little if not in purity of col. in fineness of finish and glossiness; 4, vhc, he, all very nice, but scarcely answering so well to the Yorks. type, a fine team and highly creditable to Mr. Kiesel; 2, Dr. A. R. Galloway, larger and more typical bird, if anything, than any, but lacking closeness of feather, which seemed a trifle open at times. These birds need a great amount of care and attention, as if soiled it mars the finish.

SCOTCH FANCY, BELGIAN, AND FRILL CANARY SECTIONS.

Scotch Fancies and Frills were not over plentiful, although we thought some of the birds staged were of very high quality, and richly deserved to number a win at the Palace among their achievements. Of course, the Scotch are an old variety, and have many admirers, but unfortunately few in the south, or we might possibly manage to make a bigger show. The Frills are still in the hands of but few fanciers, and we can consequently hardly expect a big entry of high-class birds. Belgians made quite an imposing array, and looked well staged in their partially wrapped up cages. This variety generally attracts attention at Sydenham, the lady visitors being specially interested in them. There were some grand birds on view, several of them coming from the West of England, where this one time "King of the Fancy" is still held in high esteem. A young bird sent by Mr. Horrill, of Barnstaple, won the special for best. He is a shapely specimen, and delightful to handle. Mr. McConnell, of Belfast, also staged a grand buff, and fully deserved his win for his pluck in sending such a long journey during this severe weather.

Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar.

YOUNG BIRD (9): 1, vhc, Horrill, a beauty for outline, and stylish, full of nerve, grand shoulders, good reach and head, a beauty; 2, hc, Reddehough, beautiful shape and style, takes grand position, lovely head, will make a beauty; 3, Steel, very straight, grand shoulders and depth, wonderful reach, neat head, close up; 4, Madame Verhees, grand depth and shoulders, good wings, neat head; c, Walmsley.

OPEN NOVICE CANARY SECTION.

Open Novice Norwich.

Judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes.

The open novice Norwich section, under the patronage of the Southern N.P. Club, brought together a very nice collection of birds. The prizes were well split up, too, many "nibbling" at the good things cheered, which always tends towards success, much more so than when one or two hold the monopoly. The equality of merit right through the section was decidedly marked, this being another healthy sign. The clear buff cock owned by Mr. S. M. Davis (Boscombe), took the sp. for best novice bird, also for best novice bird owned by a member of the S.N.P.C., and truly deserved both. Mr. E. Stead stood 1st in the tkd. yell. class with a fine specimen which was awarded Ramsden's sp. for heaviest fed, and was quickly claimed at catalogue price, £3. The winning tkd. buff cock, the property of Mr. C. E. Bown, took one's eye, also the unflig. buff cock standing 1st in a class of 23, shown by Mr. C. H. Goodman, was greatly admired. Best 2nd went to Mr. G. F. Crawford; best 3rd, Mr. A. H. Campbell; best vhc, Mr. W. A. Wilson; best hc, Miss Edwards; best c, Mr. H. Clegg.

NOVICE NOR. CL. YELL. (8): 1, G. Brown, short and thick set, capital col. and feather, lovely carriage, nice substance, shown in the pink; 2, Taylor, shade more substance, rich col. and quality, neat head and neck, longer in body and inclined to drop tail a little; 3, Fuller, most substance in class, red-hot in colour, A1 feather; 4, Parr, cobby, well clothed, rare col., moves well, seek after more substance, Mr. P; vhc, Goodman; hc, Gollan; No. 978 Hillman, and No. 979, Davis, both w.c., mkd. thighs, latter best in class, had it been clear. BUFF (12): 1, best novice, also best shown by a member of the S.N.P.C., Davis, grand shape, rich col., covered over with neat frosting, nice substance and carriage, extremely bonny; 2, Hillman, a wee shade larger, capital feather and col., neat head and neck, barrel a little long, yet very taking; 3, Newton, well fed, good shape and size, nice head character, not quite so neat in carriage, still well worth its place; 4, Steed, wonderful substance, A1 col., a wee bit open in feather on breast and around neck; vhc, Wilson; hc, Crawford; c, Jeffries and Husband. TKD. YELL. (11): 1, Ramsden's sp, Steed, mkd. eyes and neck, full of fire, rare size, capital quality, very typical, jaunty carriage, a gem, quickly claimed at catalogue price, £3; 2, Crawford, variegated, beautiful soft silky texture of feather, shapely, neat carriage, not quite the substance, still very bonny, close up; 3, Kenyon, variegated, teeming with quality and col., nice head and neck, good wings, clean cut, well placed; 4, Guffick, variegated, ablaze with col., A1 quality, nice head and neck, longer in barrel, wings, and tail; vhc, Piggin; hc, Mrs. G. Brown; c, Master Tripe. BUFF (12): 1, Brown, mkd. eyes, lovely shape and quality, rare substance, grand carriage, not overdone with col., still a gem; 2, Simonett, mkd. wing and head, short and thick set, A1 quality and col., good size, clean cut away, very close on heels of winner; 3, Jones, variegated, grand quality and col., very shapely, nice carriage of wings and tail, clean under; 4, Rodger, mkd. head and neck, well clothed, good tone of col., nice head and neck, feed less kindly, Mr. R.; vhc, Piggin; hc, Steed; c, Wade; No. 1006, Pye, absent. HEN (18): A very choice lot: 1, Booth, huff, mkd. wing, unbeatable for shape, superb quality, well up in substance, rare carriage, a charming damsel; 2, Clegg, beautifully fed cl. yell., nice feather, shapely, and of good size, clean cut away, very promising maiden, with time should make up extremely fine; 3, vhc, Hardley and Son, buff, mkd. wing, neck, and head, rare substance, A1 quality and col., neat expression of head, fatty chest, which tells against her; 4, Crawford; warmly fed cl. yell., cobby, and of lovely feather; vhc, Lohr; hc, Goodman; c, Hattie. UNFLIG. (33): Grand collection of youngsters, extra prizes awarded, competition extraordinary keen: 1, Goodman, buff, mkd. wing, clothed to perfection, rattling fine col., rare shape and substance, beautiful wing carriage, should make a gem another year; 2, sp best 2nd Crawford, cl. yell., true type, red hot, lovely feather and carriage, tight as a Java, nice size, very promising; 3, sp best 3rd, Campbell, shapely cl. buff, smooth as wax, good size, A1 feather, col., and frosting, neat wings and tail; 4, hc, sp best hc, Edwards, cl. yell., delightful quality and col., fine head and neck, may thicken out a lot yet with time, if so, will be a grand specimen; 5, Booth, cl. yell., rare substance, fine col. and feather, very shapely, best in class; ex. 5, Wade, cl. yell., grand shape and feather, nice size, good wing carriage, well fed, would look a picture; vhc, Lathleiff; hc, Brown; c, sp best c, Clegg; c, Campbell.

Open Novice Crests.

Judge, Mr. J. Robson.

Novice Crests and Crest-breds were good classes, the latter perhaps being better than the former; but they were generally a level lot, and showed distinct evidence that the junior fanciers in this variety are coming along satisfactorily. The Yorkshires were—as might be expected, from the great popularity the variety has attained—grand classes, and Mr. H. Broadley found plenty of work to sort out the winners. Some classy birds were on view. In both cocks and hens there were keen fights for premier positions, and many of the novices—judged by the exhibits—should soon blossom into champions.

CRESTS (12): 1, Jones, lightly varieg. Crest of nice droop, just a trifle open at centre, well laid frontal, rare bodied bird; 2, Mrs. G. Brown, good shape of crests, nearly green, crest opens just a bit to back from centre; 3, 4, hc, Dr. Twigg, 3rd griz. crest, very neat formation, 4th shapely crest of nice lay, a trifle short at sides, and wee bit small in body, otherwise good; vhc, Lightburn, very neat formation, needs just a little more length of crest feather; c, Campbell, crest just a bit split at sides from centre, good sized body. C.B. (14): 1, Campbell, varieg., fine bold skull, good cushion, entrance, and lashing, turns back nicely, bold body, nice one all through; 2, Roberts, varieg., little narrower in skull, well lashed, good length of head feather, shows well; 3, vhc, c, Twigg, wide head, nearly green, dense, but scarcely the length of head feather of winners, vhc grand body, fails just a trifle in narrowness of skull; 4, Mrs. Spooner, lightly varieg., well lashed, good entrance, nice body, a little spare of feather at cushion; hc, Lightburn, nice shaped skull, but a trifle narrow.

Open Novice Yorkshires.

Judge, Mr. H. Broadley.

YORKS. CK., CL., ETC., YELL. (20): A romping good class: 1, Brook and Oldfield, very straight, nicely cleaned out and tapered, plenty of leg, nice behind leg, a smart bird; 2, Foster Allen, another sweet bird, not quite so clean cut perhaps, but full of fire, rare qual. and leg; 3, Hirst, nice pose, qual., and action, spreads tail a trifle too much; 4, Greig and Pearson, very pretty, well cleaned out, full of fire and quality; vhc, Limbert, fails only in length, neat, nice quality; vhc, Naylor, good length, hardly enough distance behind leg, fine feather; hc, Lane, stronger in build and lacks length behind legs, good quality feather; hc, Goldsmith, stands well; c, Brown, good feather. BUFF (13): 1, Hirst, rare shape and style, lovely feather, stands up smartly, clean cut, good head and neck—a bird of merit; 2, Shaw, very similar in many respects, full of quality, not quite so well finished off; 3, Mager, silky and soft in feather, nice head and neck, might have just a bit more length behind leg; 4, Auton, just trifle long in neck, feather as silky as needs be, neat head, well carried wings, a quick mover; vhc, Ireland, grand feather, very nice taper; hc, Atkinson, nice quality, not quite so nicely tapered as one likes to see, yet a bird of merit; c, Lane, very neat and nice feather. MKD., ETC., CK. (11): 1, King, varieg. yell., sweet bird, grand style, plenty behind leg, goes up like a rocket, close feather, wings well carried, a real nice one; 2, Kirkbright, varieg., very rich in colour, well tapered, stands well, good quality, not quite so well finished as first; 3, 4, Bush, 3rd varieg. buff, very fine tone of feather, poses well, full of fire, not quite so much behind leg as leaders; 4th varieg. yell., nice whip, stands well, grand silky feather; vhc, Rosignol, three-pointed yell., shoots up well, full of quality; hc, Simonett, cinn. varieg.; c, Fowle, varieg. yell., good quality feather. UNFLIG. YELL. (27): And some grand birds in this lot: 1, Harvey, cl. yell., full of the right sort of quality to make one, well up on the leg, nice length behind, carries itself splendidly; 2, Parker, not quite so long, nice back and wing carriage, full of quality, opens its tail a bit at times; 3, Fowle, another smart bird, rich tone of col., stands up well, nice bit of swagger; 4, Harvey, grand length, just a little thin in neck, neat head, fine style and quality of feather; vhc, Bamber, good position, back, and quality; 5, Allen, nice style, fine quality, good pose; vhc, Lloyd, very similar bird; hc, Lane, tkd., full of quality; hc, Bush, not much between these four; c, Lyall, fails just a little in length, stylish bird; c, Bamber, similar remark applies in most points. BUFF (15): 1, Fowle, racy cl., well cleaned off, goes up quickly, soft silky feather, nice behind leg, very pretty bird, teeming with quality; 2, Bush, not quite so rich in undercolour, but silky feather, well tapered, nice behind, neat head and wing carriage; 3, Atkinson, quick mover and well cleaned off all through, stylish; 4, Lambert, very much like 3rd in most points, good; vhc, Pomfret, tkd., moves well, good feather; hc, Greig and Pearson, varieg., silky feather; c, Shaw. HEN. YELL. (15): 1, Brook and Oldfield, charming little lassie, full of quality, well tapered off, proud and classy; 2, Gledhill, gives winner a good race for her money, plenty of length behind legs, stylish; 3, Wilman, not quite so evenly balanced, teems with quality; 4, King, of the cinny persuasion, we liked much, sort to breed quality, very quick mover, well finished; vhc, Pearson, not quite so nice at neck, neat head, fine feather, stylish; hc, Pearson, not quite enough taper behind, rare feather; c, Atkinson, very neat. BUFF (11): 1, Ireland, topping little hen, well drawn out, moves well, feather of excellent stamp, very sweet; 2, Auton, racy and stylish, bloomy feather, pretty head, good back, a trifle too much neck, else sweet; 3, Gregory, varieg., rare sort of hen, good length and pose, rattling fine feather; 4, Goldsmith, neat and well drawn bird; vhc, Bamber, nice topped hen, good feather, just a little short of taper; hc, Cooper, silky feather, not quite enough behind the leg; c, Gregory, fails just a trifle in wing carriage, else neat.

Open Novice Borders.

Judge, Mr. H. Norman.

The novices managed to stage thirty-six birds in their two classes, not a bad beginning. The buffs were better than the yellows, the first three or four running each other closely for honours. Taking them all round the birds were of nice type, but require just that little final touch by way of staging to show them at their best. Novices, don't despair, the knack of doing it will come in time. Although southern fanciers are gradually taking to the Border, their birds at present fail to hold their own with those of exhibitors from the north, even gallant little Wales failed to do quite so well in the clean and marks as in former years.

THE LIMIT CLASSES.

Judges, Messrs. Gardner and Barnes.

The Limit classes contained some nice and very cheap Norwich Plainheads, particularly in the hens, as the "claimed" tickets denoted. Crests and Crest-breds were a good lot, and in Yorkshires there were many very cheap birds from well-known stables. In the Norwich Plainhead classes there was considerable evidence that breeders are taking the hint and getting out of the weak-headed birds. There were plenty for sale.

THE MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar.

The Mule and Hybrid classes made a most successful section—well up to the average in point of entries, and well above it as regards the quality of the birds on view. Practically all the present-day "stars" met in competition; we can call to mind only two notable absentees. They were handled in able fashion by Mr. Dewar, whose decisions left very few openings for adverse criticism. The Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid made its first appearance at the Palace, and was a great attraction to the many visitors who had not previously had an opportunity of seeing it. (By-the-bye, an excellent coloured plate of this rarity appears in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.) We overheard a number of enquiries being made after the said-to-be "Chaffinch-Bullfinch" Hybrid, and we think a good number of fanciers would have been delighted to have had the chance of looking it over; but it did not put in an appearance. One very regrettable incident occurred: the lodging of a protest against the 2nd prize wing-marked Linnet Mule. This bird had some dark feathers among the small (inner) flights of the right wing, making it "unevenly-marked." It was alleged that similar feathers were missing from the left wing, which would have made it evenly-mkd. (two-pointed), and not eligible for the class it was exhibited in. We understand that on examination the judge upheld the protest. The explanation of the exhibitor (Mr. G. Lawrence) is, we are told, that the missing feathers were knocked out on the return journey of the bird from the recent Plumstead and Woolwich Show, and that he thought under the circumstances he was entitled to enter the bird in the class for unevenly-marked Mules. Several birds were allotted "wrong class" tickets.

through errors (curious ones, in some instances) on the part of their owners, but we did not notice a single case of Canaries masquerading as Mules.

CLEAR, ETC. (7): 1, five sps, vhc, Martin and Archer, leader the noted clear jonque Linnet, "Perfection," one of the best ever seen, a charming example of the art of the Hybrid-breeder, put down in lovely condition, takes diploma for best in section, well deserves it; 2, Jamieson, jun., real bonny clear buff Goldie, we take to be the Glasgow winner, splendid size and shape, in quality of feather like a boxwood model, good col., excellent blaze; 3, Shellam, another fine exhibit, clear Greenie, in better form than we have seen him for some time rare good one for col., nice size, well built; 4, hc, Lamb, six-pointed buff Goldie, beautiful specimen, well balanced and clearly mkd., grand col. and quality, staged in grand form; wrong class, Scribbens, fine big jonque Goldie, almost 6-pointed, hut has mark at root of tail, and should have gone into the next class. UNEVENLY MKD. GOLDIE, ETC. (16): 1, Mrs. Bond, the well-known lightly variegated jonque, marvel for col., very large, deep blaze, coat shines like silk, grand bird for size and shape; 2, Collins, almost 6-pointed buff, excellent size, very shapely and stylish, exquisite quality of plumage, good face, nice col., all over; 3, Pearce, another very fine jonque variegated, the noted "Prince Charlie," must have run winner closely, larger and better built, loses only in fierceness of col., nice condition; 4, Bruce, rattling big and good lightly-mkd. buff, bold and stylsh, splendid depth of col.,wax-like in condition, close up; vhc, Miss Joseph, beautiful coloured variegated jonque, charming condition and quality; vhc, Lawrance, tkd. on head, grand bird all over, bit short of bloom; hc, Lamb; c, Gilbert; wrong class, Hingley, dark buff, with spot of white under the throat, and light feathers at tail, we do not see how it could compete in the class for darks. DITTO, LINNET OR GREENFINCH (6): 1, Martin and Archer, the well-known neck-tkd. Greenie, lovely bird for size, particularly good head and chest, grand shape, quality A1, staged in great style, wins well; 2, Lawrance, Linnet, mkd. inner flights of right wing, real good one for size and shape, very tight in feather, bonny bird, we heard was protested against, the allegation being that dark feathers were missing from the inner flights of the left wing; 3, Collins, very smart, lightly-mkd. Greenie, good, bold shape, and excellent col. and quality, well staged; 4, Lamb, another real nice lightly variegated bird, beauty for condition and quality; vhc, Jamieson, jun.; hc, Cockburn. DARK YELL. GOLDIE (9): 1, 4, Shellam, two splendid examples, leader a marvellous bird for richness of colour, absolutely red-hot, all there for size and shape, grand head, splendid markings, carries wings smartly, very taking bird, 4th loses a little at all points, but is a very fine bird nevertheless; 2, Martin and Archer, even better in size and build than the winner, but behind in col. and polish, condition all that one could wish, should take beating after another moult; 3, Gilchrist, we liked even better than 2nd, except for a tendency to roughness in feather at the neck, wonderful col. and polish, nearly equal to winner in these points, real good one for size, bonny shape; vhc, Lawrance, grand build and style, down a bit in col.; hc, Rowe and Richards; c, Cadman Bros. DITTO, BUFF (10): 1, F. and T. Bowler, very massive and thick set, splendid silky feather, dense, rich coloured expansive blaze, well mkd. all over, fine bird, wins nicely; 2, Martin and Archer, grand big Mule, good headpiece and blaze, rich and sound in col (though beaten here by leader), well polished and neat; 3, Lawrance, shade paler in col., stoutly built and very shapely, fine expansive blaze, should give winner a tight race after another moult; 4, Rees, good at all points, losing just a trifle in size, nice skull and blaze, excellent markings; vhc, Miss Bousfield, good bird, beautiful condition; hc, McVittie, nice bold bird, very close up; c, Edwards; wrong class, Collins, presumably thrown out as being a jonque and not a buff. DARK GREENFINCH (13): 1, McQuiston, real beauty, grand size, lovely wide head and chest, rich solid col., best of wings, polished like plate glass, steady, fine carriage; 2, Somerfield, the noted warrior, magnificent bird, but just beaten to-day, not so thick-set and cobby as leader, very shapely and stylish, however, and wonderfully deep and sound in col.; 3, Lawrance, beautiful cinnamon-coloured example, very fine size and shape, lovely warm tone of col., soft, silky, and neat in plumage; 4, Davies, very smart youngster, hot colour, grand wings and head, good deep chest, full of quality; vhc, Marlin, very nice stamp of bird; hc, Coffey, another old warrior, but not in his old time form; c, Nason; absent, Brunskill. DITTO, LINNET (13): 1, 4, Pope, leader a bird we have always admired, though it has not always come out on top, rare good Norwich type, thick-set and well across perch, splendid head and chest, very neat and silky in plumage, if a trifle steadier and a bit hotter in col. would be a "stormer," 4th another beautiful Mule at all points; 2, McQuiston, very close up, lovely shape and style, exceptionally sound and rich in col., carries a great polish, charming bird; 3, Martin and Archer, very sultry customer in col., grand sheen on the feather, good, big, shapely bird, well deserves its place; vhc, Bell, fine size and style, exceptionally sound in col. and well mkd.; hc, Shellam, one of the finest in class for shape, size, and style, but if the L.C.B.A. and Scottish National winner, it seems to have gone off a little in col. and condition; c, Collier. DARK SISKIN, REDPOLL, OR TWITE (6): A splendid class: 1, Miss Bousfield, magnificent jonque Siskin, rich, sound, level col., big and thick-set, very nicely mkd., in lovely condition; 2, Buckingham, the noted Redpoll, real bonny little fellow, nice bold head and chest, fine deep col., excellent markings, stylish carriage, well worthy of the place; 3, Martin and Archer another really grand jonque Siskin, beats the winner in distinctness of markings, but loses in richness of col., fine shape and jaunty style; 4, Mac Dougall, very good Twite, big one, grand head and chest, nice wings, well mkd. all over, sound and rich in col.; vhc, Lawrance; vhc, Allan; vhc, Andrews, a trio of exceptionally good Mules, the latter being a huge example of the Mealy Redpoll cross, but flat in col.; hc, Collins; c, Master Johnston. A.O.V. CAN. HYB. (8): 1, vhc, Miss Bond, leader, Canary-Bullie, and a beauty, too, magnificent col., very dense and distinct in markings, especially on the head, tight as wax in feather, and wonderfully polished all over, splendid size and shape, the vhc a nice variegated Siskin Mule; 2, Shellam, the noted winner, presses very hard, but we think is beginning to show signs of the season's strenuous work, again a bird of magnificent size, shape, style, and quality, red-hot col., hardly so dense in markings as leader or so "bloomy"; 3, Mrs. Askham, another splendid Can.-Bullie, exquisite quality and tightness of plumage, very large and well built, hardly so well polished as leaders; 4, Walsh, loses in size, but a real gem for col., markings, and condition, shines like satin; hc, c, Lawrance, latter equal to any for size, shape, and markings, down in col. and condition. A.V. BULLIE (15): 1, Dr. Wilson, charming Goldie-Bullie, exquisite condition, not a feather out of place, while his col. is exceptionally rich and markings A1, but in size he is right on the small side; 2, Dunn, very good Redpoll-Bullie, indeed, splendid size, nice bold head and chest, very fine col. and markings, excellent condition, we were inclined to sympathise with him over missing the first prize; 3, vhc, Lamb, very shapely Linnet-Bullie, real good size and shape, bold head and chest, magnificent quality, needs more col.; 4, Inman, big, bold Goldie-Bullie, grand col. and markings, very steady and stylish, lacks the fascinating condition of the winner, otherwise runs him a hot race; hc, Martin and Archer, also a fine Goldie-Bullie, very close up indeed; c, Sneddon; absent, Edwards. BETWEEN TWO BRITBIRDS (18): 1, Martin and Archer, the sensational Greenfinch-Chaffinch, looking in splendid trim, again one of the chief attractions of the section, a fine hybrid, without a doubt; 2, Lamb, very pretty Goldie-Redpoll, in grand trim, excellent colour, particularly good in blaze; 3, hc, Ramsden, exceptionally nice Redpoll-Greenfinch, very sound, rich col., would be bad to beat for quality, while its size and shape are A1; 4, McQuiston, handsome Goldie-Siskin, very close up, splendid shape, col., and markings, well staged; vhc, Jamieson, jun., the noted Goldie-Greenie, lovely specimen, very large, rich blaze, beautiful condition; vhc, Gilbert, real good Bramble-Chaffinch, nice size, steady, finely mkd., shows the cross well; hc, McLean; c, Rowe and Richards; wrong class, McMillan, very nice Greenie-Bullie, hard luck. LIMIT, 30s. (38): 1, Bell, pretty Goldie-Bullie, quickly claimed; 2, Lawrance; 3, 4, Nelson; ex. 4, Bruce; 5, Jamieson; vhc, Sneddon, Gunnell; Wagstaff; hc, Nason, Howie; c, Fysh, Horne. Some very cheap birds in this class, and "claimed" tickets were soon up on the majority of the cages.

THE BRITISH BIRD SECTION.

The British Section did not share in the slight depreciation of numbers as compared with last year. On the contrary, there was a slight increase—425 in 24 classes as against last year's 414 in 23 classes. Neither was quality absent, for, as usual at the Palace, nearly every bird was fit to win in ordinary competition. The placing of such an array of champions is no light task, and the judges (Messrs. Fulljames, Swaysland, and Weston) are to be congratulated upon the reception given to their awards. Little differences of opinion there were, of course; these are unavoidable at any show, but there was a marked absence of adverse criticism. The diploma for best bird fell to the winning Hawfinch. Best lady's bird, Mrs. Lawrence's Magpie; silver cup, best bird owned by L. and P.O.S. member, Messrs. Martin and Archer's Albino Yellowhammer; best fed bird on Ramsden's Pepper, the 2nd prize Bullie (Martin and Archer); best softbill, Mr. P. Victor Williams' Chough.

Mr. G. E. Weston's Classes.

The classes allotted to Mr. Weston secured a fine entry, a little up in numbers on last year's figures, and most of the well-known "cracks" met to fight their last battle of the season. The quality of the birds can rightly be described as very high indeed. It is some time since we saw a better lot of Goldfinches, the leaders being real good specimens, with little dividing them in point of merit, while the judge said that he considered the Linnet class one of the strongest he had adjudicated upon for a number of years, quite a dozen of the leading birds being very little removed from "champions." The cock Bullfinches, too, were a magnificent collection. The Chaffinch class had its disappointing features, a number of good birds being faulty in neck feather, while several were very much down in condition (owing to the severity of the weather, no doubt) at the time of judging, one of the birds which had "soft" written on its cage, being a grand specimen, owned by Mr. Marley, a bird which has done a lot of winning. The foreign Goldies and Bullies mustered fairly strongly, but newcomers of real "class" were conspicuous only by their absence. The third prize Goldie (Mr. Howie's) is a rare old warrior. It was 2nd here last year, and has now 30 firsts to its credit including four this season.

FOREIGN GOLDIE OR BULLFINCH (21) an excellent class: 1, J. Henderson, Goldie, large, expansive blaze, clean both in cut and colour, rich in crimson, deep, warm tanning, finished off with a grand polish, big, well-marked, shapely bird, very steady; 2, Arrighi, fine size, not the biggest in class, but best condition, not a feather out of place, and excels in colour, breast very hot and even, lovely cap and wings, stylish and staged in great style; 3, Howie, another splendid Goldie, runs winner very closely, losing only a trifle in bloom, big, dense-coloured blaze, best of buttons and bars, good body col., bold in build and very shapely, well put down; 4, Prior, exceptionally big and fine hen Bullie, very thick-set, noble head and chest, the right tone of colour, steady as a top, soon claimed at catalogue price, 20s.; vhc, Minnitt, Goldie, magnificent, large, well-cut blaze, fine colour, unfortunately is unsteady and inclined to "twirl"; hc, Cadman Bros.; c, Baseley; absent, 2175, 2177 and 2192. BRITISH BULLFINCH, CK. (39): 1, Woods, house-moulted, magnificent type, very thick-set, shapely body, stands well across the perch, rare bold head and neck, lovely cap for expanse and cut, hot sound breast colour, good back and bars, in faultless condition, noted winner, we believe, scores well here; 2, Martin and Archer, another noted winner (late McQuiston, we think), and a good bird at all points, loses only a trifle in cobbiness of shape and boldness of cap, splendid rich back and breast, exceptionally tight and polished in plumage; 3, Wagg, field-moulted, similar type to winner, very chubby and bold, grand fiery breast, A1 cap, back and wings, in fine condition and steady as a rock; 4, Dale, also field-moulted, excels in quality and bloom, equal to 3rd in colour, hardly so thick-set, but a bird of good type; ex4, Gilbert, another beauty, ideal cap, bonny shape and style, in good condition, rare good colour all over; 5, Williams, shade paler colour, all there in size and build, very fine clean-cut cap, in good bloom; vhc, Harris, very typical, the right tone of colour, fine condition; vhc, Holborow, beauty for build and markings, not quite the depth of colour of leaders; vhc, Dunsmuir, exquisite quality of feather, full of colour, nice size and shape; vhc, c, Andrews, two clinking good birds; hc, Mays, Haynes, Inman and Caunt; c, Howe and Baseley; 1603, 1609, 1615 abs.; some field-moulted birds were very good, but wild, notably 1606, 1608 and 1623. DITTO, HEN (13): 1, Dunsmuir, splendid chest and head, thick-set and cobby, good tone of colour, carrying a charming sheen on the feather; 2, Baid, very bonny, well built hen, likewise of good colour and quality, soon claimed at 25s., only beaten in cap; 3, Macpherson, fine shape, sound, rich colour, steady, good carriage; 4, D. G. Jones, sweet all-round hen, good head and chest, in excellent condition; vhc, Loader; hc, E. Jones; c, Mrs. Frostick. GOLDFINCH (39) magnificent class for quality, containing two or three sets of winners: 1, Hurst, well-known winner, adds another first to his long list, but is closely pressed by both 2nd and 3rd, big, shapely, lovely coloured Finch, with an unusually big blaze top and bottom, and nicely cut, carries a beautiful polish, nice buttons; 2, Burr, very cobby and stylish, large, wide blaze, dense and clean in colour, wonderful condition, best of buttons and markings, in rare form; 3, Lavery, we liked immensely, very correct bird at all points, huge, square-cut blaze, clean and rich in crimson, beautifully marked and polished all over, well-contrasted colours, one or two expressed a fancy for this bird to win, we presume is the Paisley winner; 4, vhc, Yates, 4 a trifle smaller, bonny bird for colour and condition, expansive blaze, well cut, best of buttons, etc.; ex4, c (2), Richards, also excels in colour and condition, put down in good order, bonny shape, fine blaze, but not quite so much of it; 5, Prior, good square-cut face, of excellent size, nice type and markings, little paler in tanning; vhc, Polkinghorne, beautiful bird at all points, rare good colour, very nice blaze; vhc, Bruce, another Finch, excelling in condition, good at all show points, just loses in expanse of blaze; vhc, Buckingham, the same remarks apply here; hc, Harris, bonny bird for tightness of feather and bloom; hc, Bowler, Miss Joseph, and Pitchford and Stocker, a trio of birds fit to win at any ordinary show; c, Miss Dooly and Gilbert. No. 1672, very good, short of polish; 1665 fine bird, but not in show form. LINNET (35) another stinging class for quality: 1, Burr, excels in colour, real nut-brown, and solid all through, full of work all over, exceptionally good breast markings, big, bold, Norwich type of bird, feathered like wax and beautifully polished, splendid wings, only fault its head a shade small for its large body; 2, vhc, Wilson and Godfrey, well-known North-country face, similar type to leader, hardly so bold in body, though better in head, distinct whites, mass of pencilling all over, and the same lovely tone of colour as the winner, very little to choose between them, a tight race; 3, Heal, different tone of colour, shade too dark for our liking, but a magnificent bird, big, bold, upstanding, very wide chest, nice wings, really splendidly marked all over, in fine condition, the Scottish National winner; 4, hc, Marley, the cobby type again, and the dark tone of brown, lovely head and chest, exceptionally steady and stylish, carries a wonderful amount of work, nice condition; ex. 4, McQuiston, longer, more upstanding type of Linnet, yet well built, good head and chest, fine, sound colour, profusion of distinct pencilling, good whites, some liked for higher honours; 5, Gunnell, grand stamp of bird, very large, cone-shaped body, fine head, well mkd., little rough in neck feather; vhc, c, Prior, nice shape, fine sound colour, well pencilled, grand bold head; vhc, Ford, beauty for pencilled, grand bold head; vhc, Ford, beauty for condition and markings; vhc, Walsh, well built, stylish, nicely pencilled, in grand order; hc, Harris, Minnitt, and Hurst; c, Pringle; No. 1711 had hurt its foot. CHAFFINCH (25): 1, 4, Hurst, leader great size, splendid bold head and chest, very rich and forward in colour, nice blue cap, grand whites and wing markings, polished like a piece of plate-glass, has a back claw missing, unfortunately, which nearly lost him first place, 4th bonny bird at all points; 2, Nicholson and Son, not quite so deep in colour, but rich and well contrasted, beautifully marked, in simply lovely plumage, extremely steady and stylish, big and shapely, close up, we did not admire the colour of his cage; 3, Marley, gem for colour and markings, splendid head and wings, grand sheen on the plumage, excellent carriage, good bird, trifle smaller; ex 4, Wilson and Godfrey, excels in colour and polish, very fine shape and style, grandly mkd., bold, steady, well shown, just loses on head; 5, Walsh, shade smaller, excellent at all other points, beautiful colour and condition; vhc, Lawrance, Jeffreys, two good, stylish specimens; vhc, Gilbert, fine bold bird, trifle damaged over beak, or would have been higher up; hc, Young, Raine, Pringle; c, Poole; No. 1735, good, but very ill-behaved in the cage; 1726, short tail feathers; 1733, good, but out of condition; 1714, 15, 16, 21, and 32 all "gone" in neck feathers.

Mr. H. J. Fulljames' Classes.

Mr. Fulljames's insectivorous classes brought out some interesting exhibits, notably the Grasshopper Warbler, Wryneck, and Black Redstart. A Pied Meadow Pipit and a clear yellow Yellow Bunting both exceedingly rare and beautiful exhibits, attracted a lot of attention in the Albino class. In the Nightingale class was found a real champion Blackcap and a Nightingale that broke out into song in spite of the severe weather. The Wagtail class was not well represented, the Blue-headed and the commonest of all—the Pied—being absent. This class would prove a most interesting one to many fanciers, and to visitors in general, and we hope, in spite of the poor support on this occasion, that it will find a place in next year's schedule, and be better supported. About the only decision which caused comment was in the Blackbird class, where some preferred the second to the one placed first by the judge. Lesser Redpolls were a grand array, twenty-five as against the thirty of last year, when Lessers and Mealies were shown together, and by far the majority were of surpassing excellence. Siskins, again, were a beautiful lot, twenty-seven of the best birds in England facing the judge, and scarcely a pin to choose between the leaders. Greenfinches mustered eighteen, as against last year's twenty-four, but the placing of the leaders was a stiff proposition. Yellowhammers were a grand lot of twenty charming specimens, some noted winners among them. It was an achievement for one exhibitor, Mr. Martin, to capture two of the prizes in this class.

LESSER REDPOLL (25): 1, Morton and Davidson, delightful little 'Poll, excels particularly in flank markings, which are as though laid on with a brush, beautifully laced on back, and of fine gloss of plumage, a good winner in a good class; 2, Miss Bousfield, another beautiful bird, very little indeed behind winner, exceptionally good in evenness of breast colour, flank lacings nearly as good as those of winner; 3, Marley, a real champion, nothing could be better, but tail feathers to-day a bit awry, or would have doubtless been at 1; 4, Minnitt, a beauty, showing very pretty tinge of col. in the forehead, wing carriage perfect, lovely back lacing, very sprightly; 5, hc, Prior, another one hard to beat, wonderfully nice bib, lovely finish of plumage, clings to bars of cage when examined; vhc, Bruce, nice bird indeed, only kept out of the money by meeting extra good birds; vhc, Morton and Davidson, same ownership as the winner, and an equally good bird, unfortunately a bit soft; hc, Pringle; c, Hexter, Nicholson and Son. SISKIN (27): a grand array, difficult indeed to place; 1, Burr, perfection, just fed enough to enhance colour without spoiling it, wonderful flank lacing, faultless gloss of plumage; 2, Grahame, shade smaller than winner, but a really good one, claimed at two guineas, and cheap, had been washing when we were making notes; 3, Andrews, charming specimen, beautifully defined eye streak, lovely texture of plumage, back lacings exceptionally good, well deserving its place; 4, Leach and Leckie, another stormer, lacking in nothing except, perhaps, in definition of bib, a real beauty; vhc, Minnitt, Scottish National Winner, here standing as testimony to the outstanding merit of those above him; a lovely bird in nat. col., and of very high quality all round; vhc, Bell, hot-fed bird of great excellence, bib extra good, inclined a little to sit on perch, but exceptionally good when he pulls himself together; hc, Miss Bousfield, Baid; c, Walsh, Hurst. GREENFINCH (18): 1, Stuart and Dalling, an exceptionally good one in a class of extra good ones, wonderfully even in col., and excelling in gloss of plumage, nothing could be better; 2, Harris, scarcely anything behind winner, silky as a waxwing in plumage, and beautifully even in colour, shows himself well; 3, McVay, fine big bird, another one very close up, full of quality all over, rich colour, splendid texture of feather and good enough to win anywhere; 4, Marley, another stormer, all said of the others applies equally to this one, the placing of the four must have proved a teaser to the judge; vhc, Aitken; Henderson, magnificent Greenies, like the others, beyond criticism; hc, Ford; c, Andrews. YELLOWHAMMER (20): 1, 4, Martin, two very exceptional birds, leader excelling to a degree in beauty of head and cheek markings, crown nearly clear, beautiful in back markings, finely laced underneath and wonderfully steady; 4th, another good one, beautifully laced, perfect texture of plumage, not so defined in cheek markings as other; 2, Hawkes, fine big bird, extra good in back markings and the heavy black V and horseshoe markings of the crown and cheeks contrasting beautifully with the yellow, crown nearly clear, claimed at catalogue price; 3, Stuart and Dalling, another beauty, crown as nearly as possible clear, lovely head and face markings, very fine plumage and beautifully marked, a good one all round; vhc, Lane; vhc, Edwards, both nice 'Hammers, very little behind those in the money, good enough to win almost anywhere; hc, Inman, Master Tripe; c, Gilbert. BLACKBIRD (7): 1, 2, Marley, a grand couple, and quite the toss of a coin which wins, 1st a shade the smaller, but 2nd slightly redder bill and eye cere, and a trifle larger we thought, both jet black, and wonderfully lustrous plumage, 2nd looks like L.C.B.A. winner; 3, Borthwick, very close up, hardly so good carriage, rich bill and crocus eye cere, good size, worth its place; 4, Ford, nice specimen, a trifle on small side, good sound colour, and in high condition; absent (2), 1899 Mays, 1903 Adams. STARLING (9): A very good class, the purple-breasted birds being in the majority: 1, 2, c, Wellings, large, heavily spotted, lustrous bird, stands well, very lustrous plumage, the spots large and distinct. 2nd similar in type to 1st, but not such a size or so well spotted, stands well up on perch and carries plenty of the beautiful metallic sheen, c, one of the purple variety, fails only in spots, in excellent condition; 3, Robinson, lustrous, purple, full of spots, a bit smaller, very good bird; 4, Collins, stylish and in capital feather, shows well; vhc, Lean and Son, nice purple-breasted Starling, very lustrous plumage; hc, Lewcock, one of the large spotted variety, almost as large as 1st, but hardly as stylish. PIED ALBINO, ETC. (11): 1, vhc, Martin and Archer, 1st Yellow Bunting, pink eye, a very attractive exhibit, in lovely order, undoubtedly a Yellow Bunting as stated, well shown; vhc, pied Linnet, almost white, slightly mottled with brown on back flights and sides, in grand order; 2, Mays, Meadow Pipit, we made this to be (entered as a Tree Pipit), white except flights and tail, and slightly ticked on crown of head, the general actions and the colour of the flights and tail are, without a doubt, a Meadow Pipit's; 3, P. Walsh, well-known Silver Starling, often described, and looking as well as ever, very pretty; 4, Rowe-Richards, cinnamon Starling; hc, Smith, sweet cinnamon Linnet, very interesting, shows the spotting on ends of feathers, good sized bird; c, Tansley, pied Blackbird, the white on head and neck giving it a pretty appearance. NIGHTINGALE AND BLACKCAP (6): An unusual occurrence to find the Blackcap in the majority, in this instance 4 to 2: 1, Evans, nice 'Gale, good size and shape, fine rich col., perfect in condition, and good quality of feather, shows well; 2, Puck, real topping Blackcap, one of the best we have seen for a long while, fine silky plumage, as tight as way, good cap, and beautiful tint of colour, must have pressed hard; 3, Jeffery, 'Gale, smaller than leader, not quite such a good col., very tame, nicely shown; 4, Fostick, another Blackcap, smaller than 2nd, but perfect in feather, and in high condition; vhc, Miss Watt, Blackcap, in nice order; hc, Tout, again a Blackcap, in fine fettle. WAGTAILS (6): A small class and only two species represented: 1, Arnott, lovely Grey, fine size and shape, tight as wax, has a very clear white throat and good yell. breast; 2, J. M. Walsh, natural coloured Yellow, nice clear col. throughout, good broad eye marks, very tame, in perfect condition; 3, vhc, Miss Smyth, both Grey Wagtails, very nice birds, but not quite the size of the winner, probably last year's birds; 4, Sorbie, hot-fed Yellow, a very good specimen, but rather overdone in feeding, good head, steady as could be. SMALL INSECTS (12): A capital variety here, but unfortunately there were three absentees (Grasshopper Warbler, Whinchat, and Whitethroat); a Crosshill rubbed shoulders with Black Redstarts, Wheatears, and Willow Warbler: 1, Woodhouse, Wryneck, very fine specimen, rich breast col., fine, distinct lacing, the various tints of grey and brown on back being well defined, good all round; 2, 3, Mays, 2nd Grasshopper, in faultless condition, a sweet little bird, in faultless feather and condition, was repeatedly uttering its call note, 3rd Wheatear, undoubtedly a fine specimen, but rather lucky, we thought, to beat Black-Redstart, vhc, one of the large species, good black cheek marks, and clean white eye marks, nice and tight in feather; 4, Maggs, Willow Warbler, in perfect feather, and although many thousands of miles from its winter resort, when in a state of nature, it seemed to stand the cold well; vhc, Thwaites, real good Black Redstart, deep black breast, and a rare size, col. of cage rather kills it; hc, Buckingham, Crossbill, nice cage-moulted specimen, showing yellow plumage; c, J. M. Walsh, Black Redstart, nice bird, but not quite so dark as vhc, in good feather.

Mr. W. Swaysland's Classes.

The section adjudicated upon by Mr. Swaysland contained several classes with exhibits of exceptional interest. The Hawfinch class was a strong one, with 16 entries, and the winner, shown by Mr. W. Burr, was a very fine specimen, the like of which is seldom seen; it stood well away from the remainder of the exhibits, although these on the whole were of excellent merit, and was awarded the diploma for best British bird. The Bunting class contained representatives of all the species, except the yellow, which had a separate class, and the Cirl. The Thrushes were a nice lot, and the Magpie class brought out nine competitors, being headed by a grand Chough, shown by Mr. P. Williams, which stood well away and secured the special for best softbill. Several good Magpies were in competition. The hen hardbill class brought out 15 exhibits, and Mr. Francis scored well here with a topping Hawfinch. Skylarks turned up to the tune of 15, and curiously enough were with one exception all shown in round topped cages, finished off with brass bands. The small insectivorous class brought out a well-mixed collection, headed by Mr. Frostick's Dartford Warbler, the class also containing Bearded Tits, Nuthatch, Shorelark, Tree Creeper, etc. In the large insectivorous class came the new addition to the bench in the shape of an adult Dipper, exhibited by Miss Fishburn. This is the first time this bird has made its appearance at the Palace, or, we think, in London, and needless to say it attracted much attention. Its food seemed to consist of live gentles only. Miss Bousfield also staged a wonderful specimen of the Waxwing, her bird standing clean away from two others in the class. Mr. Swaysland's awards appeared, with few exceptions, to give general satisfaction.

MEALY REDPOLL OR TWITE (21): 1, Morton and Davidson, real grand Twite, nice size, fine long bird, stands well out for richness of col., very clear in whites, dense pencillings well down the flanks, full of bloom; 2, Leach and Leckie, good Mealy Redpoll, not the largest, but has a good head and chest, well pencilled on flanks, good bib, in splendid order; 3, Harris, another good Twite, paler in colour than 1st, and not quite so good in size, shows flights nicely, in really fine fettle; 4, Glaister, Mealy Redpoll, good shape, carries plenty of pencilling, good wing bars, fine bold carriage, well finished; vhc (2), Webster, McMillan, former nice Twite, on small side, good colour and markings, latter nice sized Mealy Redpoll; hc (2), Calver and Sons, Pickles, both Twites, much paler in colour and rather small, good shape; c, Waters, very nice Mealy again, fine bib and in good feather; abs., 1178, Gilbert. BRAMBLEFINCH (16): very nice class; 1, Sykes, bonny Bramble lovely spangled head and mantle, will probably darken a little yet, good bold carriage, rich breast, the colour extending well down, and very bright, nice shoulders and wing bars, beautifully finished; 2, Grahame, rare size, but a wee shade paler on breast, darker head, but shows light ring round eyes, stands well, very steady, claimed at catalogue price; 3, Gentleman smaller, but very compact, rich breast, good spangling, very stylish in carriage and in perfect condition; 4, Brotherhood, hot col. breast and a good dark head and back, very even spangling and well finished, fine flights, excellent thigh pencillings, carries a lot of bloom; vhc, Coffey, well-known winner out of the running to-day, paler in colour and looks a bit over done; vhc, McQuiston, very shapely, rich in col., in fine order; hc, Pickles, in fine feather, well shown; c, Lawrance, good size and colour, very steady. HAWFINCH (16): a real grand class, containing some very forward specimens, some with full blue bills and rare head col., many could win at most shows; 1, Burr, monster, rich head and cheeks, lovely tint on breast, full coloured bill, rare bib, in grand condition, good clear wing bars, about the largest in this grand class and one of the best on the bench this season; 2, Williams, another grand specimen, hardly as large as the winner, good collar and back, claimed at £5 5/-; 3, Poole, medium size, good bib, very compact, in capital feather, bold chest; 4, Harris, another monster with a rare head and large bib, capital flights, good broad chest, nice clear collar, good shape; vhc, Ellwood, good chest, nice bib, duller flights, full of condition; vhc, Gunnell, very tame, a wee shade pale in colour, nice one; hc, J. M. Walsh, fine head, good size and shape, grand quality of feather; c, Austin. BUNTINGS (except Yellow) (16): A good variety class, containing Snow, Corn, Reed, Lapland and Meadow Buntings; a very interesting collection; 1, Colville and Son, capital Reed Bunting, jet black head and throat rich back and flights, beautifully marked, very clear white collar, a long way ahead of any other of its species in class, in faultless condition; 2, Nicholson and Son, beautifully coloured Corn Bunting, rare size, splendid throat markings and dense pencilling on breast, steady as a rock, in tip-top condition; 3, Henderson, very fine Snow, grand wings and almost white on breast and underparts, nice size, shows himself beautifully; 4, c, Francis, well known Lapland Bunting, good russet collar, an old winner, often described; latter, big Snow Bunting, perfect feather well shown; vhc, Raine, Snow Bunting plenty of white, not quite so clear; vhc, Gilbert, Corn Bunting, in very nice order, but fails a trifle in colour to 2nd; hc, Mrs. J. Frostick, nice Reed Bunting, not quite so forward as 1st, well staged. SONG THRUSH (8): 1, Johnson, very tame, richly coloured bird, beautifully spotted on breast and throat, the spots being very clear and dense, nice shapely specimen, exceedingly tame; 2, 4, Mrs. D. Longden, both good birds, former very shapely, medium sized, very distinct spots, good head; 4th, very densely spotted, scarcely so distinct, but better colour than 3rd, and a shade larger, stands well on perch; 3, Bruce, large bird, but paler in colour, nicely spotted, the spots running well down thighs, good type, in lovely feather; vhc, Hemmings and Brereton, very shapely, nice colour, plentiful supply of spots, but not distinct enough for a champion; hc, Harper, smaller, very steady, in perfect feather; c, Dean, again a trifle on small side, but very stylish; No. 1907, Wood, a Missel, w.c. MAGPIE, JACKDAW, ETC. (9): The Jackdaw was not represented here; 1, Victor Williams, clinking fine Chough, looks like an old friend, lately exhibited by Mr. Maxwell, quite at home, shown to perfection; if it is our old friend he looks better than ever in spite of his years and the many battles he has so successfully fought; 2, Bowler, fine Jay, rich coloured, clear blue wings and snow white rump, perfect head and throat, capital plumage; 3, Lawrence, grand Magpie, well polished head, jet black, clean cut on breast, clear whites, shows an abundance of greenish metallic sheen on its long tail, very tame; 4, c, Mulcahy, 4th, another good Chough in nice order, but not the size of winner, paler in legs and bill; latter nice Magpie, in good feather; vhc, sp., Lund, Magpie, not quite the size of 3rd, but a good one, plenty of polish, as tight as wax; hc, J. M. Walsh, another Chough, nice red legs and beak, but not in the fettle of winner. HENS. HARDBILL (except Bullfinch) (15): A well mixed class, and several good birds left out of tickets; 1, Francis, rare sized Hawfinch, massive head for a lady, fine chest and back colouring, splendid wings, good shape, well finished; 2, Ford, Corn Bunting, in lovely feather, beautiful head marks, well laced thighs, steady as could be; 3, Graham, Siskin good lacing, nice size, fine col. except wing bars, which are a trifle dull; 4, Brownlie, bonnie Bramble, tight as wax, fine col. for a hen, shows herself beautifully; vhc, Leach and Leckie, Yellowhammer, large bodied bird, good markings, rich colour throughout; hc, Miss Smyth, Chaffinch, a stylish little lady in lovely order; c, Cadman Bros., Snow Bunting, good size; 1953, real good Bramble, some thought a better bird than 4th; 1951, Chaffle, a real good one. SKYLARK (10): A rather larger class than usual, and the uniformity of the cages attracted much comment; the pattern, a round topped cage with a bow for the turf being a very desirable show cage for Larks; 1, 3, Allaway, the former a rare broad-chested bird, rich body colour, stands up well, breast markings good, extend well down; 3rd, a lighter built one, and not quite so rich in body colour, very stylish; 2, hc, P. Walsh, former fine bold bird, good markings and col., all that could be desired; 3rd, a lighter built one and not quite so distinctly pencilled, both in grand feather; 4, Lott, medium sized, nicely pencilled, rich coloured back, fine texture of feather, stands up well; vhc, Heather, very taking, well up on legs; c, McVay, good size and shape. A.O.S. RESIDENT INSECTIV., ETC. (not larger than Grey Wagtail) (11): A very interesting collection, containing a common Hedge Sparrow and two of the rare Dartford Warblers, Tree Creeper, Nuthatch, Bearded Tits, and a Shore Lark, unfortunately in its wrong class; 1, hc, Frostick, 1st, bonny little Dartford Warbler, cage moulted, a feat which does its owner great credit, a sprightly little fellow in his pretty plumage of browns and greys, well shown; latter a very pretty Bearded Tit, in excellent feather; 2, Mays, Tree Creeper, looking very cosy in its red baize-lined cage, very clear white throat and underparts, capital markings and colour on back; 3, Buckingham, Bearded Tit, a grand specimen, good head and markings, very warm coloured back, lovely head, much deeper in browns than hc; 4, Collins, Hedge Sparrow, bonny specimen of this familiar bird, seldom seen on the show bench, and probably never before in the money at the Palace; vhc, Evans, Dartford Warbler, very tame, looks like a young bird; c, Wagg, Meadow Pipit in nice order; 1988, good Shorelark, w.c.; abs., 1981, Mays, Gold Crest. A.O.S. LARGE: An interesting collection in this class, it being the first occasion, to our recollection, the Dipper has appeared, and we hope to see other specimens in the future. Three Waxwings were in the class, and gave a good opportunity for comparison, but the best one of the three wanted little finding; 1, Miss Fishburn, cock Dipper in spring plumage, lovely white chest, dark brown underparts, dark slate head, back, flights and tail, the bird was tame, and appeared in perfect health; 2, Miss Bousfield, Waxwing in tip-top order, larger than either of the others, and a long way the best colour, the yellow and red tips to his flights being very bright, rich head and dense black throat, beautiful sleek plumage, and as steady as possible; 3, Wagg, Ring Ousel, not very clear crescent, in perfect feather, young bird we should think; 4, Bissett, Missel Thrush, a monster, capital spotting, good colour, plenty of bloom, very tame, vhc, Frostick, interesting exhibit, a Lesser Spotted Woodpecker, shown in a cork lined cage, seemed quite at home; he, Rowe and Richards, Redwing, good eyemarks, not quite such a rich col. as some; c, sp, Francis, Waxwing, very nice bird.

NOVICE BRITISH BIRD AND HYBRID SECTION.

Although hardly so numerous as last year, the novices made a brave show with British birds and Hybrids. The class for Softbills had to be cancelled, however, which is rather surprising considering the number of specimens of ordinary birds eligible for such a class. Surely there are enough novices keeping Thrushes, Blackbirds, Starlings, Larks, etc., to fill it. There were several birds of high merit among the Goldfinches and Bullfinches, the winner this year proving to be one of the former species owned by Mr. S. M. Davis. The bird is not over large, but has an excellent blaze, and was shown in lovely condition, which told much in its favour. Generally speaking, the staging was fairly good, and this is a point that novices can hardly be expected to excel in. The hybrids were rather better put down than the British birds. The clear class was exceptionally good, several capital specimens failing to get in the money. When one compares these birds with what were seen in the open some ten to fifteen years ago, we can realise the immense stride made in hybrid breeding the last few years. In the A.V. class, between two British a good Goldie-Bullie led, closely followed by a capital Greenie-Bullie, a cross hardly so numerous now as formerly; but of the first cross there were only two this year, compared with some half-dozen last February. Considering the huge number of dark Mules bred, we were somewhat surprised to see only nine entries. Novices must "buck up" if they want these classes to stand.

The Mules and Hybrids.

Judge, Mr. Norman.

NOVICE LIGHT MULES (8): 1, Lewis, buff 4-pointed bird of grand size, lovely shape, very rich in col., shown in grand condition; 2, Dawson, rather pale col. yell., but nice size and shape, just a touch of blaze, mkd. wings and eye, in good condition; 3, c, Thomas, another 4-pointed buff, shade small compared to winner, but in wonderful trim, and well put down; 4, vhc, Widdows, variog. yell., of good size, nice rich col. throughout, in fine fettle; hc, Nelson. A.O.V. DK. (9): 1, Tennant, bold Greenie, grand size, very shapely and capital tone of col., lovely quality feather, wins; 2, Rees, Can.-Bullie, very hot col., falls in size, and hardly so shapely as some, but a well mkd. bird with a good head; 3, Barber, smart Goldie, nice shape, good size, capital col. and quality, nice touch of blaze, well mkd. specimen; 4, Dawson, good non-fed Linnet, big hold bird, in fine condition; vhc, Tidey; he, Ward; c, Carpenter. HYB. (12): 1, Rees, fine Goldie-Bullie leading, shapely, of good size, and grand rich col. blaze carried well down the front; 2, Smith, nice Greenie-Bullie, capital size, shapely bird with a good head and wings, sound col., nicely shown; 3, vhc, Davis, Linnet-Bullie, smart bird, nice rich breast col., shapely, quite a typical specimen; 4, Thomas, big Goldie-Greenie, grand blaze and body col., in fine condition; hc, Edmunds; c, Dawson.

The British Birds.

Judge, Mr. H. Norman.

NOVICE GOLDIE OR BULLIE (22): 1, Davis, smart Goldfinch leading, very shapely, well col., clean cut blaze, very pure and bright, capital wings, nicely tanned, in fine conditaon; 2, Cornish, bold fronted Bullie, good size, capital head, nice full neck and shoulders, grand depth of col.; 3, Hughes, another good Goldie, good size, shapely, very square blaze of good depth of col., perhaps richer than winner, but hardly the quality; 4, Dawson, yet another rich col. Bullie of fine size, but col., nice quality; vhc, Clements; hc, Tennant; c, Cooper. LINNET, ETC. (13): 1, c, Hedley, fine bold Linnet of wonderful size, shapely bird, nice bit of pencilling, good rich col., in A1 condition; 2, Sadler, smart Siskin, capital size and shape, nice tone of col., well laced, good wings, clean cut cap; 3, Lafhury, very fine house moulted Redpoll, grand size and shape, with a wealth of lacing, in fine condition; 4, Dawson, another good Linnet, good size, shapely, a wee shade dark in col., a good exhibit; vhc, hc, Davis. A.O.S. (15): 1, c, vhc, Cooper, big bold Hawfinch, grand depth of col., carried all through nice and even, good bib, wings and bars, in fine condition; 2, Haxton, very smart Greenie, shown in tip-top condition, good col., capital wings; 3, Cambers, bold fronted Chaffie, capital shapely bird of good size, rich cap and breast, fine condition, well shown; 4, Hobden, another Hawfinch of fine size and col., good bib and wings; hc, Enever.

THE FOREIGN BIRDS.

The management of this section was excellent, but handicapped by the usual limitations of the historic glass-house, and these, coupled with the most inclement weather prevailing, caused many of the tropical gems of this section to show signs of discomfort. It is with much regret that we have to record the lowest entry for very many years in this section; the abstention of two or three well-known exhibitors, and the severe weather undoubtedly being responsible for this. The efforts and energy of the L.P.O.S. deserved a better result. There were also less "first appearances" than for some years, though the number of rare species in the hands of aviculturists are almost legion. Even the classes for the so-called "common" species were below par in numbers, but all-round excellence of merit prevailed, and there were many beautiful denizens of tropical lands—both plebeian and aristocrat—to delight the eyes of visitors. The only probable first appearance we noted was Mr. Hawkin's Blue-rumped Parrots (see plate and notes elsewhere in this issue), a Malayan species (Psittacinus incertus), very interesting but not gorgeous. Visitors were principally attracted by the Sunbirds, Sugar Birds, and Tanagers—"Solomon in all his glory" was not arrayed so gorgeously as these! The other features of the show were quite up to recent years; the attendance was good; and uncomfortable weather conditions certainly did not damp the ardour of the adherents of aviculture who attended from far and near. Mr. H. T. T. Camps judged the Parrot classes, and Mr. F. Finn the remaining classes. The Goldies and Bullies were judged by Mr. G. E. Weston, and notes upon them will be found in his section.

MR. A. EZRA'S AMETHYST-RUMPED SUNBIRD.
Diploma for best Foreign bird.

Judge, Mr. H. T. T. Camps.

A.S. PARRAKEETS, BURGERIGARS, ETC.: This class contained eleven competitors, of which Mr. A. Ezra's lovely and rare Lutino Ring-necked Parrakeet was an absentee, that gentleman informing us he was afraid to risk sending it owing to existing weather conditions. Mr. J. Mackenzie was very unfortunate, his entries, a very fine Red-naped Lorikeet and a Ceram Lory, arriving too late for competition. The other entrants, all well-known species, some uncommon, and no less than four Brown's Parrakeets competing—all beautiful—and a King Parrakeet, with almost the whole of the head bright yellow in place of the usual crimson. 1, 3, W. Edmunds, 1st, Brown's Parrakeet, a grand bird, lovely col. and markings, very tight; 3rd, equally good pair of Many-colour Parrakeets; 2, W. Baxby, Pennant's Parrakeet, very rich colour; 4, c, L. W. Hawkins, King and Brown's Parrakeet, in the order given; vhc, G. Fletcher, good pair of Brown's Parrakeets, but a wee bit soft; hc, A. E. Barcham, very richly col. Rosella Parrakeet. A.S. PARROTS, COCKATOOS, ETC. (9): Here we again made the acquaintance of the Rev. G. H. Rayner's veteran Meyer's Parrot, and also his rare Everett's Parrot, both very fit. The rarest birds in the Parrot section were undoubtedly Mr. L. W. Hawkins' Blue-rump Parrot (Psittacinus incertus), an interesting but not a gorgeously apparelled species, about the same size as, or a little less than, the Rosy-faced Lovebird. They were in immature plumage (see plate). 1, 4, Rev. G. H. Raynor, 1st, Meyer's Parrot, in lovely feather; 4, Everett's Parrot, very fit, but not so tight as the former; 2, vhc, L. W. Hawkins, Black-headed Caique, rich colour, good feather, and very steady, and good pair of Blue-rump Parrots in immature plumage, very rare; 3, Mrs. L. Thorpe, Green Amazon, good talker, and lovely feather; hc, J. Ditchfield, and c, J. Montague, Blue-fronted Amazons; a grand Electus and Le Vaillant's Amazon also competed.

Judge, Mr. F. Finn.

CERTAIN NAMED WAXBILLS, FINCHES, ETC. (6): All well known species, and small indeed in number for the "freely imported species" class, but all were in "spick and span" condition. 1, F. Howe, Gold-breasted Waxbills and St. Helena Waxbills, both rich in colour and as tight as wax; 2, Miss M. Bousfield, Diamond Sparrows, an attractive pair, good colour and markings and very tight; 4, Mad. M. A. Feist Madewell, Ribbon Finches, one of the best pairs we have seen; vhc, Miss J. A. E. Smyth, St. Helena Waxbills, a good pair; A. C. Young staged an excellent pair of Ribbon Finches which unfortunately arrived too late for competition. A.S. WAXBILLS, GREENFINCHES, ETC. (5): Here Mr. Howe's well-known Melba Finch was an easy first; it was in exquisite condition, and evidently bears the burden of show life well, for it is a much travelled specimen. The most uncommon exhibit in this class was Mr. Walsh's Scaly-crowned Finch; this, however, was not so tight in condition as when seen at the Horticultural Hall in November last. 1, F. Howe, Melba Finch, a marvel of beauty and condition; 2, Miss M. Bousfield, Red-headed Gouldian Finch, exquisite colour and feather, one of the best we have seen; 3, G. B. Thwaites, Pin-tailed Nonpariels, an excellent pair, very tight, will be deeper in colour after another moult; 4, W. Lyle, Black-headed Gouldian Finches, a good pair of this beautiful species; vhc, J. M. Walsh, Scaly-crowned Finch, a wee bit rough in feather. A.S. GROSBEAKS, TRUE FINCHES, ETC. (6): The rarest exhibit here was Miss Bousfield's Black and Yellow Grosbeak, a hen, and not so bright as the male bird, of Hawfinch-like appearance and form. Mrs. E. Galloway's Brown-winged Blue Grosbeaks were also a very uncommon and interesting exhibit. 1, Miss St. A. Wait, Olive Finch, very rich colour, tight as wax; 2, L. J. Arrighi, Black-headed Siskin, very steady and in good feather; 3, Mrs. E. Galloway, Brown-winged Blue Grosbeak, a lovely specimen, which might perhaps have been placed higher; 4, J. M. Walsh, Green Cardinal, a good bird—colour fed we think; vhc, Miss Bousfield, hen Black and Yellow Grosbeak, rare and interesting, but a wee bit rough; B. Heness, another good Green Cardinal. A.S. TANAGERS (7): Nothing new, but every exhibit a gem, and the rarest bird, Mr. S. M. Townsend's Gold and Green Tanager, was in faultless trim and an easy first; all the other entrants except the Scarlet, though well known, were all uncommon, and a perfect blaze of tropical colouring. 1, S. M. Townsend, Gold and Green Tanager, rare and perfect; 2, 3, J. M. Walsh, Black-throated and Maroon Tanagers, in the order given; 4, J. Frostick, Prêtres' Tanager, good colour and very tight in condition; vhc, T. Erskine, Blue Tanager; hc, Mrs. L. M. Thynne, Maroon Tanager; c, Miss E. N. Dooly, Scarlet Tanager. A.S. SUGAR-BIRDS, SUNBIRDS, ETC. (8): Not a common species among the entrants, but undoubtedly the rarest bird was Mr. S. M. Townsend's Black-legged (palish-blue) Sugar-Bird, looking much brighter and tighter than when seen at the Horticultural Hall, and in the writer's opinion should have been first. Much discussion took place amongst visitors as to the merits and demerits of 1st and vhc, Amethyst-rumped Sun-Birds respectively. We are not in a position to express an opinion, however, as, when our notes were made, Mr. Ezra's bird (first prize winner) was placed alongside the hot-water pipes, as the temperature of the tent was so much below its usual quarters. Still, we have seen this bird previously, and it is really a wonderful house moulted specimen, like a flashing jewel. Mr. Frostick's bird, on the other hand, was evidently recently imported, in the full glory of natural colour, and very tight and silken, but with slight traces of importation condition still, on its all but faultless and shining garment, it was a case of a battle between a bird in full wild colour and an exquisite house moulted specimen, and the judge decided in favour of the latter. An exquisite of the Purple Sun-Bird, again a bird acquired (evidently caught), in adult plumage, and in possession of full natural brilliance, was exhibited by Mr. Frostick, its shining garment radiated with every hue of purple and its combinations, according to the angle at which the light caught it. 1, A. Ezra, Amethyst-rumped Sun-Bird; 2, S. M. Townsend, Black-legged (palish blue) Sugar-Bird, rarest bird in show, faultless; 3, S. M. Townsend, regret we failed to note species; 4, vhc, J. Frostick, Purple Sun-Bird, a grand specimen, a perfect marvel of irridescent plumage; Amethyst-rumped Sun-Bird, a beautiful bird in full natural colour; two beautiful exhibits, a Rufous-throated Sugar-Bird and a Hardwick's Fruitsucker (Mr. A. C. Young), unfortunately arrived too late for competition. A.S. (NOT COMPRISED IN ABOVE) (8): The notabilities of this were Mr. Ezra's lovely Japanese Redbreast, similar to our much-loved Robin, with the same fascinating demeanour, but longer on its legs, and darker in colour than our indigenous Robin; Mr. Walsh's Black-headed Sibias, and Australian White-eyebrowed Wood-Swallow, both the best of their kind we have seen. 1, A. Ezra, Japanese Robin, an exquisite and rare exhibit; 2, 3, J. M. Walsh, grand pair Black-headed Sibias, and White-eyebrowed Wood-Swallow, never seen better; 4, L. M. Wade, Shama, a beauty; vhc, E. Thorne, Troupial; hc, Miss Bousfield, Hangnest; a Black-throated Troupial also competed.

IMITATION

is said to be the sincerest form of flattery, but to steal a man's ideas and brain I call the meanest form of theft. Old readers of "Cage Birds" know that I was first man to put the improved all metal spring net trap on the market in its present form, and am still the only one who has not cut down the quality to reduce price. My net traps are guaranteed entirely self-acting, can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and call bird can be used inside them if required. These are the only net trap used by Mr. Jeffrey, England's largest Nightingale catcher, size 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 by 14 inches, 9d. each, postage 2d. extra on all. Clap nets, Lark nets, Sparrow nets, loose netting, bird lime, and everything else required by catchers always in stock, full list sent on receipt stamp. Kindly note none of my appliances are made by child labour; only thoroughly practical men being employed. I supply every professional catcher of note throughout the country, and have published more testimonials in one week than all my imitators have in a year. See British Bird and Roller Canary columns for further advertisements.

in the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens,, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Barnes."—" 25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Dawson."—" Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—" Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—" 17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, B. Brooks."—" 70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland. Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—" 48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 6. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. WE HAVE THEM, WE BREED THEM,

WE SELL THEM.

It is absolutely ridiculous for those wanting first class specimens thinking they can get them from the men with the small quantities, the three or four winners they have cannot be bought at any price, as they must keep them to sell their surplus on their reputation. We have the largest and most wonderful stock of winners that has ever been in one room; over 40 first prize winners this season, and 20 of them for sale, reasonable. We have shown more winners that we have bred this season than any other six exhibitors put together. For proof see our winnings this season. Winning Carl's Trophy, the G.M.Y.C.C. Trophy outright with birds bred by exhibitor; both Y.C.C. competitions; the Yorkshire challenge trophy, Ramsden 6-guinea cup, £10 Yorkshire Union trophy 5 years in succession, which now becomes our own property with an aggregate of 1,418 points, only 3 birds to count, nearly 200 more points than any exhibitor; another world's record, champion diploma at Crystal Palace, 1911; also we have bred and sold four of the first prize winners at Palace, 1912; four years in succession winning the C.M.Y.C.C. Our strain has won more competitions and trophies than any other; so write direct to the breeders who breed their own winners and can give an honest pedigree and all details how bred. Cocks or hens 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-, 30/- each. We guarantee the best value in England. Inspection invited, all birds sent on approval; deposit: Ogden Bros., Dudley Hill, Bradford.

THE YORKSHIRE BREEDERS'

Society are genuine breeders, who have previously supplied birds to all the leading exhibitors and dealers of Bradford and district. Our object is to deal fairly and honestly direct with other breeders, thereby saving the middlemen's profits, which means better value for money; also information as to how the birds are bred, which is a vital point in pairing to breed winners. Our honest dealings are already widely known, and our reputation stands unrivalled. Don't be misled by exaggerated statements, but apply direct to bona fide and reliable breeders, who can supply breeding sets (cock and 2 hens) from 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, upwards; pairs from 8/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-; hens from 4/-; exhibition birds reasonable. Cages, 3d. extra. Approval, cash or deposit. Address: "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

I am delighted with your Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS. The photos in themselves are well worth threepence. We have also a large collection of information—in the huge advertisements where everything that is wanted can be had; and in interesting articles, correspondence, and general advice. The issue is worthy of being retained in the treasury of the bird lover. The occasion of such an issue is a fitting opportunity to your regular readers to purchase an additional copy of the Birthday Number, and present it to a new reader, one who keeps birds. I do so to awaken an interest in your premier publication on cage bird subjects. I wish you every success in the year CAGE BIRDS has now entered upon.—Thomas Smith (Glasgow).

Allow me to wish you many happy returns of the day. Long may CAGE BIRDS live and help the novice, amateur, and champion alike. What a grand Birthday Number you have given us! The calendar is extra good, the British, Canaries, and a foregn bird looking extra fine; every bird fancier should procure one for his bird room. The plate of Goldfinch Hybrids appeals to me very much, and I am going to make a bold bid to breed one or two like them this season. The supplement is a treat indeed, and reflects great credit upon your artist-in-chief, Mr. H. Norman. The number is a real bumper for advertisements, and I have made a few purchases through it. My society wishes me to thank you for the report of our show of Dec. 26.—Arthur H. C. Legg, hon. sec., Mid-Rhondda C.B.S.

The Birthday Issue of CAGE BIRDS is more than up to its previous issues, and issuing the calendar a week or two after the New Year commences is a good business policy, for one gets so many calendars all at once about Christmas time that one is surfeited, while your beautiful art one coming later is all the more appreciated. I was particularly in love with that gorgeous plate of "Indian Jewels" (a worthy title) and it renewed covetous longings in my bird-loving mind to possess that "prince of songsters," the Shama. But the fates (in the shape of an empty exchequer) forbid that luxury yet awhile. The letterpress is delightful to the eye, and it is crammed full of good things, and should be appreciated by all your many readers. I trust 1912 will be a good year for CAGE BIRDS circulation.—Dan McArthur (Edinburgh).

The Young Naturalist.

*"The Coals Have Come."

A lady was anxiously waiting for a load of coals which she had ordered from the stores. "Eh, dear," she said, "I wish the stores people would bring that coal." Shortly after there was a loud peal of thunder, and the Parrot was startled for a moment, and then exclaimed, "I say, mother, t'coals come." (From "Co-operative News.")—Sent by Doris Allsop (aged 10). No. 5, Cavendish Street, Mansfield, Notts.

*Polly's Impertinence.

My mother told me about a photographer in Falkirk who had a Parrot which was a splendid speaker. It hung in the kitchen, which was at the back. He had a paint shop in one of the front rooms. One day a woman went into the shop on business; and Polly called out: "Are you a beggar? Go to the back door." The woman was very angry, and said to the mistress: "Aye, that's an impident servant o' yours, asking me if I was a beggar and telling me to go to the back door." The mistress said it could not be the servant, as she was out; it would be the Parrot. "Na, na, ye mauna tell me that." Nor would she be convinced until she was taken into the kitchen to see Polly hanging up in its cage.—James Dick (aged 12), 7, Brodie Street, Bainsford, Falkirk.

The Wise Robin.

One day a Robin built its nest in our garden hedge and laid three beautiful eggs, but the hedge began to fall away on that side, and stones came down and broke the eggs. Then the Robin left the nest, and we knew not where it had gone. About a month after this my father was cutting the hedge on the other side, and just as he had cut away some grass and leaves, he saw a nest with four young Robins, almost ready to fly. He fixed up a shelter of sticks and bushes, which he had cut down, to prevent the cats from getting at the birds. He then left them, and soon after we saw them hopping about on the same hedge. This was the same Robin which had built its nest on the other side of the hedge, and came regularly for its food in the backyard every morning. We often find birds, such as Sparrows, in the pantry eating the egg food and biscuits prepared for the cage birds.—Sent by Marie Whell (aged 12), The Parade, Mousehole, Penzance.

OUR PICTURE PUZZLE.

Result of the "Jumbled Canaries" Competition.

A very large number of readers entered for our Birthday Number "Jumble" competition. It will be remembered that the front page of that issue contained an illustration of two Canaries, but the artist's original was caretully cut into many and variously shaped pieces; being reproduced in a form which required not a little skill in placing together. The competition (in which we offered one Guinea for the best attempt at pasting up the pieces so as to resemble the artist's first drawing, a copy of which was kept as a "key") proved both popular and (to us) entertaining. The prize of one Guinea, we are glad to be able to announce, goes to

Mr. A. W. Mantach,
Glenesk Lodge,
Dalkeith,
Scotland,

to whom a cheque will in due course be sent. This gentleman's attempt is exceedingly neat.

Following very hard after, come the attempts of Mrs. Walter Gamble (South Wigston, nr. Leicester), and Messrs. T. P. Pratt (Dudley) and G. Pridham (Plymouth).

A very artistic coloured effort was sent in by Mr. G. Fuidge, of Southampton, but as it was not specified in the conditions that coloured solutions would be admitted into competition we had to pass this over, otherwise it would no doubt have been one of the four leading attempts.

Creditable attempts were also sent by Mrs. A. Lawford (Huddersfield), Mrs. A. Leslie Miller (London, S.E.), Mrs. F. Terry (Stamford), Mrs. E. W. Waldock (London, N.), the Misses Gertrude Fishburn (Keighley), Lily Golledge (London, S.W.), Dorothy Hawkes (Leytonstone), A. Johnson (Lancaster), Quarter Master Sergeant J. H. Beale, R.E. (Devonport), Messrs. W. Audley (Edmonton), W. Bailey (Bury St. Edmunds), T. P. Baxter (Runcorn), H. F. Bowring (London, S.W.), L. J. Bonfield (Bridport), W. Cutton (Great Yarmouth), W. Hale (Leicester), F. Hammond (Bradford), T. Hoey (Bristol), S. Linzmann (London, E.C.), A. Moorman (Carisbrooke Castle), E. C. Munday (Worcester Park), A. Pressey (Bridlington), A. T. Southwood (Liverpool), Matt Stapley (Whitby), H. Tate (Leeds), C. Wetherill (Wetherby), P. E. Woodhouse (Reigate), and H. Yorke (Badminton R.S.O.); and Masters R. E. Brenchley-Bendall (Aldershot), and J. Maxwell (Wallsend).

CUMNOCK C.B.S.

General meeting held Co-op. Hall, Auchinleck, Feb. 10, President Mr. Kinnear in chair, with a good turn-out of members. Report and balance sheet for 1911 gave every satisfaction, with a good subetantial balance to carry forward. Secretary gave a very satisfactory report of the society's business for its second year. Election of office-bearers: all present office-bearers unanimously re-elected with additionals in Messrs. W. Mossie, J. Hainey, A. Wyper, J. Boyes, J. McNorland, and J. Weir, making a substantial working committee. Decided to hold a show in Public Hall this year, as we were very much hampered last. It will be held Nov. 30. It was intended last year to have a cup for each section; it would come very hard on finances of the society to get a cup for each section and give a gold medal along with it; but instead they are going to give a gold medal to the one with the highest points in each section, so the present cup will just go as formerly decided on—to the one with most points in any one section. Next meeting to be a "smoker," April 6th, Co-op. Hall. J. Nutt, Sec.

BURY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held Seven Stars, Bolton Street, Feb. 6th. Credit is due to the landlord, as he set his best room at our disposal. An enjoyable evening was spent. Through the absence of Mr. Brough, Mr. Pilling was voted to the chair, and a right jocular chairman, too; some of his remarks he may be called upon to answer for when the minutes are read at next meeting. Business was gone through, and a pair show arranged to take place next meeting, March 5th, birds to be staged by 7.30, judging at 8.—H. Jameson, Sec.

Question of amending rule held over. Decided to continue support to the London Federation of C.B.S., and Messrs. Chard and Sayer were appointed delegates. —Fred Thynne, assist. hon. sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Meeting held "White Swan," Mr. W. A. Gibbins presiding; a large muster of members present While Mr. E. Noakes judged the table show, a few minor items were dealt with. Society to continue to pay 6s. special for most points gained at each night show. Decided to have two more silver cups raised by voluntary subscription, a nice sum being handed in. Six new members elected. A lengthy discussion took place regarding clashing of a Midland C.B.C. next open show with ours, members considering it will be a serious blow to both societies. Balance sheet of All-England show presented, showing a balance on the right side of 11s. 3d. Accounts gave every satisfaction, showing a balance on the year of £12 10s. The president said he was pleased to see the Hand-in-Hand in such a flourishing condition, cash in hand, six grand cups, and up-to-date show staging, making the assets of the society well over £20. Also pleased to see the interest taken in various shows and lectures. The open show had proved a success, and no complaints had been received. Following officers elected:—President: Mr. W. A. Gibbins; vice-presidents, Messrs. Noakes, Hulse, and Reeves; trustees, Messrs. Hulse and Noakes; committee, Messrs. Allen, Walton, Wood, Yarson, Moores, Kilsby, Hale, Bell, Pole, North, Neal, and Green; sec., A. Freestone. Any fancier desirous of joining will have a hearty welcome; subs. are very small, and valuable prizes are given in competition at members' shows, novices being well catered for.—A. Freestone, Sec.

Meeting held Blue Bell Inn, Feb. 12. Question of closed rings eventually left over till next meeting. Three new members enrolled; we bid fair to have a strong society this year. At our next meeting we will arrange schedule of classes for show, also fix show date.—G. R. Henderson, sec.

LOANHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held Masons' Arms, Feb. 10th, Mr. W. H. Nelson (vice-president) in chair. Secretary was instructed to get a fancier to give an exhibition of hand-washing for next meeting on second Saturday in March, and Mr. James Hamilton (Eskbank) has kindly consented to give an exhibition; further notice of time and place of hand-washing exhibition will be given later on. Young fanciers ought to keep this in mind. This society is still flourishing. New members enrolled: Messrs. J. Smeaton, A. Fleming, and A. Moffat (Musselburgh), R. Smith (Roslin).—W. B. Smart, Sec.

BOLTON WOODS C.B.S.

Atkinson (pair of silver photo frames), L. Dykes (set of cutlery), J. Cooper (gold medal), H. Bryant (clock), J. Pullan (silver medal and albert). The cup winner's health drunk at the expense of Mr. J. A. Taylor, who has been the champion exhibitor of the season. STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held headquarters Feb. 5th; capital attendance. A nice table show of novices' matched pairs, Messrs. Roberts, Lea and Davis judging, afterwards giving their opinions on the merits and suitability of the various pairs. Mr. C. Beckett (Birches Head) elected a member. Decided to purchase a handbag for the use of the secretary. Re cup presented the society by Mr. Pitchford, it was the general opinion it could not be competed for more fair, or with more advantage to the society, otherwise than tho one recently won by Mr. Roberts; so this will be competed for on same conditions. Mr. J. Davis promised a handsome silver medal for runner-up, so that competition promises to be very keen. Arranged to have a smoking concert at next meeting, when we shall discuss the advisability of holding an open show.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 8th, headquarters, Duke of York, Princess-street, when Mr. F. J. Weaver presided. Letter read from Leicester Hand-in-Hand Society about the difficulty re next annual show date. I must express the feeling of our committee when they knew of such occurrence; it was now impossible (as far as this society was concerned) to alter date, as we have engaged Mr. Robson to judge, and he has booked that date. So if it is possible for Leicester to arrange with their judge to go a week later, I am sure such a favour would be greatly acknowledged. We fixed up date for next show March 2nd at Duke of York. Classes as follows: Nor. 6 classes, Yorks. 3, Brit. 5, Mule 1, 1 A.O.C., 1 For. Judges, Messrs. J. Crundell (Yorks.), Tonks (Nor.), Weaver (Brit.). Special invitation given to Walsall members to exhibit at this show.—J. Gibbons, Hon. Sec.

Bourne.—Hy. Wray, Sec.

KILMARNOCK C.B.F.C.

Annual general meeting held Temperance Hall, Feb. 8th, president, Mr. J. Jones, in chair. Balance-sheet submitted showed a balance in hand of £3 14s. 3d., which was considered favourable and adopted. McFadyean, F. Jardine, W. Robertson, G. Adamson, J. Jones, H. Train, J. Dunsmuir, A. Watson, A. Bowie; auditors, Messrs. W. Guthrie, W. Robertson; secretary, R. McCaw. Mr. Blair proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Jones for services as president for past two years. Unanimously agreed to have a F.F. show July 20th, and it is hoped, as a first venture in Kilmarnock, members will try and make same a success. Mr. Train made a suggestion to have meeting in March and discuss benefits of inbreeding. Members are requested to attend; due notice will be given.—R. McCaw, Sec.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

General meeting held Crown Hotel, Birmingham, Feb. 8, Mr. W. Wells in chair. Challenge cups (champ. value £5 10s., novice £2 2s.) were brought for presentation, but neither the champion (P. Victor Williams, Esq.) nor the novice champion (P. Lane, Esq.) were present. Chairman, in presenting prizes to runners-up (Mr. W. G. Andrews with a very fine rose bowl and Mr. Earnshaw with a beautiful silver medal) remarked that the club was now in a sound position, and all that was now needed to make it a grand success was more members. More support was given to Midland shows on the whole by Yorkie fanciers than by fanciers of any other variety, conclusively proving the large number of Midland breeders; and yet our membership did not total 30, which was very discouraging to the few who had welfare of the Yorkie at heart. "Unity is Strength," and one has only to look North or South to see what great strides our favourite variety has made under well-supported specialist clubs. Now, Midland fanciers, do rally round us. We have not to find £5 10s. for another champion challenge cup for at least two more seasons, so shall be in a position to give more specials and arrange a more attractive programme for 1912, particulars of which will be given later. Our entry fee is only 1s., and annual sub. 2s. 6d.—Beck and Andrews, hon. secs., School House, Rookery Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

We are having a subscription list for a cup, and any small donation will be thankfully received. Our secretary, Mr. Hawkesley, has not been able to devote as much time to his duties as he would have liked, through the illness of his wife, and I am sure all of his friends will wish his wife a speedy recovery.

Our Essay Competition.

We hope next week to be in a position to announce the full awards in our recent Essay Competition. Two sections are still under consideration, there being a heavy entry and keen competition therein.

THE PRESTON AND FLOWER DEFENCE FUND.

Balance in Hand Paid Over to Mr. S. Bennett.

On the occasion of the R.S.P.C.A. prosecuting Messrs. Preston and Flower (two well-known bird-dealers) in an endeavour to stop newly-caught birds being brought into London, although caught in an unprotected (i.e., legally open) district, readers of CAGE BIRDS very generously subscribed a sum of money to defray the expense of having the magistrate's decision (which went against the dealers) tested in the Appeal Court. As we announced after the appeal had been heard, a balance remained in the hands of Mr Geo. Crabb, the respected President of the London and Provincial O.S., who so kindly acted as treasurer to the fund, the amounts subscribed being placed by him in the Post Office Savings Bank.

Then the R.S.P.C.A. officials turned their attention to Mr. S. Bennett, in an effort to have it declared that the description "newly-caught" might be applied to a bird which had been in captivity six months or under. The Society met with deserved defeat in this outrageous contention, both before the magistrate and in the Divisional Court But although Mr. Bennett won his case, he was left considerably out-of-pocket, as the costs recovered from the R.S.P.C.A. did not defray the whole of his own law costs. So we decided to hand over to him the balance remaining from the Preston and Flower Fund (with, of course, the concurrence of the subscribers thereto). Messrs. Ody and Wilmot certified that Mr. Bennett was over £13 out-of-pocket, this sum not including any purely personal expenses. We had a sum of £12 7s. 7d. at our disposal, and on Dec. 1 last this was duly paid over to Mr. Bennett, whose receipt we hold and a letter from whom is printed below. We also publish a balance-sheet of the fund, the receipts and other documents concerning which have been duly inspected and certified as correct by Mr. T. R. Trower (the treasurer of the National British Bird and Mule Club), and Mr. J. W. Ramsden (the manager of the Crystal Palace Show). We take this opportunity of thanking these two gentlemen; also Mr. G. Crabb for the services and time he so ungrudgingly devoted to the matter.

Mr. Bennett Returns Thanks.

9, Prince's Terrace, Peckham,
Dec. 2, 1911.

Dear Sir,—I beg to express my most hearty thanks to you and to the contributors to the Preston and Flower Fund, for the grant of £12 7s. 7d. kindly made to me out of that fund towards the expenses I have been put to by the recent proceedings taken by the R.S.P.C.A. against me. In expressing my grateful thanks for the help given to me, I venture to hope that it will lead persons interested in cage birds to feel that they can rely on support from their fellows in such cases.

Yours faithfully,
S. BENNETT.

To the Editor of CAGE BIRDS,

Owing to severe pressure upon our space in recent issues, the publication of the above has been unavoidably delayed.—EDITOR.

I regret having to advertise my birds for disposal, writes Mr. G. Scaife (Haywood Station, near Lanark), but since my appointment here I find I cannot give them the attention they require. I have had also to give up my judging appointments except one. I hope, however, that in a year or so I shall be as busy amongst the birds as ever.

Allow me to congratulate you upon the splendid report that you have given us of the Palace Show. It is a great improvement having the illustrations of various winners at the headings of the different sections. All our members are singing very loud this week in the praise of "Good old CAGE BIRDS"; never better, though once younger.—A. J. Notley, sec., Hetton-le-Hole and Dist. C.B.S.

At a meeting of the CAGE BIRDS Prizes (for Yorkshiremen) Committee, held on Feb. 10, at the Market Tavern, Bradford (Mr. R. Halliday presiding, in the absence through indisposition of Mr. Sunderland), the ballot for the eight societies at which points should be counted for the champion section of the Yorkshire Union competition, resulted in the following being drawn:—Laisterdyke, Bradford (West), Huddersfield, Great Horton, Brighouse, Halifax, Queensbury and Skelmanthorpe.—Fred Hammond, hon. sec.

A Jovial Gathering.

Messrs. Van Oppen and Co., Ltd., held their fifth annual Bohemian concert at the Connaught Rooms (Great Hall), Great Queen St., London, W.C., on Saturday, Feb. 10. Mr. W. Van Oppen occupied the chair, and a most enjoyable evening was spent, no less than twenty-two items appearing on the programme, all of which were heartily appreciated by the very large number present.

Just Before the Battle.

A happy and jovial band of well-known fanciers and judges were housed at "Ye Old Bell," Queen Victoria Street, on the eve of the great Crystal Palace Show, writes a correspondent. Such notabilities as Messrs. J. Dewar (Edinburgh), H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), W. Mundell and H. Broadley (Bradford), J. Brotherton, of Crest fame (Bolton), and J. C. Barnes, R. Colton, and G. Fletcher (Sheffield). Jokes and merriment were the order of the day, not forgetting a little "sight seeing" down the Strand.

Mishap to Noted Mule.

In your splendid report of the Palace Show, writes Mr. Alf. Shellam (Cardiff), your reporter, when on the Dark Linnet Mule class says: "he, Shellam, one of the finest in class, but if the L.C.B.A. and Scottish National winner, it seems to have gone off a little in colour and condition." For the benefit of my friends in the Fancy, of which I have many, I may say that this bird's stable companion was the above winner, but he had his flight feathers in the bottom of his cage. The "h.c." bird had not been out before this season. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

A Marked Mavis.

Master Alastair Donald, Pitmedden House, Inverurie, during the recent stormy weather, caught a Mavis (Song Thrush) with a ring bearing the following marks: "Aberdeen University, 19,626." The bird is being carefully tended by its captor, who intends (says our informant) to release it after the passing of the severe weather.

A Dinner at Peckham.

We are having a dinner at headquarters, "The Reindeer Hotel," Rye Lane, Peckham, on Feb. 20, with our president, Mr. James Bright Crowe, in the chair, writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec. of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. A good musical programme has been arranged. Friends and fanciers who would like to join us on this occasion can have particulars and tickets from me at 39, Friern Road, East Dulwich.

The Roller Judge.

We are extremely sorry that the name of Mr. F. Oldroyd was not mentioned in our introductory notes to the Crystal Palace Show as officiating as judge upon the Roller Canary Section, in which capacity he gave the highest possible satisfaction. Mr. Oldroyd's appointment being made somewhat late in the day, his name did not figure amongst the list of judges given on the front page of the catalogue.

A "Nap Hand" en route.

On the eve of the Crystal Palace Show, seated in a compartment of the Midland express bound for St. Pancras, I spotted, writes a correspondent, four well-known fanciers (two from Bradford and two from Sheffield) fighting for honours and cash specials. They were playing nap! The "Cutlers" claimed the plums; Bradford has a lot yet to learn as regards shuffling and dealing!

A Little Difference ettled.

We are pleased to hear that the differences recently reported in CAGE BIRDS as existing between the management of the Crystal Palace Show and the chief officials of the British Roller Canary Club have been satisfactorily settled with an apology and payment of costs. The two apologies, signed respectively by Messrs. Norris and Slade and Lowe, appear on page 173.

The Palace Show.

In reply to many correspondents, please allow me, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden, to state again that all birds (except one which was to be called for) left the Crystal Palace between four and ten o'clock on Tuesday, the day of closing. Prize and sales money is now being paid in alphabetical order. Medals will be sent to winners when received from the makers. Medals cannot be sent in lieu of prizes in half-money classes. Applications for prizes to be sent by return cannot be entertained.

We regret that the class for Novice Cinnamon Canaries was overlooked in our report of the Palace Show, owing to its being a late addition, and thus not included in the schedule. The awards were:—1, Wagstaff; 2, 3, hc, Bevan; 4, Andrews Bros.; vhc, c, Proctor. Mr. J. Wones, who judged, writes: "The novice Cinnamons were a good lot, many being of high merit; the best class seen for many years, and probably the best ever seen. Birds numbered 1245, 6, 7, and 8 were not judged, as they were not according to rules in schedule; coloured string was used in fastening on the cage labels."

Fascinating Foreign Birds at the Palace.

Black-headed Caiques must not be trusted till quite tame and fully accustomed to their owners, for their beaks are really capable of making a very nasty ragged wound, and they are absolutely fearless, and will not desist until disabled. The above is merely a warning, for it would be grossest libel to stigmatise this species as vicious, but Parrots, like humans, are creatures of moods. For instance, my Hawk-headed Caique was happier being fondled and nursed than in its cage, yet a neglect to observe its moods meant an occasional nasty bite; then how much more so with a recent acquisition!

Diet, etc.: The seed mixture given for Brown's Parrakeet will answer admirably for this species, and also as to the other items of the menu. A roomy cage, periods of liberty in the room, and protection from draught will suffice to secure a long and contented life for this charming and beautiful, yet quaint looking species.

Blue-rumped Parrot.

This species (Psittacus incertus) is a rare one, and as regards form and size more of a Lovebird than a Parrot. The pair exhibited by Mr. L. W. Hawkins were quite young, and exhibited but little of the true colouration of the species, being much greyer and more subdued than adult birds. Mr. Beaty possessed a pair of this species in either 1910 or 1911, but unfortunately they did not recover from importation troubles; they were, however, almost in adult plumage, and the skin of the male came into my possession. It is quite a deep rich green, glossy and silken above, with a suspicion of a golden sheen in parts, and some of the feathers of wings and back narrowly margined with yellow; the crown of the head is dullish blue; rump, bright blue. Their brightest spot of colour is under the wings, where it is mostly bright red, making them look almost brilliant when on the wing. It is about seven inches from tip of beak to tip of tail.

It ranges over Tenasserim, Borneo, and near districts. A diet of seed (principally canary and millet), ripe fruit, green food, and an occasional piece of plain biscuit will about meet their simple needs. But little is known as to their demeanour in captivity, but all the Psittacidæ are interesting captives, differing as they do in all respects from our native birds.

The Yellow (Gold and Green) Tanager.

This is not the first specimen of this beautiful species (Calliste flava) which Mr. S. M. Townsend has possessed, as he had one in 1902, and others have possessed the species as well. It was staged in Mr. Townsend's usual faultless style, and is indeed a lovely creature. Pen and ink pictures may indicate the bare colours, but can never describe the glowing iridescence of the Tanagridæ. Will my readers turn to the figure on the plate; the light areas are shining guinea-gold; the dark patch on face across throat and down of centre of body is black, as also are the dark wing and tail feathers, but according to the angle at which the light catches the plumage, the outer of the former are deep green or deep blue, and the same applies to the latter as to colour, but the central tail feathers show the blue or green as a broad margin all round.

It is very plentiful in N.E. Brazil, especially in gardens and fruit plantations, and also in forest areas wherever fruit is abundant.

Treatment in captivity: Tanagers, perhaps as much as any order, suffer from prostration consequent upon the hardships of importation; nevertheless, once this critical period is passed, the group as a whole are tolerably long lived. They are somewhat fastidious feeders, and their tastes must be consulted, especially as to ripe fruit, for if this does not suit their palate, even hunger will not force them to eat it, so if one kind is not taken they must be offered another. The fruit should be fully ripe—"soft ripe"—but not rotten. Some individuals practically take nothing but fruit, and hardly touch the soft food mixture. I also am a firm believer in milk sop—condensed milk, boiling water, crumbled sponge cake, honey, and a little liquid malt. Thus their requirements are not difficult to meet, for though the fare reads rather formidable, it is not so in practice. Such individuals as will take mealworms or other insects may have two or three per diem. Tanagers in cages must be kept under observation, as they are liable to over-eating—many die from this cause alone—and if noticed to be "fat and lazy," then diet must be carefully regulated, and the cage perches and food hoppers so arranged as to force the bird to use its wings. The Yellow Tanager "swears" by fruit for the major portion of its dietary, taking very little else.

If an opportunity occurs of acquiring this species, I certainly advise my readers to seize it, as if the above precautions are observed, it should do well, and will prove a beautiful and interesting acquisition.

The Ribbon Finch.

This species (Amadina fasciata) is common, therefore a plebeian and a cutthroat at that and the behaviour of some pairs support this character. Nevertheless, these charming, if common, birds are not so "black as they are painted," and they so readily adapt themselves to the conditions of life in captivity, being free breeders and hardy, that they usually maintain a place in most collections. Personally, the writer has a warm place in his affections for them, as they were the first species of foreign birds he succeeded in breeding, now some twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Breeding in cages: A roomy cage is required, with the fittings so arranged as to force the birds to take exercise. Though this species are rather greedy for live food, I think they are better without it (unless ill) under the conditions of cage life. At all times the following simple diet will meet their needs: Canary, white and spray millet, ants' eggs as bought, green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water. In the aviary there will be no difficulty; they will help themselves to a little of everything there is about, and do well without any trouble at all, usually rearing two or three broods annually.

Mr. Goodchild's characteristic drawing shows that, even if common, they do not lack beauty. Their principal colouration is golden-brown, barred and streaked with dark brown; the male has a crimson throat band and a chocolate patch on the abdomen, which the female does not possess. Observation must be kept that their cage does not become infested with parasites.

The Ribbon Finch figured on our plate was exhibited by Madame Feist Madewell, for whom it gained fourth prize and it is one of the best we have seen.

The Green Cardinal.

This citizen (Gubernatrix cristata) of the Argentine Republic, is a charming and interesting bird, both for cage and aviary. In the former it is beautiful, intelligent, and interesting; moreover, it soon becomes steady and acquainted with its owner; in the latter the above holds good, and a pair soon settle down and set about the business of reproducing their kind.

The bird exhibited by Mr. J. M. Walsh was, I suspect, a colour-fed specimen, which imparted an orange tint to the beautiful yellows and green of the natural bird. Again I must ask my readers to take Mr. Goodchild's drawing as a diagram—the crest, lores, dark eye streak, and throat patch, deep black; the light areas of eye region, cheeks, and sides of throat, golden-yellow; ear coverts, nape, back of neck, mantle, back, and wings, olive green, variegated with blackish-green; outer webs of flight feathers, belly, and under tail coverts, bright yellow; the tail, with the exception of the two central feathers, which are green, is golden yellow; beak and feet, dark blackish-grey.

It is a bold, active, and striking bird, with some quaint, mellow, staccato notes as its song. On the wing he is a glorious creature, the golden-yellow tail and wing feathers being then fully displayed. I have found them amiable in a mixed series.

The hen is more dusky than her mate, lacks the golden yellows of his plumage, and the light areas of her face and sides of throat are whitish, though the respective areas and markings are similar in both sexes.

Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, with a little hemp, oats, and sunflower seeds; ripe fruit, and one or two live insects per diem.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARY A "MADE-UP" BIRD.

Instructive and Entertaining Discussion, opened by Mr. Broughton, of Wilmslow, before the Members of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.

Meeting held, Deansgate Hotel, Feb. 5, Mr. Bladon in chair. We had a very good attendance to hear Mr. Broughton, of Wilmslow, open a discussion on the Yorkshire Canary.

A Made-up Bird.

In opening the discussion Mr. Broughton said that the Yorkshire Canary was what he called a made-up bird, being got from a mixture of the Belgian and the Lancashire Canaries, and having a small proportion of Norwich blood. The three main points which went to make up a good Yorkshire bird were: type, position, and quality. These he thought were all derived from the hen. Taking the first of these, viz., type, meaning shape. He found that the best means of improving this was to double-buff. By double-buffing we got a bird which was more round and shapely in the back; the breast also was not so inclined to be sharp and pointed, which obviated the tendency to frilliness—an objectionable feature in a Yorkshire. The main point to watch in double-buffing was to have the cock not too large, or the progeny would have a tendency to coarseness.

Position undoubtedly came from the Belgian blood. Here, again, one must look to the hen. The main thing to watch in breeding for position was that the legs of the hen were not too long. Have them right as regards shape and position on the body by all means. This point was not so important in the cock.

Cinnamon Blood Advocated.

For quality and colour Mr. Broughton advocates an introduction of cinnamon blood. This should be on the cock side only, the reason being the tendency of the cinnamon to fail in type. Do not, he added, expect much improvement in colour from the first cross. He generally found that a good undercolour was imparted the first year, this coming to the surface in the following generation.

Length in the Stock Bird.

From the cock bird we got what Mr. Broughton called the secondary points such as head and neck properties. In selecting a stock cock go for length, not merely size. Length of wing and tail were most important. A cock with a square shoulder need not on this account alone be discarded for breeding purposes as these usually bred good wing carriage—a very noticeable point in a bird with such long wings. If the bird had good long legs, so much the better, as this helped to bring the progeny well up on the perch.

"Big cock to small hen" was not advocated, the reason being that such pairs usually bred some very big and some very small birds, very few being good medium-sized birds, such as were required on the show bench. One should always match up a pair for stock birds. For this we wanted a good big cock and a good big hen.

Advice to the Novice.

The advice to the novice on starting in the Fancy was: "Go to the man who breeds his own winners: buy the best your means will allow, and buy both cock and hen from the same room." Indiscriminate buying was apt to lead to reversion to original stock. Line breeding, or inbreeding, while useful to the experienced fancier, was not recommended to the novice. Unless one knew his stock and knew what they would throw, one would do a great deal of harm. Do not forget, he added, that inbreeding fixes bad points as easily as good ones. Mr. Broughton said he firmly believed one might even fix size by inbreeding.

Mr. Bladon quite agreed, he said, that you must first breed the birds before you could thoroughly understand them, and he advised breeders to be very careful in parting with birds that they had bred, especially hens.

Mr. Broughton was asked how to increase the percentage of yellows. He said he had found that double-buffing often increased the number of yellows. There were two distinct shades of buff from this mating, one very much paler than the other. The deepest of these should be mated to a good yellow.

In answer to another question Mr. Broughton did not think it necessary to introduce Belgian blood now to keep up the position. This position he thought had been firmly fixed by inbreeding.

How to Get Rid of Frills.

Following this, he was asked how to remove frills; also if sufficient objection were taken to them on the show bench. In replying, Mr. Broughton caused some amusement by saying that the frills did not always show when the birds were being judged. There were different ways of getting rid of them. They could be either washed out, pulled out, or bred out. The best means he knew for breeding out frills was to double-buff. Frills were caused by pointed breasts and long feather, and both of these defects could be remedied by double-buffing.

Replying to another question, Mr. Broughton said that he did not advocate double-yellowing. If for some particular reason he tried this, he would get a cock as stout and as good in colour as possible, and a hen as pale in colour as he could.

Concerning Colour-feeding.

Next we got to colour-feeding. Our visitor did not advise taking away the seed. Neither did he care for the feed to be too hot in colour. He used one egg for the whole of his stock—about ninety birds. He mixed 1oz. of hot pepper to 1lb. of cool; this he passed through a fine sieve to break up all lumps. He did not care to add oil, but strongly recommended whole meal bread and plenty of sugar. The quantity he used was, equal parts sugar and pepper, mixed with bread, egg, and tea biscuit to make a nice salmon colour. He mixed this overnight, giving to birds next morning. As a rule his birds got colour food every day; but he sometimes found very good coloured birds in the flight, these only getting the leavings of the other birds. He covered up only the old birds during the moult, and this by means of a very light curtain hanging about a foot from the front of the cages.

Linseed and Hot Pepper.

Speaking of linseed, we were advised to use the seed in preference to the meal, as the meal was apt to go rancid, especially in warm weather. His reason for using hot pepper was because he found the colour did not last so long if obtained from cool pepper only.

He did not recommend the use of tonics as a regular thing during the moult. If he thought a tonic was needed, he would prefer citrate of quinine to iron. Mr. Cook thought that it was no use expecting a good colour unless your birds were in good health and had a quick moult.

Mr. Atkinson, in moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Broughton, said he wished we could see him amongst us more often, as he—and he was sure the rest of those present—had had a most enjoyable and instructive evening. This was heartily backed up by the meeting generally. In response, Mr. Broughton said he would be glad to come amongst us oftener; but for one thing he was a very busy man, having many interests in the country. Another thing was he did not like the Manchester weather. He was glad if his few words had been appreciated. After this, the prize money won at the January members' show was distributed to members present. This brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.—E. H. Fulcher, hon. treasurer.

The Favourite of the Finch Family.

By J. KERSHAW (Llanrwst.)

A Keen Welsh Fancier discourses upon the Goldfinch.

The Bird to Find to Win.

As you are aware good exhibition Goldfinches are not manufactured, or else they would be sold at 6½d. bazaars and made in Germany. No; a good Goldie, from an exhibition point of view, is caught, yes, one in a hundred; and an extra outstanding one comes out about one in a thousand. Wales has notoriety for exhibition Goldies, and a few have crossed the Border, the two latest being Capt. Hurst's from Carnarvon and Mr. Harris' Finch from Llanrwst, purchased by myself from Messrs. Evans and Roberts, and sold to the above-named gentleman. Mr. Herbert's Palace winner, I understand, came from the district. It is curious to note that the 1911 sensation was shown at Menai Bridge and got no higher than Reserve. Why it was so, it is hard to tell, for the bird as it presented itself that day was easily the best bird in the show, the writer making a desperate effort to buy, but no, the luck was not in favour of the Welshman. I congratulate the owner, as it is considered one of the very best that ever crossed from Wales, though it has been beaten by the one sold to Mr. Harris. When selecting a Greypate for exhibition, never be guided by a good glance at first sight. It is absolutely essential that the ideal bird should be framed in your mind. If a bird seems to get better the more you look at it, you probably have found the right one, providing you have the right judgment to select. On the other hand, don't take a bird because it has some particular good point, such as a large blaze on a small body, or a bird that seems to "wear out" the more you look at it. Don't, at the same time, be misled by your too eager convictions, but rather weigh up the bird in your mind and compare it with your ideal; or, better still, with the bird that has done a lot of winning in the district.

A Criticism of the Standard.

The standard, as drawn up, reads as follows: (1) size, 5 points; (2) shape—well proportioned, not too stout or angular, or thick at waist, to stand at an angle of 45 degrees on perch, 20 points; (3) head and blaze—head fairly large, with wide skull, blaze large, well back over eye, and down the throat, free from black stripes or breaks, and as rich as possible in colour, 20; (4) wings—bars large and bright, buttons well defined and regular, 15; (5) body—colours to be as clear and pure and well contrasted as possible, especially on breast, where the markings should be seen, other markings clean cut and pure in colour, 10; (6) condition—healthy, tight in feather, no broken or missing plumage, 20; (7) steadiness, 10; total 100.

Now, to allow only 5 points for size is absurd, for the simple reason that it is much more difficult to get a good big one, than a small good one. No doubt the idea primarily was to throw out the foreigner from British bird classes; but I presume, inasmuch as nothing is mentioned about the Foreign birds in the standard, neither does it state that the standard is intended for the British Goldfinch, that this standard of points is for both British and Foreign Goldfinches. Again, it is ridiculous to think that on account of this 5 points clause for size, even in a good Siberian we must not look for size. Nothing is mentioned about these facts, and I draw attention to them as I know several novices who hold to the opinion that a good little one is the bird wanted, which, of course, is wrong.

The head and blaze come next under discussion. The standard states "head fairly large, with wide skull, though the blaze must be large." This is difficult to understand by those who have not seen the best specimens. Had it been the skull to be wide at entrance, and continued to the back of the head, it would be more "understandable." How is it possible to get a large blaze without a big head and face, with a wide skull? Again, the show reports say, "Grand square blaze." Nothing is mentioned in the standard about a square blaze, yet the wider the blaze the better; at least the wide-blazed birds win, and rightly so, in my opinion, for a wide blaze is better than a square blaze if it is horizontal at the base and comes fairly well down. It is impossible to get a square blaze, strictly speaking, unless the blaze be confined to the front (or face) but in a wide face you can expect width of the sides of the blaze, and look for it to be square at bottom. The idea to have it well over the eye and down the throat is quite obvious; but the Goldie is a better bird if it has a curved width of blaze extending right into the cheeks and square under.

Is it Helpful to the Novice?

There is evidently something lacking in the standard; it is hardly descriptive enough to the novice. Taking things into consideration, nothing is said about bird crossing its wings. There is nothing nicer in a Finch than a good even-balanced wing carriage; yet nothing in the standard is said about the formation of the wings at the shoulder, but it simply dwells on technical colour points.

The bars are to be large and bright, and the buttons well defined. The fact that bars are to be large and bright is curiously a question of colour, and should come under another heading; "it is best to have buttons regular" comes under markings really. The bar and its brightness are nothing, but what width of yellow colour nature has given it is everything. "Buttons well defined" is a question of colour for all Goldies have buttons; some good, some bad; some small, some large; but whether they are large or small, unless they are verging on white in colour they cannot be well defined in the correct sense of the word, and consequently it becomes a question of colour.

"TOMMY." A Pet Owl belonging to Mrs. Horton, of Hightown, Lancs.

THIS BIRD HAS NEVER BEEN IN A CAGE, BUT ROAMS ALL OVER THE HOUSE, AND IS GREAT FRIENDS WITH ITS OWNER'S TWO DOGS.

The Bird to Select.

Now, leaving the standard as it is, my advice to the novice is this: Select a large bird with a big head and a wide entrance, and continued so, and a wide rich-coloured blaze, clean cut, square at bottom, free from breaks or blackness, plenty above and below, extending well beyond the eye. Mind it has a deep rich tan, extending right down to the tail and across the chest if you can get it. Have one with long wings and tail, with rich coloured wide bars, distinct buttons, jet black otherwise. Don't take one leggy; and ignore the 45 degrees angle, for if you get a fairly short-legged one, it usually stands in the correct position. Get it thick across chest, and well filled at back, not forgetting a good coloured one throughout. Feed as I have stated, look into its daily needs, moult it over well, send it to the show when ready and win the prize.

Climbing the Norwich Plainhead Tree.

By W. SPILLMAN (Devonport).

A Famous South Country Breeder tells how the top is to be reached.

Do not speculate in breeding with two yellows or two buffs until you are the master of your stock. As a passing hint, I may say that the breeding of the yellows would throw spare and open-feathered birds, and probably not so strong in constitution; whilst the buffs would increase the width of feather and possibly put the increase on where it was not wanted. Please note, no bird with a square-cut or heavy appearance behind is wanted in the show cage. There may be no reason to introduce fresh blood for several seasons, and even when you do, insist on the upkeep of size. Presuming you have bred on methodical lines, you will of necessity have stamped certain properties into your strain that even you can afford to introduce something not so pleasing to the eye, but yet looks like making up a defect in which you fail; such as a cock bird that carries too much feather. But, then, you know you can counteract that, and it is bound to be advantageous. What is the odds how much feather a bird carries so long as it is carried right?

Is it Blood that Tells?

It cannot be said that like produces like so far as our favourite is concerned, for there always seems to be a tendency for the birds to deteriorate in size, which is only natural when we think from whence it came. On the other hand, when a system has been adopted which is crowned with success, it is pretty sure that winners will crop up from these "bred right" when least expected. As an example, they may have been poorly fed or may not have had a good moult. Many a present-day winner was not a promising youngster, and when the last-named looks as though he were the best that was ever bred, very often you are sadly disappointed. Why? I remember in one instance that I bred from a yellow hen which I called "Tiny" (a name most appropriate)—a buff cock that was the finest all-round buff cock I ever had, and in another instance where a sweet young buff hen of medium size and failing in head bred me one of the most typical yellows ever seen our way. Are not such proofs convincing testimony even to the most biassed against pedigree breeding? Not that it is absolutely necessary to breed with close relations, although that may be done at times with astounding results. Still, there is a limit to all things, and without you have a special object in view it need not be reverted to.

Strengthening the Head Properties.

You may say I have an idea of increasing head properties, and that may be classed as my "special object." Select a pair of the best bred from those that excel in head properties, and mate two of the best hens back to their father, whilst a couple of the young cocks may be mated back to their cousins—that is, if you are fortunate enough to possess them—of course, bearing in mind what you have in view. No doubt your wish is attained. Do not go mad in pedigree breeding because this has turned up trumps; have a bit on the surface as well, and that a big bit.

Select your stock for future breeding directly the moult is over, and on no account part with any or deviate from your usual rule. I find a Norwich show cage double its ordinary length, with other dimensions precisely the same, makes a splendid "mating-up cage." The birds show themselves better, you can discern the good and bad points to a nicety, and, what is more, if you care to run three or four in at the same time, they are not in one another's ways. Quality can only be appreciated by experience, and colour can easily be maintained by the use of green blood. Do not overdo it, or you will regret the day.

I had almost forgotten to mention "bastard flights" or overhanging secondaries, which, if they once get the upper hand, will cause you great trouble.

Wild-Bird Life.

During Frost and Snow.

The unusually severe weather experienced during the end of the month played havoc among wild birds, but fortunately it did not last very long; and now at the time of writing there is every indication of getting back to milder, although rather moist conditions. The frost had not been in progress more than a day or two before we noticed changes in the behaviour of the birds. Many left the fields, woods and uplands, and found their way to the larger gardens and private grounds. No doubt in the first instance they do this with a view to securing warmer quarters, for most gardens have a wall or fence round them, which gives a little relief from the cold wind; and the evergreen shrubs and trees are much more cosy as roosting quarters than the ordinary hedgerow or exposed copse. As the frost continued, food became more scarce; the neighbourhood of buildings, chicken-runs, and refuse heaps, were then diligently searched for stray morsels.

Blackbirds and the Thrushes generally appear to feel the effects of the cold and scarcity more than the smaller kinds. They look as miserable as birds possibly can—simply bunches of feathers with hardly strength enough to fly over a decent fence. Are these birds more delicate than others? Or do they need more sustenance? We can hardly think it is the latter, as they are not nearly such big eaters as the Starlings, and the cold and shortage of supplies do not appear to affect them very much. Perhaps they are of a more cheerful disposition, and do not so easily succumb to adverse conditions. Anyway, among the visitors to the bird table none looked so well as these spangled beauties. They are no respecters of persons or sex, a masterful cock keeping all comers at bay. Occasionally a bold one would challenge him, and while they fluttered and fought, the others would nip in a good and fair share of some of the good things going. During the frost many unusual visitors found their way to the garden, among them a lovely cock Bullfinch, whose rich dress made him particularly conspicuous, among the snowy surroundings. But he would fare tolerably well, as berries would no doubt form his staple food, at such times.

No Longer Breeds with Us.

The Black Tern is no longer a breeding species in England, but in former times it used to nest on the marshes of the East Coast.

Birds and Berries

Where Woodpigeons are plentiful, small birds do not manage to get a fair share of the berries of the hedgerows and woods, for these birds have such wonderful appetites that they clear a privet hedge or yew bush in double quick time. When the snow is on the ground, and acorns, and beech mast are buried, Pigeons have recourse to berries, and soon clear the wilder districts.

Under the White Rose.

SKIPTON Society are making great progress. At their last members' show held a fortnight ago they had a grand turn up, comprising Yorkshires, Norwich, Greens, British, Mules and Foreign, some 120 birds in all being staged; and from a society that has only been established or really re-established for just over 12 months, it shows somebody is working hard in the interests of the members, and that the members are responding well. I believe it was in 1893 that the last open bird show was held at Skipton, and by the way things are moving I think it will be no very long time before we see them again in the list of shows. Will it be under the rules of the Y.U.?

LAST Saturday was a happy day for those who like to attend to meetings. The Market Tavern from 5 o'clock to, well, somewhat late was attended by different kinds of fanciers, commencing with "cinnamon marked-uns" and finishing up with "green marked-uns," there being no less than half a dozen meetings—C.M. Y.C.C. the Y.C.C. the N.G.M.Y.C.C. the Y.C. B.B. and M.C. the Cage Birds prizes committee and the sub-committee who have the annual gathering for the prize distribution in hand. Of course, the principal business of the specialist clubs was the winding up of the competitions for the past season, and of course there was the usual objection or two to contend with; but as a rule they do not take much smoothing down, though they certainly cause a little discussion as to the ways and means of avoiding them in future.

THE annual prize distribution came up for consideration and the arrangements for talent, etc., put into order. Then it must be noted that this year a "knife and fork tea" is to be served instead of the dinner at a charge of 1s. 3d. per head, and the committee hope that this will meet with the approval of all, and that there will be more than ever present. Fanciers can rest assured that the evening's entertainment will be quite up to the usual standard, if it does not surpass all previous records. As regards the prizes there will be much more than usual to be presented, and the display before the commencement will be a sight to be remembered. I have tried to total it up but failed. It will represent a very large sum of hard cash.

LAST Saturday was in other respects a big day. Several societies were holding their annual dinners etc., and socials and the two Great Horton Societies were each having members' shows, the old society having a good entry of close on a hundred and the other a fair turn up, especially in the British bird section, a new departure that paid well and added to the interest of the show to a great extent.

A GARDEN AVIARY FOR FIFTY SHILLINGS.

By B. C. BRIARS (Enfield.)

HOW IT WAS BUILT, FITTED-UP AND STOCKED.

NOTHING gives a greater air of refinement to the small suburban garden than a well-built aviary, particularly if the remaining portion be planted with bright flowers. By far the most effective aviary is that which is planted with living trees and grass. The shape is immaterial, although I personally favour the "-X by 4ft. 6ins." type, with a height of about 8 feet. In this, birds can be driven into the shelter and cannot pass anyone in the aviary.

In making the outdoor flight the supports should be as unobtrusive as possible, and the appearance of a fowl-run should be avoided. One long beam may be used down the centre, and secured to the shelter with a bracket at one end and a post at the other. One post at each side at back is sufficient. The use of posts along the roof edges can be avoided by plaiting three strands of wire with an iron bar after they have been loosely secured to shelter and flight; the covering wire can be strung to these. The middle supports of the aviary shown in the photograph are the side lengths of a bedstead.

Keep off the Grass!

During the summer I fasten some wide boards under the flight roof at intervals of 4ft., fixing Hartz travelling cages and cocoanut husks under. This secures dry nesting sites, whatever the weather. The shelter is a transformed fowl-house, which was a bargain at the 7s. 6d. I paid for it. The window is where the door stood in the original structure, while the door is to be seen upon the outdoor portion. The false floor is still used, the under one being of cement, the inroads of vermin are thus prevented, while the birds are saved from an unsuitable floor.

The inner door pushes back. It is of little use to endeavour to grow grass close to the shelter door, as refuse and the continual trampling of feet when feeding the birds destroy it, in addition to which it is decidedly unpleasant to encounter wet grass on one's clean boots or slippers when feeding. I therefore dig the grass back for a yard or so, and fix a strip of garden edging across, and the remaining portion is covered to a moderate depth with sand. A good rustic fountain can be made by filling a cheese box with sand and cement, forming into shape, and burying in the ground. The box should, of course, be cut down to the requisite depth.

The Shrubs and the Flowers.

Protection from draughts is afforded by a couple of lengths of corrugated iron, and a 6in. board. The iron is let into the ground about 4in., and bricks laid lengthwise under it. This again "does the mice in." Some small perches fixed below this among the trees are much appreciated on a sunny, but windy day. The trees in the aviary greatly counteract the effect of the sun upon the iron. The large one at end is a syringa, and those along the back are Cuba laurel, tree campanula, euonymous, Arabian snowball flower, and St. John's Wort. The latter is a prolific bearer of pretty yellow flowers, and a Cordon nestling among these makes an effective picture. I always remove the flowers before the succeeding berries appear, although I do not know that they are injurious. The grass was dug from a piece of common land, and carried home in an old bath! It was set by saturating the ground with water, and then trampling the sections of turf in. It is much better than the sown grass, as the birds do not seem to be able to destroy this as they do the seed-sown grass.

The food vessels are generally kept in the shelter, but I find that some of my birds (chiefly those introduced when freshly caught) "lay out" practically all the fine weather; so for their benefit I have a couple of seed-boxes fixed under a protecting board.

Cuttlefish should always be placed out of the rain; the cheap "grips," universally sold, being as good as anything for securing it. Nesting material is best placed in racks; one intended for soap being useful for this purpose. A box of grit should never be omitted. Much of the damage done to aviary trees is, in my opinion, caused by the neglect to supply green food. This should be given in shallow vessels containing water. Groundsel, chickweed, various flowering grasses, bents, and other weeds are relished, as are also plantains, dandelion leaves (young), thistle and teazle heads; but these do not need to be placed in water. The receptacles should be taken away at night, as green food that has stood over a day is not a good thing for birds to feed on in the early part of the next morning.

The Giving of Banana—a Warning.

Apple and similar fruits should be on hand, and blackberries, raspberries, and currants are favoured. A piece of biscuit is also liked by many species. I have found that a banana, placed in the aviary for some foreigners, disagreed with a Bullie and a Chaffinch; so I would warn others as to its uses.

I have been told that the consumption of millet seed by Canaries produces asthma, but it does not seem to disagree with my own birds, two of which have free access to it. During the warm weather the birds remaining in the trees all night is apt to lead to trouble during bright moonlight, as I have known birds that can be picked from the perch during the day suddenly to become panic-stricken during the night, and dash against the wires of the aviary. I have never been able actually to ascertain the cause, but I suspect that possibly the distorted shape of some feline marauder may have been responsible. I know that a nervous bird will "set off" others, and the inmates of the aviary will "stampede" at next to nothing. The best way is to secrete oneself and discover the alarmist; then remove it to a cage indoors until it is sufficiently steady to enable you to make another attempt with it.

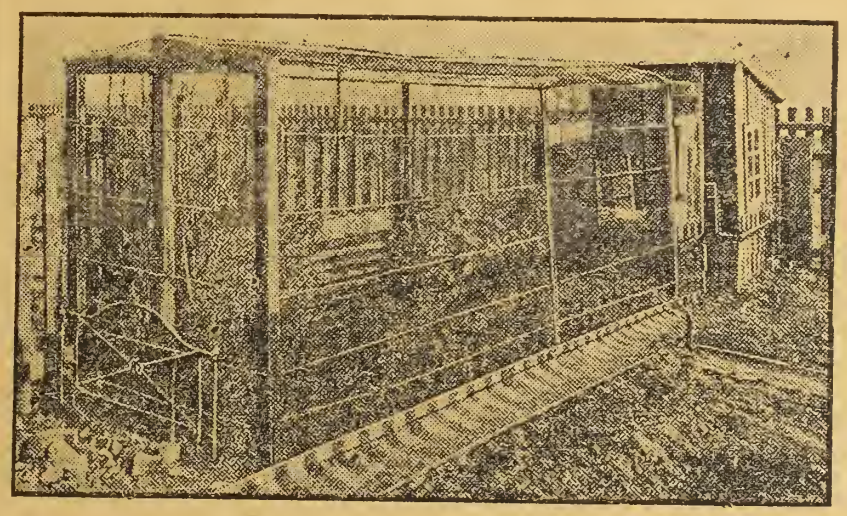
He Came Home Cured.

The cage may be hung out all night, if in a safe place. A Yellowhammer was facile princeps at the "rousing" game in an aviary I kept some five years ago, and as the "stampedes" ceased on his removal I made heroic attempts to quieten him, as he was of the finest colour I have ever seen. After steadying him in a large box cage (2ft. by 1ft. 6in. by 9in.) I sent him over 20 miles by rail to a friend, and here his cage was hung for varying periods in (1) a 6-horse stable, (2) beside a pigeon cote, (3) in a tall tree adjacent to a Rookery, (4) in the local blacksmith's shop. He came home cured, and is in a garden aviary at the present time!

The cat is a great burden to the suburban aviculturist, but I should strongly urge upon that long-suffering individual on no account to mete out to the creatures the death it so often heartily merits. If this is done, ill-feeling is engendered which adds difficulty to that already existent, while in addition, the cat may be as great a treasure to its doting owner as the most glorious specimen in a lovely collection. To fence against the cat takes some doing, but, if yours is a small garden, a length of wire about 2ft. high stretched along the fence-top (with a strong wire in the top of it) is often a good investment. In that case, of course, some large mesh wire should be nailed over the fence lower down. Where one possesses a good dog, a splendid plan is to place the wire round the garden beds, and permit the dog to roam around the paths during the night; the dog's presence will soon be a matter of indifference to the birds, while the cats will shun the garden as if it were infested with the ten plagues of Egypt!

Cost Not a Deterrent.

With regard to the cost of an aviary, unless of an elaborate design (which is quite unnecessary) its cost need on no account deter the would-be owner from participating in this most interesting phase of the enjoyable hobby of bird-keeping. The approximate cost of the subject of the photograph was:—Wire (2 rolls—1ft. wide 50yds. long), 17s. 6d.; strand wire, various thicknesses, 2s. 6d.; window (second-hand) 2s.; glass to replace broken panes, 6d.; posts at sides, 2s.; long beam for roof, 1s. 3d.; 2 lengths corrugated iron, 6s.; shelter house, 7s. 6d.; cement, 1s.; bricks (second-hand), 1s. 9d.; tar, 1s. 6d.; 6in. board at back, 1s. 10d.; i.e., £2 5s. in all. The outside flight is 18ft. by 4ft. 6ins. and 6ft. high; the house is 5ft. square, and 6ft. 6ins. high.



The Garden Aviary belonging to Mr. B. C. Briars.

THOUGH ERECTED AT A SMALL OUTLAY, IT IS A VERY USEFUL AND PRACTICAL TYPE OF AVIARY FOR FOREIGN AND BRITISH BIRDS.

The inmates are: Canaries (4), Siskins, Bullfinches, Twite, Goldfinch, and Spicebirds, Cordon Bleus, Lavender Finch, Weavers, Combassous, St. Helena, Orangecheek, Red-eared and Gold-breasted Waxbills, Bib Finches, Grass-finches, and Bengalese. I have carefully watched for any attempts at persecution by larger birds, but with the exception of the insignificant-looking Twite, which is prone to pursue smaller creatures, and the Grenadier Weaver, which is apt to monopolise the food vessel (even after satisfying itself) they all seem to live in perfect amity, while with the near approach of natural conditions, the pleasures of observing the birds in a spacious aviary lends added charm.

A Parrot Lover Chats About His Pets.

In the later nineties I acquired a male Blossom-head (Palaeornis cyanocephalus), and although his plumage was beautiful in a way, he proved stupid and uninteresting as a pet, so I parted with him. These old-world Parrots, forming the tribe Palaeorni-Thinae, and inhabiting the Indian and Malayan regions, are no doubt intelligent, but they seem to me to be lacking in charm and grace, and I have consequently never invested in any other species. About the same time I bought of a London dealer a pair of rare Conures, of which I failed to discover the scientific name. They distinguished themselves by escaping from the house they lived in out of doors, and in desperation I watched them flying, close together, round some of my fields, perhaps thirty feet up in the air. Although a rustic, scaring birds in a neighbouring field, emptied both his barrels at them to no purpose, I found them a little later on, clinging, safe and sound, to the wire-netting of the house they had been living in.

The Itch of Acquisitiveness.

In 1899 I noted from an advertisement in the "Bazaar," that Mr. H. J. Fulljames was selling off his noted stock of foreign birds, and I still possess the price list which he sent me. Among the items it contained were a Hyacinthine Macaw, great winner, for £25; a Princess of Wales' Parrakeet for £40; a pair of Ganga Cockatoos for £10, Blood-stained Cockatoo, very rare, £5; a Bronze-winged Parrot, rare, finger-tame, a fine specimen, £5; a Meyer's Parrot, in fine condition, very rare, £3; and many other deeply interesting birds. Unfortunately I, like my esteemed brother of the cloth (whose wit, alas! is quite inimitable!) the Rev. C. D. Farrar, am always itching to buy rare birds, which are quite beyond my purse, so after much excited cogitation, I determined on the comparatively cheap, but very rare, Meyer's Parrot.

Of the bargain I then made I have never since repented, for "Bessie" has turned out a most affectionate and lovable friend, moults regularly with much facility, and whenever shown under competent judges, come out very near the top of her class. Her first appearance was with her late lamented husband at the Crystal Palace, in 1897, when all other competitors were placed below them. This species has a blackish-brown ground colour, with patches of brightest yellow on the head and wings, whilst the breast is of a vivid emerald hue. A small bird, not much larger, but thicker, than a Blackbird, it is a member of the genus Poeocephalus, frequenting Africa. To this genus also belong the Senegal and Jardine's Parrot, both of which are most delightful cage-birds, but unfortunately they do not reach us in any considerable numbers. Bessie is fond of bathing herself, even in the coldest weather, and is never happy unless she is allowed to come and sit on my shoulder at breakfast and at tea, at each of which meals she is allowed a lump of sugar, broken up into pieces about the size of a pea, and, if I am slack in offering her a supply, she gives my ear an unmistakable tweak. She is now about 20 years old, twelve of which she has spent in the bleak climate of Eastern Anglia, far away, and far different from her native land—

"Where Afric's sunny fountains
Pour down their golden sand."

The Great Secret of Success.

This article has, I fear, already run to such considerable length that I must not now tarry to describe or comment on the other Parrots I have kept, including the Purple-capped Lory (a handsome bird, but noisy), the Cuban or White-headed Parrot (like all the Amazons, sluggish but tractable), Brown's Parrakeet (red blue, and lemon, with graceful pencillings), Everett's Parrot (of uniform yellow green, sedate, but very rare), and sundry others. But I may say this—that I believe the great secret of success with Parrots is plenty of fresh air (both indoors and out), a varied diet, including canary, millet (especially spray), hemp, oats, sunflower, nuts, budding boughs, seed-heads of marigold, and of hard-heads, shepherd's purse, apple-pips, and, last but not least, a little gentle exercise in the shape of a fly round the room every day, if possible. Do not coddle them, but talk to them and make real friends of them, and they will respond in such a way as to make you think that they are the most accomplished and delightful members of all the feathered tribe.

The Black Swan.

From Australia we get one bird added to our domesticated races—the Black Swan. When first introduced it was thought it would not succeed, as it nested in January, but now it has accommodated itself to our seasons, and breeds at the usual time.

Rooks During Severe Weather.

Rooks are well-known to be general feeders, and during the recent severe weather were seen in one district chasing small birds, and even Blackbirds and Thrushes had to scuttle for their lives. No doubt during prolonged frost, when small birds are weak, Rooks could easily catch them.

Correspondence.

A Bullfinch Wearing a Rubber Ring.

Sir,—A cock Bullfinch was caught in this district (Horley, Surrey) with a rubber ring on its leg. There was no mark visible, as the ring was perished, and had been pulled about when I saw it. There was a flat portion where no doubt it was marked. If it was put on to mark the bird, it would be interesting to know if any of your readers have seen birds marked the same way. J. WHITE.

Carnarvon 1912 Open Show.

Sir,—In your issue of Feb. 3, under "Twitterings," we read that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe is judging an open show at Carnarvon on August Bank Holiday. Is this show the North Wales Cage Bird Society's open show for 1912? If so, we members don't know about it, as we have had no general meeting, although the Secretary was asked by letter to call one on Boxing Day last, when practically all members were at Carnarvon the whole day, and a meeting could easily have been held. Will the Secretary please let us know whether he received the letter; also is a general meeting to be called to select the Committee for 1912 and carry business through?

Palace Winning Skylarks at Five and Five Pence Each.

An Incident at the Late Show.

Sir,—Allow me through the columns of your widely read paper, to thank the Manager of the Crystal Palace Show, Mr. Ramsden, for his great kindness and courtesy. By a clerical error I filled in the price of my exhibits in the Skylark class at five shillings and fivepence each, but intended this for five guineas. The birds were naturally soon claimed, and I would have lost them but for the kindness of the Manager. Both were returned me in faultless condition. Also allow me to thank the gentleman who claimed my birds for giving them up. Such sportsmanlike treatment of exhibitors cannot be made too widely known. A. C. ALLAWAY.

Bird Shows in the Potteries.

A Suggestion for Novice Competitions.

Sir,—I see that we are having another Society in the Potteries—at Burslem. I think this makes five. I wish Mr. L. James, Sec., and his members every success. I should like to make a suggestion, the same to be an annual affair, i.e., that the Novice Norwich members (let the Yorkies look after themselves, also the pros.) of the five societies join together and show their birds at each show, as if they were members, in members' classes. I think there are about 60 members and if they would each subscribe 1s., making £3, it would buy a nice cup value about £2 for the novice member getting most points at all the shows, also a 15s. gold medal for 2nd most points, and a 5s. silver medal for 3rd most points. I think this would help to fill the shows and make the Novice more enthusiastic. They would also be able to gain experience before launching out among the pro's. I should like to hear what the Novice members think or if they could suggest something else.

The Redwing: How to Procure and Keep it in Captivity.

Sir,—The Redwing, or, as it is sometimes called, the Wind Thrush, is one of our winter migrants, and can be seen about the fields generally in flocks. It is a native of Norway and Sweden, where it breeds; but I knew some years ago of a nest being found in England. The bird is much like a small Thrush, but under its wings is a rusty red, which no doubt it takes its name from. These birds have no song to speak of, and are but seldom kept in cages; but now and then one is placed on the show bench. I have in my time caught a good many; also shot hundreds in the sharp weather when the snow was deep on the ground and food scarce; in fact, the flocks of these birds were very large some twenty years ago. They have not been no numerous about Ramsay of late years. During the time the snow was on the ground in January small flocks were seen. It is very seldom that any are caught now; or even shot for pies, etc., as they used to be years ago. As time goes on, and as all kinds of British birds have been taken on by fanciers, the day is not far distant in my humble opinion that at our leading shows classes will be given for most kinds of our native birds. It does seem quite astonishing what CAGE BIRDS has done for all classes in educating them and helping them to keep all rare kinds of our native and migratory birds. We now only want the classes at our shows to further yet more the keeping of all kinds as the hobby is not only interesting, but instructive—especially so for children, and classes should be given at most shows for these, if only for educational purposes. Now these birds would make very desirable pets for children, as they are very hardy, and can be kept out of doors in any cage made out of a box, with only a wire front. They must be kept out of draughts. The food which you give the Thrush or Blackbird would suit them very well indeed. They are very fond of bathing, so it would be as well to use plenty of sawdust at the cage bottom to keep them clean. As they do not breed in England, there would be no chance to hand-rear them; you would have to depend upon the catcher to get you one, which could be procured for a few pence. I have found them to be very hardy birds indeed, for I have kept one for over ten years merely as a pet. The keeping of such hardy birds gives young beginners encouragement, as the birds stand a lot of rough treatment, and are not likely to die, as some of the more tender birds are; not that I wish them to receive any bad treatment, but I do know that young beginners soon get sick of birds if any die, although it is their own fault. If, however, they are successful, it encourages them to take up other kinds and so blossom out into good fanciers. These few lines are written for the encouragement of the young, and as this is the season when these birds visit us, and are easily caught, one or two can easily be procured. NIMROD.

The Catching of Robins.

Sir,—In reply to "Yorkshire," for his benefit I would like to pass on this simple, inexpensive and very reliable trap. "Yorkshire" would first require to procure three slates and a half (ordinary blue house slates about 10in. long by five and a half inches broad); also three small pieces of wood. Make a pin about 7in. by ⅜in. diameter, also make one about 2½in. by 1-16in. thick by ⅜in. broad; the other one may be anything from 2½in. to 3in. long by ¼in. diameter. Under a hedge in the garden, where Robins are chiefly to be found, make a hole and fix in two slates for sides; make the half-slate the front. These must be flush with the surface of the ground, and made firm. Then fix in the 7in. pin about the depth of half a slate; then the other two pins and the slate for the lid (make this slate the heaviest one, as on this entirely depends the action of the trap). This completes the trap. Bread crumbs or anything are suitable for bait, and of course must be placed inside. Whenever Mr. Robin alights on the protruding pin he is caught unawares. The accompanying diagram explains the whole working of the trap. A to B is 2½in. or 3in. by ¼in. diameter (to be determined by height of slate, which must not be too high); B to C, 2½in. by ⅜in. by 1-16in.; and B to D, 7in. by ⅜in. diameter. I may mention that when I was a boy I caught all the Robins I wanted with this simple contrivance. I am a constant reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. JAMES POUSTIE.

Egg-Flake and the Rearing of Young Birds.

Sir,—Will any fancier tell me if they have tried Egg Flake at 1s. 3d., per lb; as obtained at the bird shops? Will this egg food rear young birds from the shell without anything else added to it—just given in a dry state? Has any fancier had good results from its use? ERNEST FOLKARD.

A Little Auk Captured in Huntingdonshire.

Sir,—On Jan. 25 a gent asked me to identify a bird which was caught in a fen dyke in Ramsey Hollow. It proved to be a very fine specimen of the Little Auk. It was in good condition and in beautiful plumage. It was seen in the dyke and caused some trouble before it could be caught as it kept diving. It is very rare that this bird comes so far inland. No doubt it was driven by the gales from its Northern home. It is now being set up by a naturalist. I have heard speak of one taken in this district some years ago, after some strong weather. We often get some rare birds in the Fen districts, but they are soon taken in some way or shot. A Hoopoe was shot some time ago near the town. NIMROD.

The Sea Gulls Have a "Bad Time."

Two Marked Birds Found.

Sir,—During the recent spell of severe weather the Sea Gulls appear to have had a bad time judging by the numbers in the fields here (Southampton). I found one, a small brown Gull, dead, apparently starved, with a ring on its leg marked (Museum Leiden 644) and another of the same species got caught in a net set for small birds. That also had a ring, marked, Witherby, High Holborn, London. This one of course I released none the worse for being examined. J. HAYTER.

The Secrecy of the Ballot.

Sir,—I must thank you, Mr. Editor, for publishing my last letter. Since then I have received a communication from Mr. Holley, which I think the members should know of. I sent a requisition, duly signed, to Mr. Holley to summon a general meeting for the purpose of preventing anyone from opening ballot papers, also to appoint two auditors. I enclose you, Mr. Editor, Mr. Holley's reply; which is as follows:—"At a meeting of the Council of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, held on Thursday, 1st February, the requisition sent in by you for a special meeting to consider a resolution in reference to the handling of voting papers prior to annual meeting was considered. It was resolved by the Council to put the matter on the minutes of the meeting, as a resolution, which was carried, the secretary being instructed not to open any ballot papers marked as such. Your reference to the appointment of auditors was entirely uncalled for as the rules of the Society govern this matter." I wish now to ask Mr. Holley the following questions: 1. Does Rule VIII. of the Society bind him to call a special general meeting when applied for by a requisition duly signed by six members? What was the reason that the meeting I applied for was not summoned? 2. Is it not a fact that up to the time Mr. Holley received my requisition no auditors were appointed? Still Mr. Holley says my reference to the appointing of auditors was uncalled for. I have just received a copy of the Balance Sheet for last year and I notice that it only contains the signature of one auditor. I am sure that Mr. Holley will explain to the members.

J. R. HYLAND.

Sir,—The members of the Yorkshire C. and C.B.S. of Ireland—and the requisitionists for a special general meeting in particular—will be pleased to know that their Council, in meeting assembled, on the 1st February unanimously passed a resolution as follows: "The seal of any envelope marked 'Ballot Paper' received by the Hon. Secretary shall not be broken by him, only by the Scrutineers appointed at the annual general meeting." I think this action on the part of the Council should meet the requirements of the critical situation.

Where Beginners often Beat "Old Hands."

The "Luck" of the Hybrid Breeder.

Sir,—A few lines on this subject at this time of the year may be the means of starting some beginners in this the most fascinating of all cage bird breeding—i.e., according to the writer's opinion, for I have always had a great interest in this most uncertain hobby. Let me encourage the young hands by telling them quite straight that they can often beat the old hands, and those who know the most and have been the longest tryers at the game. There is, of course, science to be used in Mule and Hybrid breeding, but most generally it is "luck" which you require, with, of course, patience as well. But a young beginner, even at the first time of asking, can accomplish what it has taken older hands years to do. Now, as the season is approaching when all kinds of wild birds will be taken, those who live in towns can go to the dealer's and make their selection or they can get some from the catchers. Your outlay need not be much for either a cock Greenfinch and hen Bullfinch, as the pair can be bought for 1s. 6d. Then with a cage made by yourself out of a good-sized box, either with a ready-made wire front or one you have made yourself (the thing is done quite easily and cheaply), a good Hybrid may be produced worth perhaps pounds. If you do not know how to go on with them or manage them, as the season comes on either ask the Editor of CAGE BIRDS what to do—he will most readily answer any question in the columns of that paper or write a letter for information on the subject. And there are books and booklets published by CAGE BIRDS which would soon put anyone on the right path. Only just think that a young beginner might breed a Palace winner for 1s. 6d. from two of our most common birds. If you would like to spend a few more shillings and buy another pair, a cock Siskin and hen Bullie, and should be fortunate enough to raise a bird, you would have a very rare and interesting Hybrid indeed, and one which, I believe, as yet has not been produced. Another very good and rare Hybrid, and oh, so cheap! would be from the Redpoll and hen Bullie, but the Lesser Redpoll would have to be used. Both of these would not cost more than 1s. 6d.—i.e., if the British birds were used. I should not advise any young beginner to use the foreign Bullfinches or Goldfinches, because they are more expensive and would take more management. The produce, of course, would be larger and more valuable, but the result would be more uncertain, as the writer has never found the foreigner such a ready breeder. After you have tried one or more pairs of these cheap [illegible] other crosses might be tried when you have gained the experience in managing them during the breeding season. If a pair of these birds were procured and put together at once, they would get on friendly terms with one another, or they might be kept apart in the same room, so that they could see and hear each other, and if no other birds of their species were in the room they would soon begin to answer and talk (in their ways) to each other. From one single pair only you might stand a good chance. Now, when you have the eggs from the Bullie, it is, of course, best to place them under hen Canaries, so as to make more certain of their being hatched. I hope these few lines will be the means of several young hands starting in this hobby. This would also equally apply to young hands who have just started with Canaries. HYBRID.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER. Especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Proposed New Society for Thornton Heath and District.

Sir,—Will fanciers who think of joining, communicate with me at 44, Frant Road, Thornton Heath, so that a meeting may be called at an early date to consider the formation of the above? Will members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE in Thornton Heath and Croydon also communicate with me as early as possible.

A Roller Canary Club for Blackpool, Fylde and District.

Sir,—A general meeting was called at the Raiki Hall Hotel, Blackpool with the object of drawing Roller fanciers together, to form, if possible, a Roller Canary Club, and I am pleased to say that the object was achieved. There will be another meeting on March 5th, when I hope to enrol more members. At present there are six; not many but a good start.

Does the L. and P.O.S. Need Waking Up?

Sir,—Does the L. and P.O.S.. need waking up? This question was asked recently and I would reply yes—most emphatically yes. I called at the Palace show for a friend's birds on Tuesday evening, and found most of the members of the L. and P.O.S., conspicuous by their absence. Balance sheets of the society prove that the national shows are run at a profit for their benefit. They therefore get both honour and profit. The least members can do in return is to attend at the close of their shows to see the valuable specimens entrusted to their care are properly packed for the return journey. A few officials of the L. and P.O.S., were in attendance, doing their best to superintend a crowd of hired labourers. I hope these remarks will be noted by those members of the L. and P.O.S., who have not yet recognised that they have a duty to perform, both to their society and to exhibitors.

A CANDID FRIEND.

A Useful Early Green Food and How to Obtain it.

Sir,—For a green food for early use, and especially so for fanciers living in towns where they cannot easily get a good supply of young and tender green food to hand just when they want it most, an old plan of mine will be found very useful. This I used over twenty years ago, when unable to get either dandelion or chickweed. Take a large shallow dish, and cover the bottom with cole seeds or winter rape. Then just cover it with water, which will cause it to sprout readily. When sprouted about one inch, or even less, you can then dig out a little, and with seed, roots, and tops, chop it up with the egg food, which then becomes a very tasty food, and is readily eaten by all birds. This will also help to bring them into condition, and I have found it also a good preventative of egg-binding in the early spring. It might also be sown in boxes and slightly covered over with soil like mustard and cress, and kept in a warm place.

OLD BREEDER.

The Weather and the Crystal Palace Show.

An Exhibitor's Thanks for the Excellent Management.

Sir,—During nearly a score of years in which I have visited the annual national show at the Crystal Palace, I have experienced many and various kinds of weather, but for a real sample of the Arctic regions the recent show holds the record so far as we are concerned, for, according to the daily papers, London has not undergone such a severe cold snap for forty-five years, and I can well believe it. Some seventeen years ago we had it pretty sharp, and I well remember one keen fancier wrapping up his birds in blankets and lining the van conveying them to the Palace with hot water bottles! There is something about the idea of a win at the Palace that draws, and will continue to draw entries until the end of time, but a more unsuitable place to hold a cage bird show at this season of the year, under the present penurious circumstances, would be difficult to find. At one time the managers of the Palace could afford to have the cage bird show held in a huge marquee. the canvas sides and top of which afforded every protection from draughts. Then the whole of the Palace was heated, and the place generally was comfortable and suitable. Now the show is held in a dark place where it is sometimes difficult to get a proper view of the birds, and the present conditions allow the wind to come in. Small wonder that the Palace has lost its popularity with exhibitors of tropical birds, and that the classes for foreigners were so badly filled—even the hardy Britishers felt the exceptional severity of the weather. When I wended my way to the show on the Monday morning it was with a very heavy heart. I expected at every step to meet some friend who would tell me all my birds were dead, and, much to my surprise and delight, I found them all very much alive and none the worse for their terrible experience with the weather. The show manager for the L. and P.O.S., Mr. J. W. Ramsden, was to be thanked for this. From the moment we unpacked the birds till the close of the show he gave us every possible assistance, and allowed us many privileges for which we are extremely grateful, the result being that my exhibits, including such delicate living jewels as the Indian Sunbirds, Dartford Warbler, and others are, if anything, in better form than when they went to the show; all are in full song, and not a feather has gone wrong. I tender Mr. Ramsden and his able stewards and attendants my heartfelt and sincere thanks for their courtesy and conscientious treatment of each and every exhibit. The two huge hot-water pipes inside the show enclosure were kept as hot as it was possible to make them, and nothing was left undone which they were able to do under the circumstances for the comfort of exhibit and exhibitor alike.

JOHN FROSTICK.

Late Entries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Rnkin, permit me to state that no late entries were taken; those arriving Monday were the last to be accepted. In the Lizard Section I had eleven entries in one class and nine in the other, which means that full prize-money was paid and a loss suffered. Had I accepted late entries therein, I should hardly have been likely to have refused Mr. Rnkin's, for the acceptance of his entry money would naturally have reduced the loss sustained upon these classes. It is true that "A" and "B" entries (two) appeared in one class, but this was solely due to a clerical error in posting this exhibitor's birds from his entry form. I might add, Mr. Editor, that your representative has always been in the habit of calling upon me on the Tuesday to obtain full details of the entry (for publication in CAGE BIRDS of the same week), and he has then always found the birds numbered up ready for the catalogue to be placed in the printer's hands.

J. W. RAMSDEN, Show Manager.

Roller Canaries at the Palace Show.

An Explanation by the Judge.

Sir,—I feel it my duty to put the true facts before the Roller Fancy and show them that we were mislead when we were told that the birds would be judged in a "lavatory.' I was told that the birds were judged in the same room last year, and it is a splendid room for judging. The only drawback (if it can be called one) is that they have to be judged by artificial light. We all know that in any room artificial light has to be used at the latter part of the day and then some of the birds have the advantage of being judged by daylight and the rest by gaslight, which gives one lot of birds the advantage over the others. So you see in this room all birds were on equal terms. I think Mr. Ramsden must have given strict orders that no one had to come in, as I was not disturbed. I can only say that anyone who has seen the room will agree with me that they saw no signs of the "lavatory." Now, as regards the birds being staged in the open show, I have an open mind; but if it is allowed at one show why not at another? I have been told by several that the Rollers at the Club Show can hear the other birds, if they don't see them. So there is no difference. I must also, sir, thank you for your report of the B.R.C.C.. meeting, as it was the first news I had of what took place. I was a bit surprised to see the hon. sec. taking the very unusual course of moving propositions when there were plenty of members present.

Apologies.

In Re L. & P.O.S , and Norris and others.

Feb. 9th., 1912.

Dear Sirs,—With reference to the letter written by me to the Roller Canary Journal in January last, I find I was in error in stating that the birds would be judged in a lavatory, which I find is incorrect. I also understand that other arrangements were made by the Manager of the show with which I was not acquainted at the time I wrote such letter, and am sorry if any expressions therein contained caused damage to the show or annoyance to the managers, and apologise for having used them.—Yours faithfully (Signed), J. W. Norris.

The Managers, Great National Cage Bird Show, Crystal Palace.

Feb. 9, 1912.

We having now satisfied ourselves that the statements in the Roller Canary Journal of January, 1912, contained in a letter signed by J. W. Norris, in regard to the accommodation of the Roller Canary Section at the Great National Cage Bird Show at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, are incorrect, we therefore unreservedly withdraw the same, and regret if any inconvenience has been caused to the managers of the show.—(Signed) P. Slade, Chas. H. Lowe (for Lowe, Aston and Co.).

No. 567.
Sent by Mr. W. Tolson, 1, Vuleen Road, Dewsbury.

Enclosed please find illustrated a cage front with extra head hole (for colour-feeding or separate seed diet) fixed at the end of perch. I find it a very usefnl idea for colour-feeding of young birds by putting a water tin on the cross bar. It is easy to remove to refill with-ont frightening the birds or disturbing the hen from her nest. It also saves soft food as the young birds cannot get their feet into it and dirty the perches. It is easy to fix. Get an extra "Bob-Hole." Cut about 1 in. of the wire; insert "Bob-Hole" and solder. I think some of your readers will find it beneficial at all times, as it does away with opening the cage door and having to put soft food glass through the wires.—W. Tolson.

No 568.
A Training Device for Yorkshires.
Sent by E. Humphries, Stockland Green, Speldhurst.

When training Yorkshires for the show bench, I find it useful to make a box, as shown in the sketch, on which I fix three of the removable wire-tops from Yorkshire show cages. I use quarter-inch wood, except for the partitions A and B, which are half-inch. It is 8½in. long and 8¾in. from front to back. This box bottom can easily be cleaned out, and by its use the bottoms of the show-cages do not get dirtied.—E. Humphries.

A Proposed Roller Canary Club for Scotland.

Sir,—All Scottish Roller fanciers able to be in Glasgow on Saturday, Feb. 24, are invited to attend a meeting to be held at Neilson's Temperance Hotel, 83, Ingram Street, Glasgow, at six o'clock, when it is hoped that the foundations may be laid of a Scottish Roller Canary Club. There will be a few Rollers at the meeting. If those interested, but unable to come to the meeting will communicate with me I shall be pleased to send them all particulars of the proposed club.

A. FORREST.

An Open Letter to Members of "Cage Birds League."

Fellow members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE: It is a far cry from this hurrying, bustling twentieth century back to the Creation, but I would like for a moment to carry your minds backwards as far as that epoch. Man was given dominion over the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air and the fish of the sea, and he was endowed with intelligence to use that dominion aright. That, fellow members, is as much the charter of the Bird Fancier as it is of the highest in the realm to shoot tigers, pheasants or other wild creatures, or of the Humanitarian to eat his Lark pie. The great matter is to use that dominion with intelligence and with common sense, and not to abuse it. In course of time, man has framed laws defining what we all must do in carrying out his mandate, and unfortunately the more recent legislation in this country (partly through the supineness of those most interested) has been badly tainted by maudlin sentimentality, so that it is necessary for fanciers to bestir themselves and see that legislation is put on a commonsense basis. The Lord Chief Justice, in his recent decision, interpreted the "unintelligible" laws to mean that the Humanitarians (who consist chiefly of old women of both sexes, blessed with more money than common sense) can still have their Larks caught and killed and sent to London for pies, but that the bird dealer cannot bring into London a single newly-caught bird, although it may have been quite legally caught. Why? Because, presumably, it is cruel. Since that decision the Humanitarians have even had the effrontery to argue that a man cannot send a bird to London for six months after it has been legally taken in the country, but in this contention they have overreached themselves, for they lost their case in which they sought to establish this doctrine, and were mulcted in costs. Fellow fanciers, we abominate cruelty as much as the humanitarian or any one, and one object of our LEAGUE is to improve bird shops, and steps are being taken to this end, and we contend that deer hunting, fox hunting, hare coursing, for sport, and so on are more cruel than keeping birds contented and in perfect health for years. The laws are not God-made but man-made, and it is clear that the humanitarians have no consideration for the large body of agriculturists whose crops are spoiled by the over preservation of destructive birds; no consideration for the workman from the country, who, in the town, wishes to have a bird as a cheap companion, the attending to which has a tendency to keep him out of the public house; no consideration for the effecient bird catchers, the bird-shop keepers, the sellers of seeds and other requisites, all diligent workers in the community who are earning a small but in most cases an honest livelihood from their work; no consideration for the poor invalid in the back street whose burden might be lightened by listening to the song of a neighbour's Lark—Indeed their policy reminds one of the very true lines of the poet.

CANARY QUERIES.

A Cure for Asthma.

Beeston.—Surely you must have seen remedies in these columns almost every week for months past, and also some in the correspondence columns? Asthma is more easily prevented by correct treatment than cured. Cure by drugs and nostrums, though useful enough to help the system to throw off the attack, is rarely very satisfactory once the disease has got a firm hold. The first step must always be to remove all causes by keeping bird in a well-ventilated place with plenty of fresh pure air, but quite free from cold draughts, extremes of heat and cold, damp, or fumes from burning lights. They should be kept in a bright and cosy place, but not necessarily very warm. If these simple rules were observed from the beginning asthma would rarely occur, unless birds were predisposed to it by breeding. When these points have been duly attended to, and a suitable diet given, as frequently detailed here, if the case is mild give first a mild aperient for one or two days, and afterwards twenty drops of whiskey, five each of ipecacuanha wine, and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together, two days in every three for a week or so. In obstinate cases, instead of the latter mixture get a chemist to mix you two drams each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, one dram each of chlorodyne and chloric æther, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Give 15 drops of this in the water every second day for a fortnight, then miss a week, and give again for another fortnight; and so on as long as is necessary.

Wheezing and Soft Moult.

Ignoramus.—(1) The fact that your birds generally become wheezy after you have had them a short time is sufficient proof that your kitchen is scarcely a suitable place for them. You are quite correct in thinking that if suitable remedies are offered at the very beginning of the trouble there would be a fair chance of getting them right again, but would it not be far better to go a little farther and adopt suitable measures of prevention, and thus dispense with the beginnings of the trouble? See reply to "Beeston" and follow that advice. (2) So many of your birds going into soft moult is evidence that the place is faulty. In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw every second day, and give also on these days a pinch of hemp. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of summer rape and a morsel of banana. In the water give a mild aperient for one day, and afterwards six drops tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight or so. You will find this subject more fully dealt with in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL just issued. Your feeding might be better. Add a little rape every second day, a little egg-food, sponge cake, or bread and milk, once or twice a week, a pinch of mixed seed as often, and a little fruit or green-stuff three or four times a week.

MATE FOR BORDER (Mate).—You ought to have said what marks the hen possesses and whether they are heavy or light marks. If she is rather heavily marked, mate her with a clear yellow pink-eyed cock, bred of a marked strain. If she is lightly marked, and especially if she has very small eye-marks, mate her to a yellow cock, also with light eye-marks, again bred from even-marked birds, with Cinnamon markings. Do not under any circumstances mate her with a green bred cock. It would totally defeat your object.

EGG-FOOD SUBSTITUTE (C. H. H.). I have dealt with this subject in article in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. The food you name is, I believe, very good, and I also believe many fanciers have succeeded in rearing young from the shell upon it without the aid of the orthodox egg-food; therefore, I see no reason why you should not be equally successful, especially as your old birds are very fond of it. This is all I can say, as I have not myself attempted to bring up young from the shell solely upon it, though I have used it in other ways, such as a substitute for egg-food out of the breeding season, etc. One word of advice I would give you: If you adopt it solely for the breeding season, get your supply direct, then you will be sure it is fresh.

SONG TOO LOW (K. A. I.).—I suppose you are quite satisfied about the sex. Personally I should be a little doubtful. In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of sponge cake moistened with four or five drops of sherry and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed, every third day. On the alternating days give first a leaf of dandelion if obtainable in good condition, or, otherwise, a spray of watercress or morsel of banana, and next a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle. Mix together in a warm galipot a tablespoonful of pure honey, a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, as much chlorate of potash as will lie on a shilling, the same quantity of grain of paradise, and a sprinkling of maw, and make into a soft paste with a little finely-powdered biscuit. When cold, cut off a piece and stick in the wires for the bird to peck at when it likes. Continue this treatment for a month.

KEEPING MICE OUT OF CAGES (Rodents).—You mis-read my reply a few week ago on this subject; I certainly did not mean to imply it is an easy matter to prevent mice getting into cages, but rather the reverse. Now you have got rid of the mice your best plan is to search out every hole you can find and fill it up with cement in which you have mixed a little finely-broken glass or china. Keep walls as smooth as possible—if paper is used it should be of the smooth sanitary kind—and keep surface of the skirting board painted and varnished quite smoothly. Around each leg or support of the rack secure closely a piece of tin or zinc four inches wide, the lower edge about three or four inches above the floor. That no curtains or other draperies hang near, or overhang, cages. If the room is used solely as bird-room, you could quite prevent mice climbing wall by nailing a strip of tin or zinc three inches wide to the top of the skirting board, and then bending it to point downwards at an angle of forty-five degrees.

WHICH MATE (White Star).—It depends upon what you would like to breed. If you want to try for Mules then mate the Yorkshire hen with the Linnet. They should make a suitable pair. But if you want to get young Canaries there is nothing for it but to mate hen with the buff Yorkshire cock. A marked or ticked yellow cock would be more suitable than the buff, but as you have no other, there is no choice, unless your replaced him through a sale or exchange.

BRINGING CINNAMONS INTO CONDITION (C.B.L. Member).—Yes, feed and treat the Cinnamons generally just the same as the Norwich and you will not go wrong. I take you are now beginning to supplement the diet of canary and rape with a little mixed seed about twice a week, egg-food ditto, and a spray of green food when obtainable in good condition, as detailed in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. If not, begin to do so at once.

DIARRHOEA (A Young Beginner).—You should have said how you fed the bird. Get the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary," and see that you are correct in this way. See that all foods and water are perfectly sound and sweet, and vessels quite clean. In addition to staple of plain canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape daily. Every second day a morsel of banana and a pinch of maw, and on the alternate days a pinch each of hemp and crushed dry plain biscuit. Give no green stuff at present. If this is not soon effectual, add six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of tincture of opium to the water for two or three consecutive days.

WHICH RING (G.M.O.).—As a safe and permanent mark and index to a bird's pedigree, the closed ring is undoubtedly much the best. In some cases, as Rollers intended for contests, the closed ring is essential. Mistakes are apt to arise when open rings are used by misplacing them when they are removed for any purpose. Closed rings should be put on when the young are from 7 to 9 days old—the larger breeds at the earlier age, and the smaller ones at the later age. Full particulars and illustration of method of ringing are given in Part viii. of "Our Canaries."

QUIET BIRDS (W. T. Blair).—It is quite possible there may be nothing more serious the matter with the two birds in question than the weight of a few extra winters, which generally curtail the restless activity of youth more or less. In addition to the staple seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and four of sherry mixed in it, and sprinkled with equal parts of maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seeds every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet, and either a morsel of banana, or a leaf of dandelion, if procurable. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. Continue above diet for two or three weeks as may seem necessary.

COLOUR-FEEDING IN NEST (Hillsboro').—(1) If properly done, using only pure sweet tasteless pepper and not given in excess, I do not think there is the least bit more risk of the young dying when they are so fed from the nest. I should, however, consider it quite sufficient to begin feeding at, say, five or six days old. But, upon the whole, there is now so little to be gained that I should scarcely recommend feeding from the nest. (2) You would find this question fully dealt with in Part V. of "Our Canaries." In addition to the staple of plain Canary seed give half a teaspoonful of rape every second day. Twice a week on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of egg-food, and on three other days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and millet, with a sprinkling of linseed and teazle. If the birds seem backward at the end of this month give the rape and egg-food, the latter sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, both on same day, and the mixed seeds on every alternate day, and add a leaf of dandelion daily. There needs no tonic, unless birds were really out of condition from ill-health.

WASH FOR BREEDING CAGES (Breeding Cage).—I take it you mean a purifying or disinfectant wash. A fairly strong carbolic solution, such as two teaspoonfuls of Jeyes' Fluid or fzal, in a pint of water, is as good as anything, and most simple to use. It can be applied quite freely, and the birds returned to cages as soon as they are dry. It is purely a matter of personal taste whether you leave them in the bare wood, or paint or distemper them afterwards. I prefer seeing them with a pale tint inside—electric green for choice, though sky blue is a very popular shade. A hard drying enamel paint, which is not too glossy, or one of the water paints, or sanitary distemper, are the best dressings. After using these you must see that the cages are thoroughly dry before returning the birds.

ONE COCK WITH TWO HENS (J.F.).—It is quite a simple matter to run one cock with two hens. On the whole, I prefer the hens to be in single breeding cages, as when in adjoining compartments of a double breeding cage the hens are sometimes too much distracted with each other. But if you have only the double breeders, it will serve the purpose well enough. Keep the wood slide in, and one hen in each compartment. The cock must be kept in a separate cage until they are quite ready to mate. Then mate him first with one hen, and when she has laid and commenced to sit, remove cock and mate him with the other. When this hen has commenced to sit, remove cock and cage him separately again until the first hen is ready to go to nest for the second brood. Then repeat the process. The hens are left to hatch and rear the broods by themselves. If both are equally forward at same time, run the cock with each for one half of each day until both have gone to nest.

DIFFICULTY IN PERCHING, ETC. (R. T. Wyn).—(1) See that the perches are kept scrupulously clean, and of a convenient size for the bird to grip. Bathe the feet and shanks for a few minutes daily in a lukewarm solution of extract of Wych Hazel—say a small teaspoonful of the extract in a teacupful of warm water. After bathing, dry gently, and anoint sparingly with zinc ointment. Continue this for a week, and if not then well, write again. (2) For treatment of wheezy hen see reply to "Beeston" in this or last week's issue. It is interesting to know she hatched four strong birds last season, but it would be much more so to hear if and at what age these youngsters, if still living, develop the same symptoms. I cannot advise you to continue breeding with her unless she is quite cured.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Getting Goldie into Condition.

New Reader, Coventry.—I dealt with this matter only about a week ago; it is now quite a familiar topic. Don't forget that the Goldie is naturally a late breeder, May generally being the month he selects to "keep house" in. House-moulted birds come into breeding condition earlier than those in field plumage. Feed your bird on the following seed mixture—Teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower, safflower and summer rape half-part each. The sunflower and safflower I crack lightly by passsing them through a seed-crushing machine. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit" for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible). They will breed, however, even if the beak is not quite clear; I have had plenty do so.

MEALWORM BREEDING (C. B.).—I dealt fully with this (as doubtless you would note) in last week's issue.

IDENTITY OF BIRD (Lincolnshire Lad).—The body you send is that of a Snow Bunting. Value very small (about 1s. 6d. to 2s. each retail for cocks), as this species is quite plentiful this winter.

THE SAD CASE OF A JAY (R. Philpot).—I fear nothing can be done to stave off the blindness which is overtaking your Jay, seeing that the pupils of both eyes are almost white. It is incurable, I regret to say. If you do not care to keep him when blind, then have him chloroformed by a chemist (or your family medical man). Nine years is not a particularly old age, though a fair span.

HYBRID BREEDING (J.D.).—The house you mention would be a useful one for hybrid breeding, but you must not put many pairs therein. The best "mixture" you could try would be (hens) two or three Canaries, one Greenfinch, one Bullfinch, one Siskin; (cocks) two Linnets, two Goldfinches, one Mealy Redpoll, and one Chaffinch. Don't try to use the cock Bullfinch.

A SONG THRUSH (13th Hussar).—Treat this bird as advised "'C.B.' Reader" in this issue. If the bird is troubled with red mite, or the grey bird lice its plumage, and its cage must of course, be freed of these pests. How to do it will be found explained in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1912.

A QUARTETTE (Kingston).—(1) About two dozen to thirty birds would be ample, though less than half would be the limit if you want success in breeding. (2) The selection is a very good one, though I should limit (on the score of room) the number of Canaries. (3) You cannot very well hope to breed Hybrids when you are keeping true pairs of each species in the aviary. (4) The seed sample sent is a very good one for a mixed collection of birds, though the niger should be left out of it. Give some sunflower seed in a separate dish; also a good wild seed mixture.

HAWFINCH'S HEAD ("C.B." Reader). Some people do not find it a pleasant job to handle a Hawfinch, but you will have to catch him and anoint the place on the head daily with just a little sulphur ointment (obtainable from any chemist). It will be necessary to do this five or six times.

TWO ITEMS (E. C. D.).—I have never seen a bird that I felt convinced was a Chaffinch-Canary Mule, and one has yet to be put upon the show bench that is generally accepted as being an example of this cross. The value of a genuine bird none could fix without seeing it; if a cock, and unique, it would not be less than £10, and more likely in excess of this figure. Marking rings for Canaries are advertised in CAGE BIRDS; see the "Appliance" columns. All the large fanciers' providers stock them; they are very cheap.

CAGE AND FOOD (Novice).—The cage known as a "Finch stock cage" is the best pattern for both Linnet and Bullfinch. Size 16 to 18 inches long, 10 high, and eight to nine wide. All the large cage makers and dealers keep them. I gave very full details of the food of the Bullfinch a week or so back, and both this bird and the Linnet are dealt with in the "Nutshell" series of booklets (2½d. post free). Let the stock seed mixture be: Canary and teazle, 3 parts each; summer rape, 1 part. Twice a week give a dessertspoonful of cracked sunflower seed; also a teaspoonful of a good wild seed mixture (not both on the same day). Bullies should not have hemp as a regular thing; feed them plainly, and offer some ripe fruit frequently.

DOVES AND CHAFFINCHES (Wertyniop).—Ring Doves breed freely enough, but I do not think you ought to keep above one pair in your place; and the last remark applies precisely in the case of the Chaffinch. Neither species would be likely to harm the smaller foreign Finches. Budgerigars are well known to be dangerous companions for small birds, however, and Parrakeets (what kind do you mean?) would be even worse. You ought to have addressed this part of your query to our foreign bird specialist, Mr. W. T. Page. I dealt fully with the feeding of Doves in, I believe, last week's issue. With regard to the Chaffinch, you would do well to get the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with this bird (post free 2½d.). It gives very full details as to its food and management. In an aviary, of course, they would have to take their share of the seeds supplied the other birds; being very hardy, they require no special treatment in the seed line beyond, perhaps, a little sunflower occasionally.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ABOUT A BULLFINCH (C. Hampton).—It really is impossible for me to tell you how to prevent your cock Bullfinch "calling," since it is not practicable to "muzzle" him. It is a natural proceeding, and the notes to which you apparently object are merely indicative of vigorous health. You must not put another cock Bullie with him; there will be a rare old rumpus if you do. In fact, I expect he would commit "assault and battery" upon any intruder about his own size and weight. Do not risk the Linnet, anyway, as you value him and his song. When Bullfinches (both cocks and hens) get into breeding condition they can be very nasty-tempered, though quiet enough during the autumn and early winter months.

MEALWORM BREEDING (T. P.).—(1) The mealworm "breeding" may be said to take place during the summer and autumn. One notices very few large worms then, because they have turned into beetles. The eggs laid by these beetles duly hatch out into very tiny worms, and these latter take until the following summer (broadly speaking) to grow to a size suitable for use. The box should be kept fairly warm, and the mixture of bran and meal be renewed (or added to, rather) as is necessary. Your box should be left untouched until the early summer. It is rather a lengthy process, and I have found it always best to have two boxes to work at.

A CINNAMON SPARROW (No Name, Auchenheath).—I only received the first sheet of your query, so cannot tell whether you gave a nom-de-plume. I presume your bird is a House Sparrow (cinnamon-coloured specimens have frequently been found), and if so, all it needs is a good ordinary seed mixture, when it should thrive well. A good maker's packet mixture for Canaries would do for the staple food, varied occasionally with a little packet Finch mixture and a few cracked sunflower seeds.

FOUR ITEMS (Bullfinch).—(1) I think the British hen Bullie is the earliest to settle down to breeding operations in captivity, though when the Siberian hens have been house-moulted, I find there is very little in it, if anything at all. (2) Yes; both seeds are very good. But early dandelion from the fields (tender young leaves and roots, and the flowering heads) is better than dried seeds stored from the previous season. (3) I do not find that sunflower when given in moderation (as should always be the case) is fattening; not nearly so much as hemp, for instance. Dandelion is not fattening. (4) A small piece of ripe, sweet apple is most excellent, given fairly frequently during the winter.

SEX MATTERS (British).—In the winter, both cock and hen Robins as well as Hedge Accentors, are alike in plumage. In the spring the cock Robin acquires a very much ruddier tint on his breast, and he carries a greater expanse of this—it extends further on to the cheeks and head part. In winter both sexes undoubtedly sing, but I do not think the hen sings during the spring and summer out of doors, though she certainly will do in captivity, for I have had hens that have laid eggs in the cage and sang well all the time. The hens I have had have always been a little smaller than the males, less bold in the head, and not so defiant and "cocky" in carriage. The hen Hedge Sparrow is quite appreciably greyer and more dingy looking in plumage than her mate during spring and summer; the song, too, is a sure sexual sign.

CONCERNING STARLINGS (Je ne suis pas).—It is not at all difficult to hand-rear Starlings, and the procedure is described in "Nutshell" booklet No. 26, which you would find very useful to have hy you. Or the method described in the booklet on the Thrush (if you have bought this) would answer perfectly. You are not at all likely to breed Starlings in a cage; though with a hand-reared pair you would probably succeed in a large outdoor cage (or flight). Starlings build in holes (cavities in trees, etc.), and use hay, straw, grass stalks, a few feathers, etc., when making the nest. You would need to supply a good soft food, and plenty of live food (gentles, black beetles, mealworms,, small garden worms, etc.).

FOUR ITEMS (Novice).—(1) Your aviary would hold six cocks and eight or nine hens quite easily, and you should get some Mules from them. (2) Turn the birds out at the end of February, if the weather is mild and open; if otherwise, leave it until the first mild spell we get in March. (3) It will not be necessary to put up the shutters (for shelter) except during wild (windy) cold weather, or during severe snowstorms. (4) It would hold 9 or 10 pairs of Canaries. Put up about 20 nestboxes. Use different kinds—both earthenware and wood. You can easily contrive some out of suitable wooden boxes, at very little expense. The wooden Roller Canary travelling cages are fine things, removing the bars at one end and the inside fittings.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

W. Q.—Stop giving the milk, keep the bird warm, yet not in the stagnant corner of the room. While it is off its food, try it with the following sop: Take a plain biscuit, break it in small pieces, sprinkle it with sugar, spot over it half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates, then as much boiling water as the biscuit will absorb. Put a little honey and borax in its mouth once or twice daily; it will keep it clear. Use a camel-hair brush or quill, and clean it after each occasion. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls), and on the other days the same quantity of the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts. Get our Nutshell Booklet, the Grey Parrot, 2½d. post free, from our Manager; it will help you in the general treatment of your bird.

Aviary Queries.

W. L. Boyce.—If the query reached me, it has been replied to. I remember, at any rate, a similar one. The open portion of flight would be better turfed, and patches of it sown with wheat, oats, canary seed, and other cereals. I expect turf will need renewing annually. It is no use planting trees and bushes, as such are soon cut to pieces by this group. I do not think they would let even hops grow. It would accommodate about 50 birds all told—that is, old and young. Following would make a good series:—2 pairs Yellow Budgerigars, 1 pair green ditto, 1 pair Cockatoils, and one pair each Madagascars, Blue-wing and Black-cheeked Lovebirds. Also add cocks for variety of Red-crested, Virginian, and Green Cardinal, and a couple of any species of Foreign Thrush obtainable. It is not practicable to always give dimensions of aviary, owing to qualifying conditions which space does not permit us to print. If need is not covered, please repeat query.

Acclimatising a Shama.

"Shammos."—(1) A Shama is not a difficult bird to keep, but at times they come to hand in a very prostrated condition, the consequences of importation; but, as this species always make a struggle for existence, they are not unduly difficult to acclimatise, and soon become tame and confiding. (2) Soft food (several good mixtures are advertised under "Foods"), live insects, green food; and if it will take it, a little milk-sop will help it over importation troubles, prepare as follows:—One teaspoonful Nestle's milk, half teaspoonful Scott's Emulsion, one tablespoonful of crumbled sponge cake, and sufficient boiling water to make it just sloppy. Keep warm and out of draught while cold weather lasts. Once acclimatised, the species is hardy and enduring. (3) No; but if you care to send me a stamped addressed envelope, per Editor, I can be a little more explicit.

Aviary for Parrakeets & Lovebirds.

W. L. Boyce.—Your aviary would accommodate about 50 birds, that is, old and young together—the arrangements you propose should answer well. You cannot well mix Parrakeets and Finch-like birds together, but a few Cardinals and Thrushes can be kept with the odd cocks or pairs to give variety of form and colour. I would suggest two pairs Yellow Budgerigars, and one pair Green ditto, and one pair each of Madagascar, Blue-winged and Black-cheeked Lovebirds, and Cockatiels. Java Sparrows are usually able to look after themselves in any company, as also are Saffron Finches, and you could include pairs of these. For the larger birds, not Parrakeets, I advise cocks only. The following should do well, but they are not cheap, though handsome: Red-crested, Green and Virginian Cardinals, Grey-winged Ouzel, Orange-headed Ground Thrush, Black-headed Sibia. Such a series would make a really great show, and all are hardy. I have proved them all. I should certainly have turf, weeds, and cereals growing in flight. Such would have to be renewed annually, and should not get unduly fouled, as growth of the herbage would absorb much. Arrange your perches so that they do not cover whole of flight, then underneath, if necessary, can be cleaned and soil turned over occasionally.

More About Budgerigars.

Esperance.—Watch adverts. for a time for tame Budgies that will come on finger are at times offered. They are rather troublesome birds to tame, but this is all a matter of quietness, kindness, and patience. Yes, it will be better to have two cocks. Yes, they will do in your sitting-room, but both fire and gas must be protected by screens of some kind, and their cage must be below gas level. Of course, as soon as the birds are tame enough to come on your finger, that will be the method of returning them to the cage, otherwise I expect they would remain in the room, as a rule, till they are hungry. The "song" of the Budgerigar is a chattering sort of warble (there have been talking Budgies), and not a song as compared with the Canary. I can hardly advise you which to get—it's a matter of taste and purpose; a Roller Canary would be quicker and more easily tamed as a pet, but probably not so entertaining as the Budgies, which are very beautiful and active where they have space to use their wings. Get our Nutshell booklet "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our manager. If the above does not make all clear, send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor, and I will try and meet any difficulties that arise after you have read this reply.

WHAT BIRD? (T.H.L.).—I can only make a guess; it rather reads like the Sulphur-coloured Seedeater (Serinum sulphuratus), which is a Greenfinch-like bird, but of a much richer colour. If you will send me a description of the colours on the different parts of your bird's body and compare it as to size and form with some well-known species, I shall then be in a position to confirm or otherwise, the above name.

SAMPLE OF SEED (Nemo).—The sample sent is commonly sold as Indian millet; it is of average size, rather dusty, and not quite sweet. Are you keeping it in a damp place? It is a variety much liked by Waxbills, and the small ornamental Finches, but in conjunction with it canary seed and white millet, also millet sprays should be given.

WILL IT PAIR AND BREED (Broken Sledge).—Yes, they would undoubtedly pair and breed in an outdoor aviary, or even in a large aviary cage. However, before putting them together, the cages should stand side by side for them to get acquainted; at first the cage should stand about six inches apart, later quite close, and the birds allowed to caress each other through the wire. After this they might be allowed out of their cages together, and later be put and left together, supplied with a nesting barrel or log, and left to take their own course. No nesting material will be required, but a plentiful supply of green food, fruit and pieces of plain biscuit should be on hand when they are feeding young.

AVIARY FOR BUDGERIGARS (Wm. Hallam).—It all depends on the space available. Send me a rough ground plan of the space available, a stamped addressed envelope, and I will send you a rough plan. Generally speaking, it is better to have a house and flight, but if the aviary is only small, then have only the front wire netting, and no shelter, using a screen or shutter for winter nights and severe periods. The seed and water vessels in a small aviary should be placed so that they can be reached through small hinged flaps from the outside, only entering the aviary for cleaning purposes.

BRINGING BIRDS HOME (W. Stowe).—So far as I can gather, the cage should answer well enough, but it should have some arrangements by which it can be cleansed and the birds fed, without much opening of cage doors. Most of the birds you name would find a ready sale over here, save perhaps the Him. Blue Thrushes, and the birds with long tails, Blue-pies, only a few of these would sell, as not many aviculturists have convenience for such large species. The other (not the blue one) appears to me to be the Wandering Tree-pie. Hill Tits would sell, also the Indian Goldfinch, Greenfinch and Siskin. I think the bird you have flying with your Canaries is one of the Buntings, of which there are several. Your Black and Yellow bird is the Oriole. These also would sell, but you would have to be well provided with soft food (insectile mixture), live insects and ripe fruit to bring over the birds referred to. There is no time to search before going to press, but I will see if I can be a little more definite about the birds' names in our next issue. A few notes of the birds of your locality would interest "C.B." readers. If I have not covered your query, write again.

CUTTHROATS, ETC., IN CAGE (Cutthroat).—(1) Not an unusual occurrence with first nests, and weather is all against them, but you will find they will ultimately settle down and deposit their eggs in the nest. They are not like Canaries, and the eggs should not be interfered with. The nest box is about right for size. (2) The wild species, Grey Javas, have bred in a cage, but they are not free breeders under any conditions, but the domesticated species, the White Java, would breed regularly, and their progeny should command remunerative prices. (3) Repeat this query to Editor.

INDIAN MYNAH ("Constant Reader").—This bird requires a roomy cage, which will require constant attention, as they are large feeders, and void accordingly. When it is tame and accustomed to its new quarters, let it have its liberty in the room occasionally. As regards food, they are almost omnivorous in captivity, but in a state of nature live on fruit and insects. Supply ripe fruit ad lib, some good insectile mixture (soft food), and live insects (beetles, mealworms, spiders, caterpillars, etc); also it can have sweetened boiled rice, and also table leavings, such as cooked vegetables, and scraps of meat; but, in any case it should have as much ripe fruit (any kind) as it cares to eat.

BUDGERIGAR OUT OF CONDITION (A. H.).—This bird is altogether out of condition, and appears to me to be constitutionally weak, as its feathers are not fully developed; nevertheless, its present weakness may be due to the illness it has passed through. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery-loose, give three drops of Dinneford's magnesia direct to the beak, and on the other days the same quantity of byno-phosphates, also to the beak; the latter can be given morning and afternoon. Supply canary, white millet, millet sprays, and keep a tin of crushed oats in the cage, also a piece of clean cuttle bone. A small leaf of fresh lettuce two or three times a week, and as soon as frost has disappeared, give seeding grass ad lib, as soon as it is obtainable. Report progress a month hence.

BUDGERIGARS AND LOVEBIRDS. (C.M.D.).—(1) I should not interfere with these birds; let them follow their own sweet will. If young are hatched when the weather is exceptionally severe, at least husks should be left up, as in case of exceptionally severe weather these will be needed as shelters. (2) All will do well together, though some pairs of Black-cheeked Lovebirds are apt to be spiteful to Budgerigars, if they are at all crowded. All are very probable breeders, but in a query of this kind size of aviary should always be given, and I must qualify the above reply with—providing aviary is roomy enough for them.

BITING FEATHERS, ETC. (O. D.).—If the cage was badly infested with mites, it would partly account for bird's condition. I hope you thoroughly cleaned cage and position it had occupied when exchanging it for the clean one, otherwise you will only be spreading the pest. See reply to "Crown" on this point. In addition to usual seed staple, give half a teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake, liberally sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days twice each week the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. On each of the remaining days give a morsel of sweet fruit, or green food, if the latter can be got in good condition. Add 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash to the drinking water for three or four days.

ANOTHER FEATHER PULLER (G. R.).—See our reply in this issue to "Salisbury," and carry out the advice given there in every respect, but for your bird add half-a-pint of maize to the seed mixture. You cannot be sure as to insects, some of these are only visible under a microscope, so carry out the whole treatment. The cage should either be removed from the window, or the sides of it covered round, while the room is being aired and cleaned. No birds can stand draught, however hardy they be.

BARBETS AND OUTDOOR AVIARY (J. C.).—I cannot advise Barbets being left out of doors in the winter (unless the house was heated), even in South Devon. Barbets never have bred, but that is no reason why they should not; but if you make the attempt, I cannot advise you keeping anything else with them. The same applies to Blue and other Jays. A nice series would be one pair foreign Thrushes, one pair Green Cardinals, and one pair Black-headed Silias. Diet: Ripe fruit, ad lib., soft food, milk sop, and live insects. As regards the Thrushes, Orange-headed Ground Thrush, White-throated Ground Thrush, and Grey-winged Ouzels are all handsome species.

BUDGERIGARS AS PETS (C. Hampton).—If the bird is let out each day for a fly, then a comparatively small cage will do, but it ought not to be less than 12in. square at base by 15in. high, a larger size would do, but if it has a daily fly, the above will suffice. Many very handsome and roomy wire cages are now made, and at very reasonable prices. Write to one of those advertising in our columns, and ask for a young cock just able to feed itself, and then by quietness, gentleness and kindness you should soon win its affections and get it tame enough to come to finger. Once it gets accustomed to you, and is petted, it will not be melancholy alone; keep it in your living room, so that it will have plenty of company as soon as it is tame. An all-wire cage must not be stood where wind can blow through it. The object to gilt (brass) cages is, that unless they get constant and careful attention a green substance (verdigris), which is very poisonous, forms in the crevices and corners; if this is carefully looked for and removed by regular cleaning a brass (gilt) cage is permissible. Their song (?) is a sort of chattering warble, not unmusical.

A FEATHER PULLER (Salisbury).—You give me no idea how it has been, or how you are feeding and treating it, and thus I am unable to form any idea as to cause. I can only say, spray it twice a week (guard carefully against it taking a chill) with a solution of quassia chips or fir tree oil, and dust the nape, under wings, and lower back with Keating's insect powder, also pour boiling water into all the cage crevices, thoroughly swill them. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the ordinary supply of drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls), and on other days put the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water, and continue this treatment for a couple of months. It will not be easy to check the feather pulling. You might also try rubbing bitter aloes on the bare parts. Confine its diet to seed mixture, one quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint oats and hemp, and half-a-pint each wheat, paddy rice and sunflower seeds, and a gill of grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in cage; ripe fruit, nuts, green food, and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and supply it with a piece of branch, cotton reels, etc., to play with and cut up.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

MISS A. M. MENCE.—Post-mortem on Fire Finch revealed acute double pneumonia, but whether of sporadic or contagious origin, I cannot determine from the one examination; possibly a second post-mortem, if others die, will further aid me in arriving at a definite conclusion.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A MEDICINE SYRINGE (H. Beckett).—We can assure you that this notion has often been mentioned in our columns.

AN ADDRESS (R. Dracup).—The address given in the Crystal Palace catalogue is 5, Albert Road, Richmond, Surrey.

PRESS CUTTINGS (A. Watson, T. H. Kinch, T. Jeff, T. Robson, and others).—Many thanks for newspaper cuttings sent us.

A REPORT (E. H. Fulcher).—We are much indebted to you for your kindness in sending this interesting report.

A LETTER (C. Hampton).—Your letter has been duly forwarded.

THE CASE OF AN OWL (Tommy's Mother).—You certainly need not fear interference by any policeman with your Owl. The "man in blue" would have no ground whatever for taking action.

AN ACT OF PARLIAMENT (W. Pilbeam).—Thanks for your letter. We will give the matter consideration, but may say at once that we do not think the clause in question affects birds kept in cages. It is not a new Act, remember, but only a new edition of an Act which has been in force for 10 years past.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW (Kay).—The number of exhibits was 2,550; exhibitors, 650. It is impossible to ascertain the number of visitors, as there is no separate turnstile for the show. With regard to the other matter, naturally the more catalogues that are sold the better pleased are the show officials.

SEVERAL ITEMS (Indian).—Your questions respecting Indian birds will be answered by our foreign bird specialist, Mr. Page. Glad to know you like our paper. Perhaps if you are in London when visiting England towards the end of the year, you will call and leave a drawing of your cage. Pleased to see you.

THE NOVICE PROBLEM (Bangorian).—A special prize cannot under any circumstances count as a "first prize." The latter term clearly means that a bird has been placed first in a certain class by the judge. It frequently happens that a bird wins a special prize, yet does not get even a commended card from the judge. Further, the classes you mention cannot be termed "open classes," for the competition is restricted to birds fed on somebody's food, or pepper, or the like, and oftimes restricted to members, or to a certain radius.

BETTER BIRDS (W.E.R.).—Sorry, but it has always been a strict rule of ours never to recommend any particular breeder or dealer. It would not be fair of us to single out any special individual or individuals. One or other of the well-known breeders advertising in our columns would be sure to serve you well; write to one or two, explaining the exact circumstances of the case.

A PHOTO (E. McCulby).—Thanks for the photograph, for which we shall hope to find a corner in a future issue.

The Yorkshire Union.

Proposed Alterations of Rules, etc., for the Coming Year.

The ballot papers for the election of officers, alterations of rules, new rules, etc., for the Yorkshire Union are now in the hands of the respective secretaries; not as before when they were sent to individual members. Now, if you want to have a say in the working of the Union, you have to attend the meeting when it is brought forward and register your vote with your own secretary. No doubt it saves a lot of expense and labour; but will it be as successful? It really cannot be much worse than before, however, so meagre were the returns.

Firstly, fellow members, we have the vice-presidentship. The elected one will take the chair the year following. Here you have a choice of three. Vote for the one who, you think, knows how the Union should be ruled. Then, for the first time, you have a vote on the secretaryship and for trustees and auditors; you have plenty of choice, including the retiring officers; keep your eyes open.

Alterations of rules are always interesting, and the first we have to study refers to the payment of judges' fees. Should all societies pay equal, or only those who hold the shows? Those that hold no show say it operates harshly on them, as they have no chance to get anything in return.

Next we have someone wanting to dock a few words off the rule relating to the date of closing of entries. These words were originally put on to provide for the special contingency of shows taking place on a holiday—Christmas, for instance—where sometimes a day later has been fixed so as not to operate harshly on such occasions. The next is a good addition, in my humble opinion; it gives the sub-committee power to revise the rules before they are issued on the ballot paper, to make them workable and clear to all. The method of counting only the points gained at certain shows to be drawn for, and not at all shows, as before, appears not to have pleased somebody, as it is open to be deleted. Also the old question of the limit in the novice classes is down for consideration; it is open to be withdrawn if the novices are sure it will be better for them: they have it in their own hands.

Shall a society have a members' show when another society is holding an open show? This "hardy annual" comes as regularly as the breeding season, and seems to pass one way and then the other. Some think that it is not fair to those who run the risk of open shows for others to have a members' show on during the same hours. Then we have the rule about sending the copy of ballot paper to the secretary to bring it before his society. Someone wants to delete this, but he does not say how the ballot has to be carried out otherwise. Some other plan might have been stated. The only other alteration now left is of minor importance, and refers to ties for specials.

We have eight new rules to talk about. The first proposes that there shall be as many novice classes as open classes at all shows. Many times they are not far behind in number now. We have also a proposal to alter the perch from the present one in use to a square one with chamfered edges; the question to me is, can a standard thickness be arrived at that will suit all feet? Does not the extent of grip in Canaries' feet vary considerably? Provision of medals for intermediates is another point for consideration. The novices, too, have a rule to vote upon, to the effect that the judge's name shall be printed in schedule with the classes he will judge; certainly it is an advantage to know whom you will have your birds under, and sometimes the novices have been hardly dealt with in this respect; the assistant judge has always had to take their section. That no judge shall officiate at his own society's show seems a good rule that should come into force; it will be better for all concerned.

A uniform subscription is on the boards, and the amount is also stated. It is reasonable enough, but it will perhaps hurt one or two societies that have managed fairly well on less. We have also an item in regard to honorary members; they also must pay the minimum subscription. It was said at one time that many were taken at a very low figure to swell the number.

There is no doubt that these matters will be well thrashed out at most meetings, and those present will be able to learn something in regard to the general working of that most successful body, the Y.U.

More Lark Pies.

I have received a mass of correspondence referring to the consignment to the London market last week of a ton and a half of dead Larks in one lot from Cambridgeshire. Excepting that the individual consignment was a large one, there is nothing unusual in the news. The traffic in dead birds as food for the table has been going on for many scores of years, and the number consumed in London alone amounts to hundreds of thousands weekly in the season. A ton and a half represents only a portion of the weekly slaughter, but we will see for a moment what even this amount means. The bodily weight of a Skylark is an ounce and a-half, so that there would be nearly 36,000 Skylarks in this one consignment! Who can calculate the gross number of birds slaughtered in a single season? The figures could only be expressed in millions.

And the Humanitarians say that the catching of birds for the purpose of keeping them alive in cages and aviaries for our own study or as pets leads to the thinning of their numbers in freedom! Is there one Lark kept in a cage for each thousand slaughtered as food? Not more, for certain. It is doubtful whether all the birds, of whatever species, caught for the former purpose would, if added together, number one thousandth part of those sent dead to the poulterers' shops.

What Would Happen?

It is not our concern to enter into the question whether birds, if left free from human interference, would increase so as to be a pest to agriculture, horticulture, and fruit-growing, or to decide whether if all the birds were wiped out fruit growers would be the gainers by their absence from their fruit gardens, or would have no fruit at all because of the multiplication of insect pests. Neither need we consider whether if all the birds hatched in any one spring were to live without loss to rear families the following spring there would be anything either in the way of seeds, fruit, or insects left upon which they might in their myriads exist.

Nor have we to enquire whether the snaring of birds to supply the poulterers provides to a number of very poor people a much-needed means of earning a living throughout the worst part of the year, nor whether man has a right to kill the smaller animals for food.

All that concerns us is to point out that, as stated above, the number of British birds kept in cages is of infinitestimal proportion compared with the number slaughtered for food, and that the professional humanitarians have much greater scope for their energies in endeavouring to stop the wholesale killing of our wild birds than in persecuting the keeper of a song bird in a cage or aviary. In all their propaganda they claim that if they are successful in obtaining legislation making it illegal to keep a bird in a cage they will be taking a proper first step. "If there were no bird-keepers," they say, "there would be no bird-dealers, and no bird-catchers."

How much more effectual it would be to make it illegal to eat a bird, for, by their own reasoning, if there were no bird-eaters there would be no bird killers. If they stopped bird-eating they would preserve the lives of millions of wild-birds, whereas by putting a stop to bird-keeping they would in any case only preserve the liberty for so long as they escaped the bird-snarer of a comparatively insignificant number of British birds, and in so doing they would abolish the pleasure and hobby of the many thousands of fanciers throughout the country who take a delight in the breeding of Canaries and who have no wish to keep either British birds or foreign birds.

New Legislation Predicted.

That legislation in one form or another is imminent would seem apparent from an editorial note in "The Animal World" for the current month. Herein it is stated that "a keen worker for the R.S.P.C.A. has for some time been busy on the consolidation and very necessary amendments of the various and very confusing Acts to protect wild birds, and we hope that we shall be able to introduce this Bill into the House of Commons at a very early date."

What We Have to Do.

This is plain enough, in all conscience, and we have to be ready to see that when it is proposed to consolidate and amend the existing bird-law the consolidation and amendments are made with a knowledge on the part of our legislators of the subject upon which they are legislating. This knowledge must have been conspicuously absent from the minds of those responsible for the existing Act and its amendments, and, unless our present members of Parliament are better informed than were their predecessors, the last state of affairs will be worse than the first, for they will snatch at any suggestions offered by the rabid opponents of bird-keeping, and our hobby will be brought to an end. Individual fanciers without an organisation behind them will be helpless when the time comes. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is here to help them, but they must help the LEAGUE by becoming members. It will be too late when the blow has fallen. Action must be taken quickly. Members of Parliament must learn that there are votes behind our side of the question, and I want every keeper of birds throughout the country to join our ranks so that the point may be brought home to them.

Two Special Letters.

I have received such a large number of letters from members expressing gratification at having been present at the first great meeting of our LEAGUE that it is quite impossible to reply otherwise than by this general acknowledgment. Will members kindly accept my appreciation of their good wishes and an assurance that nothing will be wanting on my part in my endeavours to cement the good fellowship existing among members of the LEAGUE, and to further its objects in every possible direction. The following are examples of letters received both from those present and from those who were prevented from attending:—

Sir,—I was simply delighted that our first annual meeting of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE was such a gigantic success. When I tell you that this was my first visit, although I have been a birdy man for twenty years, and have often longed to see the great Palace Show, you will know what a treat I had. I think, as members, we all ought to tender you our hearty congratulations for bringing the meeting to such a successful issue.

Uttoxeter. C. E. MILLER

Sir,—As I am sitting at home to-night bound to business, my thoughts are travelling towards the Palace for to-morrow, and its great event, and I cannot refrain from sending you and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE very best wishes for a bumper attendance at the Meeting, Tea, and Photo. If I could possibly tear myself away I would be at all three. Anyway, I have pleasure in letting you know that during the five days I have been your hon. sec. I have obtained five members and the promise of several more.

Besides others, I have made a member of Mr. W. Jones, for years past the key of the Fancy hereabouts, who has recently somewhat dropped out of the Fancy through having lost about £60 worth of his champions. He is coming back to the old love, and we are trying to reinstate the Fancy in Margate and go strong once more.

Margate. C. W. EVANS.

First Club show, held Masonic Hall, Feb. 10th. The hall is well suited for the purpose, being well lighted and ventilated. The exhibits numbered 125, which for a first venture was a splendid response and an encouragement to the officials and management. Secretary Mr. J. R. Reid worked with a will, and is to be congratulated on the success which has crowned his efforts. He was ably assisted by Mr. J. C. Murray (president), and a host of splendid workers. The quality of the exhibits was of a high standard, especially in the Mule and British bird section, where the feature was the any other species hardbill class, with 20 entries. Mr. T. W. DALMELLINGTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Third annual show, held Chapel Hall, Main Street, Feb. 10. Entries were over forty up on former years. We were pleased to see Mr. Gemmell back in the list of exhibitors, carrying off special for best Nor. or Border with a really fine Border cock. Mr. Murphy won special for best in show with a good Goldie-Greenie showing parentage well, and was hard pressed by Mr. McKinley's Bullie hen, being one of the best hens we have seen for some time. Mr. Jos. Brown, sporting the Cage Birds League badge, wrought hard to get more members, in which we think he succeeded. The "Derby" day was the Greenfinch class with twelve grand birds. The sec., Mr. J. Logan, worked hard for the benefit of the show, and was well backed by an able and willing committee. Mr. W. Conkie (Ayr) judged, and his awards were well received. There was a good attendance of visitors, especially ladies, who seemed to take a deep interest in cage birds in this district. We hope that the club will go on as they are doing, and that before long they will be able to have an open show second to none in the West of Scotland.

WALSALL & DIS. C B.S.

Inter-Club Show.

The society is to be congratulated on the inter-club show in conjunction with the Wolverhampton C.B.S. held Feb. 10th, White Hart Hotel, Caldmore. The compliment is thus returned, that at Wolverhampton being held earlier. These inter-club shows can but augur good for those concerned, and might well be encouraged in districts boasting more than one society. The room was ideal, being large, well lighted, and free from draughts. Wolverhampton members took a keen delight in helping a younger society; so much so, that they provided most of the Canary classes. Walsall also threw their heart and soul into the work, the members sending some grand British. Mr. Baker (Birmingham) judged in an efficient manner. The genial secretary, Mr. F. Price, had his work well in hand. A grand Cockatoo, shown by Madame Jones-Tack, proved an interesting attraction.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held Nags Head, Cocoa House, Foregate Street, Jan. 30th, Mr. F. C. Parker in chair, before a splendid gathering. Rules were gone through in quite a businesslike fashion. It will be interesting to fanciers in district to learn that this society is being established on a sound footing, and the fact that 10 new members were made is strong evidence in that direction; and several have taken out books with a view to building up a fund.—R. N. Williams, Hon. Sec.

Mr. Couper (President) stated he had visited Mr. Sykes (Musselburgh), who informed him he would be pleased to conduct members and friends through Lord Elphinstone's estate. The invitation met with a hearty response, and the 2nd and 3rd Saturdays in May were suggested. It was left in the hands of Secretary to make arrangements for a lecture at May meeting. Mr. Fairbairn was admitted a member. Mr. T. Todd was proposed a member. Mr. Holmes was the principal speaker in a general discussion on birdie matters, which was greatly appreciated. A few names of fanciers were submitted and Secretary promised to write them and if desired to give information regarding the society, which provides classes for all kinds of Canaries (except Scotch Fancy), Mules, British and Foreign birds, and also special classes for novices. Fanciers residing within a radius of 12 miles from Edinburgh invited to join at once, as no new members are admitted after April meeting.—J. Welsh, Sec., 67, Raeburn Place.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 27, in Central Bar, Mr. T. Wildridge presiding. Delegates' report from West of Fife C.B. League read, and generally approved. With regard to "smoker" by League at "Masonic Arms," Cowdenbeath, on Feb. 17, the majority of members present intimated their intention of being present. Following were elected League delegates for ensuing year:—Messrs. P. McCue, I. Grewar, T. Wildridge, W. Whiteford. Agreed, that a sum be granted from funds toward buying two specials held from show. EDINBURGH AND DIS. C.B.S.

Smoking concert held Jan. 27, when members and friends to the number of between 60 and 70, met and spent a most enjoyable evening, reckoned by some one of the best outside London; the unanimous feeling was it really was a "guid thing," and had come to stay. Talent was of the highest order, including several professionals. Vice-president Mr. A. W. Watson, occupied the chair, and made a nice little speech. This society was striving at a comparatively low membership fee, he said, to meet the working man fancier's pocket, and at the same time coach, interest, and instruct the novice. Thereafter songs and stories were rendered in a fashion that only Scotmen can do, which included President J. Charlton, G. Brown (Leith Sec.), W. Smart (Loanhead), J. Stormont, and a host of others. Mr. J. Cooper (president Norwich Club, Edinburgh), was the pianist, his selections and accompaniments being all that could be desired. Mr. J. Winter (Scottish National President) proposed the toast of the "Visitors," which was responded to in fine style. Mr. J. Stormont replied, and complimented the management on their "ideal" smoker, which, he felt assured, would long be remembered. The secretary also made a few remarks, stating, amongst other things, that a syllabus for the session was being drawn up, and would be in the hands of the members by next meeting. "Auld Lang Syne" brought concert to a close.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY (National Derby) O.S.

Annual meeting held January 30, Mr. Wright (pres.) in chair. Balance sheet submitted, showing a balance on the right side. Secretary read communications from Mr. Councillor Hogg (Oakley) and Mr. Carmyllie (Broughty Ferry). The former expressed regret that he would not be able to be present, he having been confined to his bed for 9 weeks. The members expressed sympathy with him, and hoped he would soon be fully restored. Mr. Carmyllie asked that his name be taken off the roll; the members, however, considered he had in the past proved so worthy a member that they would like him to reconsider his decision. He remains on committee for the current year. Agreed, that the half-yearly meeting be on June 10, and that next show be September 21. Following appointed to the Executive for the current year:—Hon. president, W. Hart (Paisley); president, R. Wright (Greenock); vice-president, County Councillor J. Union), who had kindly consented to come amongst us, presented the prizes. Mr. Hill, who was well received, said that it gave him the greatest pleasure to come to Shipley and present the prizes, and he was also very pleased to see such a splendid array of prizes. Refreshments were served, and the usual toast to the cup winner drunk. The musical part of the programme was contributed to by Mr. P. RUNCORN C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Feb. 2. Secretary read his report for the past 12 months. Treasurer presented annual statement of accounts, also detailed financial statement of first annual open show. This showed a net loss of five guineas. We are highly pleased to be in a position, brought about by economy, to possess a fund which amply covered the aforementioned loss, and to report that the society has still a balance in hand of £2. Members have every reason to congratulate themselves on the success which attended their efforts in running so successfully the open show held in Dec. last. Members take this opportunity of thanking those friends who supported us with their entries and presence, and especially those who acknowledged by letter their appreciation of the management. We hope to hold our 2nd annual open show on or about the same date as last year. Meeting was unanimous in re-electing the following officers for ensuing year: President, Dr. Cullen; chairman, Mr. W. H. Cawley; vice-chairman, Mr. J. L. Glover; treasurer, Mr. E. Peck; secretary, Mr. T. P. Baxter; committee, Messrs. Bradbury, Wood, Whyte, Farrell, Looker, and Ratcliff. Next meeting (first Friday in March) will take the form of a lecture and discussion on "Pairing Stock"; when it is hoped all members will make it convenient to attend. Several new members will be proposed. We hear with regret that a new society has been formed in the town, and that the friends who hold the reins could not see their way to work hand in hand, as it were, with us, and unite amicably in every effort made for the extension of the Fancy in this town, and for the hobby at large.—T. B. Baxter, sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, 3rd Feb., Mr. H. J. Mennard in the chair; an excellent attendance. Re syllabus for 1912, decided that we delete June F.F. show from counting for specials, so same will be held this season at headquarters as a table show. July Y.B. show also cut out from being a cup show, several members contending that in many cases it was the lucky competitor who had his birds about six weeks old that had the best chance. By a large majority it was decided that Leeds and President's cups be competed for at November and Boxing Day old bird shows; the majority also thought eight classes each for Yorks. and Nor. too many for a members' show, so we unanimously agreed to cut out clear classes, and make them clear, ticked, or variegated. Three gold medals will be given as section specials for most points in Yorks., Nor., and British, six highest birds to count at three members' and open shows. A grand list of members' specials will be open for competition. Intending members kindly let me have names before 20th Feb., to be included in 1912 Year Book. Messrs. J. H. Roe and W. Mundell have been elected to officiate at our open-to-all-England show, Oct. 12th, and we are hoping to be able to secure the St. James's Hall. Pair show headquarters, 2nd March, birds to be staged 8 p.m.; entrance fee 3d., all returned in prize-money; 2s. 6d. special for most points in all classes except A.O.V. Class 1, champ. Yorks.; 2, champ. Nor.; 3, A.O.V.; 4, Mule or Hyb. pairs; 5, novice Yorks.; 6, novice Nor.; judges, Messrs. C. E. Hall and W. Johnson. Two new members elected in Messrs. Leach and Hutton. Will all who would like to give a special, or who would like an advert. in 1912 Year Book, kindly let me know at earliest possible convenience?—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

WOODSIDE O.S. (Aberdeen).

A highly successful smoking concert was held at the Bon Accord Hotel, Market Street, Jan. 27, for the purpose of doing honour to the late secretary, Mr. A. Thomson, who is about to emigrate to Australia. Mr. J. Strachan (vice-president) in chair; and in presenting Mr. Thomson with a purse of sovereigns on behalf of the members and other fanciers in Aberdeen, he referred in eulogistic terms to the strenuous work Mr. Thomson had performed on behalf of the society during his seven years' term of office, and which he had left in a sound financial position. Mr. Thomson feelingly replied, and urged on all fanciers present to put their shoulders to the wheel and put the society in a still better position. Songs were rendered by Messrs. J. Strachan, A. Ewen, A. Taylor, J. Lyon, W. Rae, P. Craighead, P. Stewart, and Mr. Dick, while Mr. Thomson gave a couple of recitations. The proceedings terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."—"Woodside."

Afterwards 13 of the members tried their hand at mating and judging. Opinions were varied, which helped to make the evening amusing and instructive. Mr. P. H. Barlow won 1st prize in competition for judging, Mr. J. Lees 2nd. The event proved so interesting that members decided to hold another competition at next meeting, Feb. 27. This event will be for Nor. pairs, buff cocks, and yellow hens. Mr. J. Lees (Rochdale) kindly promised to place the pairs. 2s. 6d. 1st prize will again be given, 1s. 6d. 2nd, to nearest to Mr. Lee's. Fanciers welcomed.—A. H. Meadowcroft, Sec.

Meeting held Jan. 29th, School Rooms, St. Cuthbert's Church, Robson Street, Anfield, Liverpool, Mr. W. Bell (chairman) presiding. Several new members joined, including Messrs. W. VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting and pair (Canary) show, held Feb. 1, Village School Room, Alexandria, Mr. P. Hannah in chair, supported by hon. vice-president J. W. Bell and a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen. Chairman introduced Mr. C. Hunter (Glasgow). That gentleman having stated which soap he preferred washing birds with, poured out hot water into three bowls, and having reduced the temperature of same till he could hold the elbow in it with comfort, in each dish he added half a teaspoonful of borax, with glycerine in the third. Taking hold of a bird, he showed how it should be held—with head between the thumb and first finger, laying on its back across his palm. He proceeded to wash with a short stubble camel-hair brush, well lathered with soap, turning the bird over and carefully showing each position held and brushed, laying great stress on how the neck and head should be washed. Taking a longer camel-hair brush, he proceeded to wash the soapsuds from off the bird, which he repeated in the third dish, and left bird entirely free from soap. He did not believe in using a sponge. He wrapped bird up in a silk cloth and laid same on a board before the fire, an operation repeated with another. Later he put the birds in an all-round wire cage, with a dry cloth over the back and a wet cloth in front of fire; in a remarkably short time he was holding up for inspection two birds which were a credit to him. He received much applause. Mr. Hunter judged the pairs. Principal winners: Nor., Messrs. Davidson, Hannah Bros.; Crests, Messrs. Ritchie, McLean; Borders, Mr. Gillies; Scotch Fancy, Messrs. McLean, Thorn; Yorks., Messrs. Liles, McLean; A.O.V., Mr. W. Taylor. Twenty-four new members admitted, viz., Messrs. Leslie, McEwan and Barker, of Bonhill; Messrs. McFarlane and McArthur, of Balloch; Mr. Duffy, of Jamestown, and Mr. McColl, of Renton.—A. H. McLean.

Expressions of regret were heard on all sides, and it is our earnest hope that Mr. Sheppard will be successful in his new home. The novices here are indeed losing a valuable friend. GLASGOW (West End) C.B.A.

Second annual "smoker" and presentation of trophies won at annual show held in White's Restaurant, Gordon-street, Jan. 31st, when a large number of members and fancier friends met (between 150 and 200 strong). Chair occupied by the hon. president, Douglas Pearson, Esq., supported by hon. vice-president W. Gibb Macnab, Esq.; president, Mr. C. Campbell; vice-president, Mr. A. Miller; and Messrs. Brown, Bells, Ferrier, Campbell, J. Young, R. V. Raine, R. H. Livingstone, and McMillan. The chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he was well pleased to see such a large gathering. He added, their society, although only two years old, was growing by leaps and bounds. In Douglas Pearson, Esq., the members have a thorough gentleman, a born fancier, and staunch supporter of everything pertaining to the Fancy, and especially to the club. In toasting his health, the company lustily sung "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." The hon. vice-president, W. Gibb Macnab is also very popular, and, like the hon. president, is ever ready doing whatever lies in his power for the advancement of the club and the Fancy in general. Then there is Mr. C. Campbell (president), Mr. A. Miller (vice-president), and the ever-smiling secretary and treasurer, Mr. W. Proudfoot. These gentlemen are all "true type and quality" fanciers, who will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to raise the society to the pinnacle of fame which it is approaching. It would be bad in us not to make special mention of the secretary, as we never met a better; he is genuine and true to the core, and a man of brain and full of life and go. Artistes: Messrs. J. B. Preston, W. Gibb Macnab, Ferrie, Hendry, Chalmers, Morrison, McOlree, Forbes, Bingham, Bells, Douglas, Gallelly. To one and all great praise is due for the efficiency displayed and the merriment and laughter enjoyed through their kindly help. The presentation of trophies (an interesting affair) was as follows: Pearson challenge rose bowl: Mr. P. Houston; Macnab challenge cup, Mr. A. Hendry; School of Music cup, Mr. G. G. Henderson; Macnab gold medal, Mr. E. Taylor; and Border Fancy Club medal to Mr. A. Miller. A pleasing feature was the filling of the Macnab cup and passing same round to toast the health of the donor, afterwards joining in the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." In giving the toast "Kindred Societies," Mr. Young spoke to the pleasure it gave him to see so many prominent fanciers and friends present, and the great amount of friendly spirit that seemed to exist amongst members. The health of the secretary was toasted, and amid loud cheers and shouts of "a speech," he was obliged to get up and say a few words. He told them that his success was due to the co-operation of, and kindness shown to him by, the members, and he could assure them he was ever willing to do his duty.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

General meeting held Onward Hall, Feb. 6th; Mr. W. Robinson presided. Report of the management committee (instructed to deal with the business left over from annual general meeting) read. The change in society's name came in for a lot of discussion. What was the object in making any alteration when under the present name we were making progress? But quite a different view was taken when it was explained why the alteration was thought necessary. The word Ardwick was purely local, and was no guidance to outside fanciers as to where the society was located. It was thought the time was nearing when the members might desire to hold an open show, and to do any good as an advertising medium we would have to put the word Manchester in brackets. Why not now? Still we should keep the word Ardwick as our premier name with this explanation. Carried unanimously; so in future we shall be known as the Ardwick and Manchester Dist. C.B.A. The new novice British rule (which affects Rule 12), in defining the novice, we give preference to amateurs and novices to show Brit. and For. birds in open competition, and allowed to win three first prizes without its affecting their status in our own society. Following this we had a table show of Nor. pairs; Mr. W. Robinson judged. Principal winners: Messrs. Buckley and Spencer. Next meeting table show of Yorks. pairs; judge, Mr. G. Pike; two sections, entry fee 6d., pay out 5d. sliding scale, special given. F.F. show July 6th.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

GRANGEMOUTH AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held Town Hall, Feb. 2, Mr. D. Smart (president) chair. Judging competition postponed owing to the poor turn-out of members. Mr. D. Smart promised a medal for runner-up to cup in the Norwich or Border section. When we had elected judges for annual show, we had a quiet discussion on birds, especially the Nor. I do hope members will turn out better and show the office bearers they mean business. Will be glad to hear of any new members.—J. Woodhouse, Sec.

Business through, an interesting judging competition was entered into by members, who judged the pairs on view, the one whose result came nearest judge's to win the competition; this was won by the chairman, Mr. Dent, and some of the younger members suggested that a handicap be placed on the old hands in future. Principal winners:—In the open section for Nor., Mr. R. Anderton: in the novice section, Mr. T. Burton. Mr. W. Sherrington (a former member, re-elected a member again) judged. WARRINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held 25th January, Blue Bell Saleroom, Mr. W. Weston presiding. Present: Messrs. Knowles, Warburton, Weston, Barnett, Hardy, Clare, Wilkinson, Pitchford, and Secretary. Balance-sheets for open show and 1911 presented and adopted, audited by Messrs. Knowles and Warburton; there was a nice little balance on the show account, altogether leaving a balance £9 5s. 6d.—very creditable, seeing we only had £2 5s. 9d. with which to begin the year. The society is in the most flourishing condition it has ever been in, which speaks well for the executive. Three new members proposed (Messrs. P. Clare, J. Buckley, and G. Mounfield), and others are joining next month. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to hold a pair show following Thursday, Mr. Knowles judging. Entry fee 6d. per cage, to be divided between 1st and 2nd pairs, 4d. and 2d. Messrs. Knowles, Hardy, Weston, and Nelson each gave 2s. 6d. special for best pair in each section, Mr. Nelson giving best Border and not competing for same. Mr. Knowles kindly promised a lecture at our next meeting on "Rearing Canaries"; I trust there will be a good muster, especially of novices, as they are bound to get some useful tips for the coming season. Also decided to hold open show on our old date, November 9th.—G. M. Nelson, Sec.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

you will ever want to know about the breeding, rearing, and keeping in healthy condition of your songsters. You will never be at a loss if you own and use this one book. If it is a question of mating, pairing, sitting, hatching, rearing, feeding, feeding or breeding for colour, care of plumage, cages, nests, or aviaries, pedigree or line breeding—the answer is here. And the book also gives you magnificent plates, carefully coloured according to nature, which are not merely ornamental, but are of practical value in showing you exactly what to breed to. For these pictures show the standard types of prize birds to-day. This one compact book covers the whole ground. It teaches you everything there is to learn.

ABOUT CANARIES, HYBRIDS AND BRITISH BIRDS.

of every description. The valuable section "On the Breeding of Hybrids from two British Birds" not only tells you what has been done in this interesting field of experimental practice, but it gives a suggestive list of the crosses yet to be secured.

This book includes detailed instructions for the management of Hybrids; and its use will, no doubt, enable many—who have not hitherto succeeded in producing results for the time and money they have expended on their cage-birds—to secure some of the rare crosses that occasionally reward the patient breeder—crosses which combine the charm of both parents.

CINNAMON CANARIES (three lovely specimens in an Aviary).
NORWICH CANARIES (three specimens).
LANCASHIRE CANARIES (two specimens).
YORKSHIRE CANARIES (four specimens).
BRITISH FINCHES (four specimens).
THRUSH, BLACKBIRD, Etc. (three specimens).
BORDER FANCY CANARIES (four specimens).
LIZARD CANARIES (three specimens).
WARBLERS (four specimens).
LARK, WAGTAIL, PIPIT, Etc.

Thirty-Four Coloured Plates in all.

What our Subscribers Say!

MR. BARKER (of East Ham) writes:—
"'Canaries and British Birds' safely to hand. I am well satisfied with the books; I think there is as much here as anyone could wish to know. I will recommend it to my fellow mates."

MR. WINKNY (Belfast):—
"I am much pleased with the books."

MR. CADDEN (Londonderry):—
"I received your handsome book, and am delighted with it."

MR. McLINDEN (Dublin):—
"I have been much interested in your beautiful book; it should be in the possession of every lover of songsters. I think it will commend itself not only to the past master in bird-keeping, but will be invaluable to the amateur, since it is written in such simple language as to be easily understood. The chapters on Rearing, Pairing, and Cage-making are very explicit, and the coloured plates are to my mind simply superb, while the other illustrations are all that could be desired."

MR. CROSSLAND (Todmorden):—

FANCIERS BE WARNED

in time. Read this.—"Mr. H. Oxford,—Dear Sir.—I am sending for six double breeding cage sets, and should like them as soon as possible. The reason I want them quickly is this:—I wanted six double breeding cages, and not being able to make them up myself at the time, I had them made by a well-known advertiser. Well, I have had to burn them, as they were absolutely disgraceful.—Yours truly, J. Mitchell, 4, Parry Place, Plumstead, S.E." Fanciers do not send for cages at ridiculously low prices. IMITATION is said to be the sincerest form of flattery, but to steal a man's ideas and brain I call the meanest form of theft. Old readers of "Cage Birds" know that I was first man to put the improved all metal spring net trap on the market in its present form, and am still the only one who has not cut down the quality to reduce price. My net traps are guaranteed entirely self-acting, can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and call bird can be used inside them if required. These are the only net trap used by Mr. Jeffrey, England's largest Nightingale catcher, size 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 by 14 inches, 9d. each, postage 2d. extra on all. Clap nets, Lark nets, Sparrow nets, loose netting, bird lime, and everything else required by catchers always in stock, full list sent on receipt stamp. Kindly note none of my appliances are made by child labour; only thoroughly practical men being employed. I supply every professional catcher of note throughout the country, and have published more testimonials in one week than all my imitators have in a year. See British Bird and Roller Canary columns for further advertisements.

THE HALL MARK

of quality in Roller Canaries is the name "Weber." If you get a Weber's Leipzig Roller you may depend upon having a bird that is absolutely "top notch." For years past I have publicly stated that for quality of song, variety and number of changes, and lowness of price, no other Roller on the market can approach the Leipzig Roller, of which I am sole importer. Won't you test the truth of this statement by having one on week's trial, and test it side by side against any other higher priced one from elsewhere. It does not matter if you have no intention of buying the bird, I shall be pleased to send it just the same. I now have about 1,500 genuine Leipzig Roller cocks, all 1911 bred birds, and guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, flute, and gong notes, etc., etc., and warranted entirely free from titlark, chopping, or other objectionable notes whatever, price 8/- and 9/- each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell tours, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 5/- each, two 5/6. I also have a few extra special contest Roller cocks, in glorious song, at 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are guaranteed of the original Seifert blood; their song is exceptionally soft and mellow, which is like a cascade of ever-flowing melody. Hens of same strain as contest cocks, 4/- each, two 7/6. I also hold a very large stock of loud free singing Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song day and gaslight, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where plenty of loud song is required, price 6/- each. Hartz hens, 2/6 each, two 4/-; singing-box cages, 1/6 each. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. Following few letters are entirely unsolicited, and will give an idea of quality of Leipzig Rollers. "16, Thomas St., Tonypandy, Feb. 19.—Sir, I am quite satisfied with Leipzig Roller you sent on Dec. 1st. He is a grand songster, singing all day and every day. Thanking you for splendid bird and straightforward dealing with strangers.—Yours, D. Davies." "Victoria St., Stocksbridge, nr. Sheffield, Feb. 16.—Sir, Please send another Roller as good as one you sent a year ago. He has turned out a splendid songster, and all who have heard him say so.—Yours, W. Rodgers." "Chester-le-Street, Feb. 16.—Sir, Roller and cage arrived safe, and am quite satisfied. Bird gives every satisfaction. Unpacked 9 in morning, and singing grandly in afternoon. Thank you very much.—Yours, J. Sewell, senr." "Phyllis St., Barry Island, Feb. 17.—Sir, I am more than satisfied with Roller. You will take some beating with Rollers, as I have paid £2 for one and not near as good as yours, at 12/6.—Yours, Fred Westall." "65, Balfour Rd., Normanton, Feb. 17.—Sir, Contest Roller doing splendidly. I am highly satisfied; he is a gem. I again thank you for such a beautiful songster. It's the best I've heard lately.—Yours G. Taylor." "Beech View, Whaley Bridge, Feb. 14—Sir, Roller I had from you on Dec. 13th is singing splendidly and I am very pleased, as it sings night and day. Please send two hens.—Yours, F. Wyld." "87, Connsbrook Avenue, Belfast, Feb. 7.—Sir, Please send following. I may say Roller I had 4 years ago is still singing hard every day.—Yours, T. McCaughan." "17, Durham-St., Scarborough, Feb. 5th.—Sir, Please send following. I must tell you I got a cock Roller from you last season, and he gives us more than satisfaction. Grand songster.—Yours, C. Youngman." Please note.—Every genuine Weber's Leipzig Roller is stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and I am the only importer of this strain. They can not be obtained only from me. All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages, and sent on full week's trial at my risk immediately on receipt of cash, if same is deposited with Editor, and unless you get perfect satisfaction and your every expectation realised, your money is refunded in full.

Vice-chairman: Mr. T. Almond (one of our late chairmen) again brought into harness. Secretary: Mr. Holden having tendered his resignation at previous meeting, 3 or 4 names were proposed, but none seemed inclined to accept, and after some little discussion, Mr. J. In taking office he expects to have the united support of all members, and hopes the year 1912 may prove the best Gateshead Society has had. Treasurer: Mr. T. Almond; Committee also elected. Show date fixed for 13th and 14th Dec. Will other societies please note? Mr. W. Longstaff's resignation considered, he having been a member for over 12 years, and one of our best supporters. SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Membership for 1912: R. Carmyllie (Broughty Ferry), H. Crawford (Helensburgh), R. Wright (Greenock), J. Hogg (Oakley), W. McClure, E. B. Bullions, and T. Smith (Glasgow). Membership cards are in course of circulation, and the executive would like a hearty response. They recognise that to become an associate of the Derby is a strong inspiration to breed superior Scotch Fancy Canaries. Secretary will be pleased to send membership cards to gentlemen who wish to join, or may have a friend who would like to participate in the annual show in September. R. Wright, chairman; County Councillor J. Hogg, vice-president; Thomas Smith, secretary and treasurer, 10, Lochside Street, Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Judging competition held at headquarters, after the usual business, on Feb. 12th, numerous members competing. The only birds staged were four Norwich—the property of the Hon. Sec. (Mr. Priest). The Chairman (Mr. W. H. Vale) made the final awards, and not a single member's judging paper agreed with his. Four members tied for 1st, and the four members judged again for the sexes of the birds; this time Mr. Wildbore was placed 1st, Messrs. Askew and Hose tieing for 2nd and 3rd. The latter competition caused considerable speculation as to the sex of one bird, but it was finally agreed it was a young cock. Mrs. Thynne (Thames Ditton) and Mr. Longden (Swansea) were elected vice-president and member respectively. An intimation was received from the landlord of the Avondale Hall that the room in which the small shows are held by the Society would not be available on Feb. 24th, owing to the whist drive craze in the neighbourhood. After discussion, it was arranged to hold pair show at "The Clock House" Hotel, Clapham Park Road.—S. A. Sandy.

AMALGAMATED YORKSHIRE SOCIETIES' TEA AND PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

Tickets for this annual event are now in the hands of the following Specialist Club Secretaries: Messrs. F. Hammond, Open Norwich Plainhead Club; J. Greaves, Yorkshire Canary Club; F. Armstrong, National Green Marked Y.C.C.; S. B. Grayshon, Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C.; J. Lane, Yorks County British Bird and M.C.; and H. Hill, Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.; and all those intending to be present at the tea should get into touch with any of the above gentlemen immediately, or otherwise communicate at once with H. Hill, who will be very pleased to make all necessary arrangements for visitors in order that they shall not be disappointed. This annual event during the past few years has been well attended, and an early application for tickets is essential. Tea will be on tables at 4.30 prompt, price 1s. 3d. per head, social evening to commence at 6 o'clock prompt. Good talent provided, magnificent array of prizes, enjoyable company. Don't forget date and place: March 9th, at Market Tavern, Bradford.—H. Hill, Secretary.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath, 14th Feb., Mr. E. T. Willmott in chair, supported by the Vice-Chairman, Mr. Huges and a splendid gathering. Mr. Bayliss was made a member. Balance sheet passed after a small item had been removed. A balance is carried forward of £9 5s. The Chairman considered it a splendid result, and with the Society increasing in popularity, they could look forward to the coming year with pleasure and pride. Decided, to hold a pair show and social evening Feb. 24th, Mr. G. Baker judge; birds staged by 6 at latest. Committee please attend to hold a special meeting, also to act as stewards and allot the numerous useful specials. An interesting judging competition is being prepared, and a special, value 4s., is given, also a 5s. special for most entries. Note: The open show rule will be used for the first time at this show. Public admitted free, and we shall welcome any fancier or friend. Many useful suggestions had to be left over, including Mr. Jones' proposition that the Society purchase two cups (one for each section) by voluntary subs., to act as challenge cups for members' competition at all shows; and several other members are anxious to form a fund at about 1s. per month, so that a pleasant day may be spent at the annual Crystal Palace show. It is surprising the number of ideas brought forward by members attending meetings. Decided, to have all important items settled at March meeting. Mr. Jeffery was then introduced by the Chairman to give us his lecture on "The British Bird, its treatment in feeding, etc." Every member was delighted with Mr. Jeffery's lecture. He dealt chiefly with the Softbill birds, and gave some valuable hints on the feeding and rearing of Nightingales—a great favourite with the speaker—and how to pair and breed the birds, and make a correct aviary, were amongst the special tit-bits of the discourse. Chairman thanked Mr. Jeffery, who suitably responded. Meeting closed by the Secretary proposing a very deep and heartfelt vote of sympathy to the Chairman on the great loss he had sustained through the death of his wife. This was passed, the members standing in silence.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

KIPPAX F. AND F.S.

General meeting, held Commercial Hotel, Feb. 19. Decided, to change headquarters to a more suitable place—the Commercial Hotel. Also to abandon the old title and call it the Kippax and Dis. Linnet Club. Mr. O. Potter presided. Officials elected: O. Potter, president; W. Partridge, treasurer. (re-elected): R. Plows, secretary, in place of J. W. Henshaw, who is going abroad (the members wish him luck in his new venture on foreign soil); committee, J. Wallace, J. Nicholson, J. W. Smith, G. Lambert, and Exley. General meeting, Feb. 25, 7 p.m. Members' sing, March 2nd, first bird hung 3.15 p.m. Members please note that all correspondence for Kippax Linnet Club must be sent to me.—R. Plows, Hon. Sec., Kippax and Dis. Linnet Club, High Street, Kippax, near Leeds.

Mr. A. Wellings will judge our annual open show on Boxing Day, Dec. 26 next, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec. Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S.

A balance of £3 14s. 3d. is carried into the 1912 accounts of the Kilmarnock C.B.F.C., showing an advance on the previous year's amount of £1 14s.

I have been elected secretary of the Bingley O.S., and all correspondence to the society should be addressed to me at 27, Knight St., Bingley, writes Mr. Asa Livesay.

A cash balance of £8 19s. for 1911 has given the members of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis. O.S. every satisfaction, thanks to the work of the sec. (Mr. J. R. Colville) and the other officials of the society.

The first of the Great Horton Good Intent O.S. 1912 shows for members was held on Feb. 10. Four others are, we understand, to be held, including two for First Feather birds on June 15 and July 13.

Will secretaries please note that our Young Bird Show is fixed for July 2, Mr. George Gardner judging? writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec. Our annual Autumn Show is fixed for Nov. 5; Mr. J. Robson, judge.

My copies of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL are to hand, writes Mr. R. Charleson, sec. of the Leigh and Dist. C.B.S. The ANNUAL is a very useful directory if one wishes to find anything of importance regarding birdy matters.

An attractive programme of events for 1912 has been issued by the Walkley and Dis. C.B.S. It includes lectures on Canaries and British birds, washing exhibitions, etc., and should be an inducement to local fanciers to join.

We hear that the very old-established business carried on by the late Mr. J. Flower (one of the defendants in the well-known "Preston and Flower Case") in Sclater Street, Shoreditch, is now being conducted by his son.

Clean prize cards, sales and prize money, medals and specials have been sent out, the diplomas to follow next week, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden, Crystal Palace Show Manager. Anyone inadvertently overlooked should write me at once.

I am a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS, and I think it is an excellent paper. Your coloured plates are very good. I have had the Birthday Number ones framed. By the way, that was a splendid issue!—P. John Sievwright Streatham, London, S.W.).

Your Birthday Number was the first issue I had taken of CAGE BIRDS. I thought it was splendid. I take "C.B." now every week, and I intend to take it every week onwards, as I find it contains valuable information.—Wm. Spencer (Liverpool).

Mr. J. W. Reid, of 218, Ladykirk Road, Newcastle, has been appointed secretary and treasurer of Newcastle C.B.S., and all communications should be addressed to him after March 7th 1912, writes Mr. J. E. Atkinson, retiring secretary and future show manager.

The judges appointed for our season's shows are:—Nest Feather, June 29, Mr. J. C. Barnes; Members', Oct. 26, Mr. J. H. Roe; Annual Open, Dec. 14, Messrs. J. Robson and H. W. Battye; all three shows to be held in the Montgomery Hall, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assist. sec. of the Sheffield C.B.S.

At the annual general meeting of the Scottish National C.B.S., to be held this Saturday (Feb. 24), an abstract of accounts will be presented showing an income of £384 6s., and a credit balance of £49 18s. 10d. The latter amount shows a somewhat considerable decrease compared with the 1911 balance—due, we believe, to decreased receipts at the New Year Show.

The Windhill, Shipley O.S. balance sheet and statement of accounts for 1911 discloses a credit balance of £1 9s. 8½d., which, in view of a loss on the open show of £5 10s., is a very creditable result, and it is also more than double the amount brought into the accounts from 1910.

Secretaries and others are asked to note the following changes of address:—Mr. Alex. Harris from High Street, Montrose, to 21, Francis Street, Lochgelly, Fife; and Mr. J. R. Crossley (sec. of Blackpool and Fylde C.B.F.S.) from Handsworth Road to 121, High Street, Blackpool.

Blackpool and Fylde C.B.F.S. are holding a Table Show of British birds on March 1, at 8.30, writes Mr. J. R. Crossley, sec. All fanciers are invited, and any fancier wishing to be a member can do so by giving his name to the secretary or to any of the officers; sub., 4s. per annum.

Owing to unfavourable replies received from the men appointed to judge, I am unable to announce name of lecturer for our Roller contest, but I shall try to get a capable man on the scene at the time stated in our notice, writes Mr. Jas. Cope, hon. sec. of the Oldham C.B.S. I hope to have all Roller fanciers and friends in the district with us, also a good number of birds.

I regret having to inform you of the resignation of the sec. of the Whitburn C.B.S. (Mr. Thos. Duncan), writes Mr. Robert Lambie, The Aviaries, Whitburn, Linlithgowshire. I have been appointed secretary in his place, and I hope, with the assistance of our hard-working committee and the support of the Fancy, and notwithstanding the loss of £8 on our last show, to be able again to place our show in a good financial position.

OBITUARY.

Mr. H. PRITCHARD (Hampstead, N.W.).

It is with regret, writes Mr. W. Kirby (Hampstead) that I have to inform you of the death of an Indian Mutiny veteran in the person of Mr. H. Pritchard, who died on Feb. 15, and was buried with semi-military honours at Hampstead Cemetery on Feb. 20. Birdy men in Hampstead, Highgate, and North London will be the poorer by his death, for as a Linnet and Chaffinch fancier his advice was sought by many of those young in the Fancy. The deceased lived to the good old age of eighty-two years. Our sympathy as fanciers goes out to his brother and nephews at Colchester and Woodham Mortimer, who, I am sure, must be proud of being connected with such a genuine supporter of the Fancy.

The 1911 balance sheet of the Newcastle C.B.S. shows a credit balance of 13s. 6d., but against this there is an item of £2 10s. 8d. overdraft at bank. We are, however, informed by the secretary that a number of small accounts have yet to be collected, which will just about clear the debit balance.

Mr. H. Hill, secretary of the Bradford National Cage Bird Show, writes: Kindly alter our show date in the "Fixed Shows" column in CAGE BIRDS to read December 6, 7, and 9, as my committee have decided to extend the show to the Monday in order that no delay will be caused in getting all exhibits back again. We found it very inconvenient in many ways at our last show to close on the Saturday, especially for birds coming from a long distance, these having to be kept over to the Monday morning; hence our decision to extend the show over the week-end.

"Bird Notes" for February contains, besides notes on the Scottish National and the Crystal Palace Shows by Messrs. Goodchild and Page respectively (both illustrated by Mr. Goodchild), articles on the "Breeding of the Red Ground Dove," by Mr. R. Suggitt; "Breeding of the Silver-eared Mesia," by Mr. O. Millsum; and of the Madagascar Love-Bird by Mrs. C. M. Davidson. Mr. Hopkinson continues his account of the "Birds of Gambia,' Mr. S. Williams, jun., contributes a chapter on the treatment of the Blue-crowned Conure, and Mr. Salt (the manager of Sir William Treloar's Cripples Hospital) writes of the birds in the aviaries at that institution, most of which were presented by members of the Foreign Bird Club.

The next annual show of the Morpeth and Dis. C.B.S. is fixed for Oct. 12, when Mr. H. W. Battye and Mr. A. Brown will judge, writes Mr. E. Cowling, the sec. Fanciers of the district wishing to join this flourishing society should communicate with me without delay.

My 1912 CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is ordered through the secretary of the Oldham C.B.S., writes Mr. J. Hampshire (Oldham). I have every confidence in its success, and I advise every fancier to order one at once, as no bird room is complete without the ANNUAL.

In sending us particulars of his society for CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, Mr. R. Townsend, sec. of the Heptonstall and Dis. C.B.S., writes: I am only too pleased to send you the enclosed, as I think it an excellent idea; indeed, the ANNUAL is excellent all through.

Readers in California will be interested to hear that Mr. L. M. Grider (of "Birdland," claimed to be the ideal bird store of the country) has opened a branch at 216, Mercantile Place, Los Angeles, with a full stock of birds, cages, foods, etc

We hear that Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) has been appointed as judge at the following shows, viz.: Sheffield C.B.S., Nest Feather Show June 29; Sheffield O.S. Nest Feather Show, July 6; Newcastle Open Show, Oct. 18; Windhill (Yorks Union Show), Oct. 26, 1912; and Rotherham Open Show, Dec. 7.

Will secretaries please note dates, so as to avoid clashing? Same classification for novices as for champions throughout. The following friends have just joined the society:—Messrs. Ward, J. Grisdale, Wilmot, H. Bell, L. Dykes, Mrs. Thurling, and Mrs. Salter. Anyone intending to join should apply to the secretary at once, as another long list comes up for election early in March.

The Wren's Early Start.

A Wren's nest containing five healthy young birds was discovered in the vicinity of Eliock House, Sanquhar, the other day. This is particularly early in the season.

The Late Annan Show.

The committee of Annan Show request all winning exhibitors who have not received their prizes to make known same to the chairman, Mr. Johnstone, Johnstone Street, Annan.

Congratulated by His Friends.

We were pleased to see that Mr. O. Wilson, a member of the Bury and Dis. C.B.S., was amongst the successful exhibitors at the late Crystal Palace Show, writes Mr. H. Jameson, the sec., winning 2nd prize in the Buff Unflig. Norwich class—a marvellous collection of 26 birds—being beaten for first honours by Mr. Davies, who took the honour for best bird in show.

Wimbledon's New Cup.

The handsome silver cup presented to the Wimbledon C.B.S. by Mrs. L. M. Thynne, of Thames Ditton, was on view at the recent Pair Show. It was very much admired by the big company assembled, and should assist the popularity of the Borders, to which section it was given for competition. Already the society have many members interested in the "Wee Gems."

A Palace Show Protest: Result of the Enquiry.

We hear that as a result of the investigation by the L. and P.O.S. committee into the protest lodged against the light Linnet Mule (on the ground that marked flight feathers were missing), shown by Mr. G. Lawrance, of Coventry, at the last Palace Show (details of which were given in our report), the protest was upheld, and the exhibitor in question has been suspended from the society for twelve months from Feb. 15 last, and reported to the National British Bird and Mule Club.

News from Scotch Fancy Circles.

Mr. Robert Carmyllie, of Broughty Ferry, has added four pairs of Scotch Fancy Canaries to his stock. He has bred many really good birds, and we wish him every success with the latest acquisitions.

Mr. McClure, the famous breeder, has a splendid collection of Scotch Fancy Canaries. He has determined to breed something vastly better than what he has ever produced before, and he has reared some "guid anes."

Mr. A. H. Maclean, of Balloch, has gathered together a miscellaneous collection of birds, including several fine Scotch Fancy Canaries. He is secretary of the Vale of Leven O.A. Mr. Maclean means to succeed in 1912.

Mr. Montgomery has been laid aside from his usual calling (confined to bed for four weeks), but has recovered so far that he is able to sit up for a few hours daily. We wish him a speedy and permanent recovery. He has four pairs of bonny Scotch Fancy Canaries, which are his favourites.

Our "Nutshells" Appreciated.

"Please send on another fifteen dozen 'Nutshell' Booklets same as last week. They sell like wild fire. Cheque enclosed for same.—H. E. Cracknell, manager to J. Crosby and Son, 48, High Street, Gateshead."

A Regrettable Misfortune.

We regret to learn that one of London's most enthusiastic and respected lady exhibitors, Mrs. L. M. Thynne, has had the misfortune to have to enter a private hospital to undergo an operation of a rather serious nature. This, we are pleased to say, has been successfully performed. Mrs. Thynne's many friends will join us in wishing her a quick recovery and a complete restoration to health.

An Offer to Readers.

Readers should not fail to peruse the advertisement of the Waverley Book Coy., Ltd., which appears on page 187 of this week's issue. It contains an offer, made on the fairest and most equitable terms, which is of the greatest interest to all keepers of birds, and of which they should take immediate advantage. If they wish to do so, they can look over specimen pages and illustrations before deciding to purchase, and those will be sent on application (to 7 and 8, Old Bailey, London, E.C.) absolutely without charge.

Astonishing Railway Delays.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden informs us that he has had some difficulty in convincing certain exhibitors that their birds left the Palace Show early on Tuesday night, owing to a few packages not reaching home until some time after they might have done. He encloses us the appended postcard, which shows what the railway companies can do in the matter of "quick transit":—"Feb. 8, 1912.—Mr. J. W. Ramsden.—Dear Sir,—I received birds safe last night, per 6.50 p.m. train. I notice by the way-bill that they were despatched the same time as Mr. Sheldon's, which arrived here at 8.40 a.m. So it is not you who is to blame. Thanking you for your prompt reply.—I remain, yours truly, D. G. Jones (Llandudno)."

A Belgian Amateur's Success.

The sixth annual show of the Ornithological Society of Verviers, Belgium, was held on Jan. 13, 14, and 15 last, and was the greatest success on record. Mons. Pauwels had a grand display of his rare exotic birds, which were much admired. Mons. Emile Ruhl, the much-respected and venerable president and originator of the society, had a grand team forward, and among many other wins were 1st, 2nd, and 3rd for foreign Goldfinches in a class of forty-two entries, comprising many wonderful specimens. His winner was also awarded the 300-franc silver cup for the finest bird in the show—truly a wonderful performance. Many of our readers will remember Mons. Ruhl, as he has been a familiar figure at the Crystal Palace shows for nearly forty years. We wish him long life, and trust he may be spared for years to come to encourage the hobby of bird-keeping, at which he is so great an adept.

Gems from Australia.

A truly magnificent consignment of Australian Finches, etc., recently arrived at the well-known establishment of Messrs. De Von and Co. (114, Bethnal Green Road, London, E.), being specially imported direct by this noted firm, and totalling over 6,000 birds. They had a very favourable journey, and hardly a bird was lost en route. We have seen many consignments in the past, but never one in which the birds landed in such exceptionally fine condition, almost every one being in excellent feather and all in perfect health. Gouldians (both Black and Red-headed), Long-tailed Grass, Double-banded (Bicheno), Zebra, and the rare Crimson and Pectoral Finches are included, and English aviculturists desirous of obtaining specimens should write Messrs. De Von at once, as this consignment is likely to be the last, owing to the law lately passed preventing the exportation of these birds from Australia.

Off to Canada.

Mr. John Fairley, the well-known breeder and exhibitor of Belgian Canaries, will leave Coatbridge on March 2 for Parkdale, Tofonto. For many years Mr. Fairley has scarcely had fewer than 200 of the highest-bred Canaries in his possession at one time, says the "Airdrie and Coatbridge Advertiser." He holds the certificate for securing in one year three first prizes at the three leading shows in Scotland, England, and Ireland. Besides this great honour, Mr. Fairley has secured hundreds of prizes at all the leading shows in the kingdom. He has been first at London, Edinburgh, Belfast, Gateshead, Manchester, Paisley, and all local shows. He has decided to take fifty of his "gems" across the seas, where he is sure to gain further honours in the bird world. We are sure that the famous Coatbridge bird fancier will carry with him in his sojourn across the seas the best wishes of his many friends. There is every indication that a "right royal" welcome awaits him in Toronto from the fanciers there.

How Winning Norwich Plainheads are Bred.

By Messrs. JEFFRIES and HUSBAND.
(Hartforth, Yorks.)

Instructive notes upon methods of feeding management, etc., by the exhibitors of the two birds portrayed on our frontispiece this week.

FIRST of all just a few words about cages. We use all double breeders, which are much better in every way than the single ones, as when the breeding season is over and you give them all a good clean out, they will do very well for flight or store cages. They are also very handy for moulting birds in, and for keeping all exhibition stock in, as these are best kept by themselves, so as not to get damaged or plucked by other birds.

We generally pair up about the last week in February or the first week in March; but, mind you, first all your cock birds should be well on song, and the hens flapping their wings, also uttering a merry "Chip, chip," continually flying up and down the flight cages. It is of no use pairing up till birds are quite ready. We feed them generally on three parts best canary seed to one part German rape. But for getting birds in condition we give egg food twice a week, also a little mixture of hemp, millet, rape, teazel, niger, charl, and maw seeds, which we find soon brings all backward birds into breeding condition. About every two days we give this mixture: A few drops of Parrishes Chemical Food in drinking water; we put great faith in this, as it aets as a good tonic.

Pairing and Starting.

We usually pair yellow to buff, and ticked birds to clears. We like type and quality on the hen's side; but where either the cocks or hens fail in certain points we try to remedy the faults by mates to them that are good in these points, so that the youngsters are very near the mark. So far, we have had some very fair results.

We find we have very little trouble when starting to pair up. When they are put in the breeding cages they must have their nails and beaks trimmed. The second day after putting the birds together, we supply them with an earthenware nest-pan with felt inside, also moss and cow-hair, not forgetting to give each a good piece of cuttle-fish bone. As soon as we see the hen starting building in earnest we give five drops of a mixture of half gin and half glycerine; this we find very good for preventing egg-binding. We have only lost one hen through egg binding, and it was before we started with the mixture.

As soon as the hen has finished building, and about two days before she lays, she will be hopping about in a very sleepy manner, and looking much puffed out as well. The hen generally sits on the nest all one day and night; and an egg may be expected in the morning. The hen should be given a pinch of maw seed each night after she has built her nest and she lays her first egg. We also take all eggs out and put a dummy egg in the place of each one taken away, till the evening the third egg is laid. We find that by doing this the birds all hatch out about the same time. Before we sit the hen on her own eggs we dust the nest out with Keating's Powder. If everything goes well the youngsters nearly always come out on the thirteenth evening. But on the twelth day of incubation we immerse the eggs in warm water for about half a minute as by doing this we find we are very seldom troubled with birds dying in shell. We also consider it a good thing to give the hen a bath twice a week, with a pinch of salt in it; she seems very much fresher after it.

How the Young Are Fed.

We do not take the cock birds away, as we find the hens then seem to rear the young much better; and the cock birds also take to them better. On the 13th day we supply the parents with a little yolk of egg only, just passed through a sieve. This we continue for two days after the young have arrived. On the third day we give all the egg (yolk and white) mixed with a little of Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food—enough to make it crumbly moist. Also we add a little maw seed. We think the Cod Liver Oil Food is better than biscuits or ordinary bread-crumbs, and we consider too, that the old birds feed better on it and the young fledge quicker. We also give a little crushed hemp when the young are abont a week old, and, of course, increase the quantity of Cod Liver Oil Food put to the egg as the youngsters get larger.

We give for green food lettuce or dandelion; lettnce for preference; but only very young leaves. Should the old birds fall off in the feeding about the twelth or fourteenth day a little teazle seed scalded and dried with a cloth and given in a separate pan will generally keep them up to their duties. About the twelth day the nest-pan should be changed for a clean one; mind and boil the nest-pans before using them again. On about the 18th or the 20th day it is best to remove the nest and young from the hanger, and place them on the floor of the cage, as by this time the hen will be thinking of a second brood. She must be supplied with a clean nest-pan and nesting materials—plenty of it, or she may fancy the downy feathers of the first brood.

If she should start "plucking" it will be safer to remove the young to a nursery cage, where the cock bird will attend to their wants. But if the hen is all right and does not attempt "plucking," we think it best to leave them with the parents until they are a month old. Then when they start cracking the seed it is time they were put in a flight cage; but still continue to give them a supply of egg food (nice and dry) and a mixture of canary and rape of equal parts. When they are cracking this nicely, bring them on to a plain diet of canary seed only, and a little rape every second day and a pinch of hemp twice a week. Also, they must be kept clean, and be well supplied with gritty sand. We think if fanciers will attend to this, very few deaths will occur. Occasionally one or two may be noticed very much puffed out and very unwell. They should at once be taken out and placed in a cage by themselves, and be given a little bread scalded with milk, a pinch of sugar and a pinch of maw seed; also add a little Epsom Salts (as much as will lie on a sixpence) to the drinking water, and in a day or two this will always put matters right.

Obtaining the Finished Article.

Colour-feeding we start when the youngsters are about seven or eight weeks old, giving it, say, twice a week. When one sees a few feathers about the cage bottom, it is time they had the colour-food every day. We think it best to put them in couples when colour-feeding and to continue giving it a little stronger each day till it is at full strength; then we continue till moult is finished. It is also advisable to cover the cage with a muslin cover or put a darkish cover over the window to keep the strong rays of the sun out, it being best to keep the cages dark. We keep the seed boxes on, but only partly filled and with canary seed only. We give green food three times a week, also a piece of boiled carrot twice a week; and a little sulphate of iron should be given in the drinking water twice a week—a piece about as large as a pea to a wineglassful of water. The great secret of successful moulting is to keep the birds thoroughly clean, as most fanciers know. We give a bath twice a week. When all are over the moult, pick out any likely to be of use for show or as breeders. The rest may be sold to merchants.

A FORE-TASTE OF THE SPRING.

During the coming season we are sure to hear of many Robins' nests built in curious situations. The one in our photograph was found in an old kettle lying in a hedge-bottom.

Early Preparations for the Breeding Season.

By A. THOMAS (Frimley).

An account of how the author tackles certain work—work which every Bird-breeder should start upon at once.

BEFORE commencing to breed, I overhaul and disinfect all my cages, doing one or two each day, according to the time I have at my disposal, and here I will take the opportunity of putting in that very wise saying "That if a job is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well." To hurry through this job is courting disaster in the breeding season. I commence by removing all perches, sand trays, tit-bit drawers, etc. Having got a large bath of water as hot as I can bear to use, I place cage right inside for a few minutes, then I commence to scrub it with some strong carbolic soap. After thoroughly scrubbing inside and out, I commence on the perches and sand trays, and treat them similarly. When dry again (I do the drying outdoors in suitable weather) I soak them well with paraffin oil, as this is one of the best and cheapest disinfectants one can obtain. When again dry the cage is ready for use. It will be found that with cleanliness during the breeding season red mite seldom attack cages so prepared.

Points About the Cages.

Having prepared your cages, place them where they will receive the full light and sunshine. When the latter is too strong, it may be modified by drawing down the blind if necessary or by placing a cloth over window; but in doing this, leave plenty of light in the room. This, however, is a thing which is seldom necessary in most parts of England.

The partition or compartment cage has many advantages over the single breeder. If it is desired to remove the cock bird one may do it by simply putting in the partition in the case of the compartment cage, but in the single breeder one must remove the bird right from the cage. Very good double compartment breeding cages may be had for three or four shillings from many of the advertisers using CAGE BIRDS. The perches should not be less than ½in. wide and ⅜in. deep. The partitions I use for my own cages are all wood, but I keep a few, my own make, with wire along the bottom portion, so as to do away with the necessity of keeping a lot of nursery cages. When I have to remove the young from their parents on account of "plucking," I simply place the nest, if necessary, on the floor of cage on the other side of the partition; the old birds can then feed them through the wires.

Preparing the Birds for Breeding.

Having got our room ready, the cages overhauled and cleaned, we next turn our attention to the preparing of our stock. If we have taken the trouble of looking well after them during the winter there will be little difficulty experienced about this. Perhaps I had better tell you the way I treat my birds during the winter. I give them best Spanish canary seed as a staple diet. Every other day I give them a little summer rape, about a half-teaspoonful per bird, and three times a week a teaspoonful each of the following mixture: Two parts each of hemp and inga (or niger), one part each black rape and millet, and a half part each of linseed, teazle and maw seed. All Canaries enjoy a piece of boiled carrot, or a piece of suet occasionally. The latter is a splendid thing when the moult is finishing; it helps to tighten the plumage.

As a general rule with caged Canaries, and under ordinary circumstances, canary seed keeps the bowels moderately free; hemp, teazle, millet and maw seed are more constipating. Linseed, inga, black rape and new summer rape are all more or less relaxing. I give fresh water daily, and before I refill pots I rub them round with my finger and well rinse them. This reminds me of a visit I paid to a brother fancier about a month ago. Almost as soon as I arrived he invited me to go and see his birds. The first things I noticed were his water pots. On my asking him how often he changed the water, he replied, "Daily." The glasses were dirty with slime! I removed one, with his permission, and showed him the way I clean my glasses.

Extra Attention During Winter.

A little extra attention during the winter months will well repay you during the breeding season, for there is no doubt in my mind that your success or failure depends on the treatment of your birds during the winter.

I keep my cocks separate in large cages during the winter and my hens (about a dozen) in a large flight. I refer now, of course, to the stock I intend to keep for breeding purposes. The others I keep in cages according to value of bird. As I do not pair up my birds until about the last week in March or first week in April I give no egg food before the end of February. Then I give the hens about a teaspoonful each twice a week. The cocks come into condition much quicker than the hens, and require no egg food before the middle of March. Then I treat them the same as the hens.

Do not forget to keep the hens supplied with cuttlefish bone ad lib throughout the winter, and plenty of good gritty sand on the floor of the cage. Towards February allow a little extra inga seed, and you will have little or no trouble from that distressing ailment egg-binding. At the end of February you can begin and put your birds in their respective cages, placing the partition between them. Give the hen a little egg food about twice a week, and a little extra inga in addition to the ordinary diet used in the winter. Continue this treatment until the birds are both fit. The cock bird should have the same amount of egg food about the middle of March.

It will often be found that the birds come into breeding condition without the use of egg food; if they do, so much the better, as I do not believe in forcing a bird unless necessary. The hens require more watching at this time.

Should you see a hen getting ready too early, she is easily checked by stopping her egg food; if this is not sufficient, I stop all her extras, leaving her on her staple diet of plain Spanish canary seed only. This I have always found quite severe enough for the purpose.

When Birds are Ready for Pairing.

When I see a pair ready about the last week in March out comes the partition, and together they go. The hen when ready will be restless, flapping her wings a good deal and chirping or continually answering the cocks. To make sure, catch the hen and blow up the feathers at the vent; if the vent is very full and distended, there is no doubt about her being ready. I like my cock birds to be in full song, as then they appear to pair satisfactorily. A cock that seldom or never sings very often gives considerable trouble during the breeding season. Mind you, I do not say that the fact of a cock singing proves him ready for breeding; the only sure sign he gives you is when his vent is very prominent.

When my birds are like this, I clip the feathers away from the vent of the hen and I clip the nails of both birds, taking care not to cut them too high. This nail clipping does not hurt the birds, but it may often save you a valuable bird; a pricked egg causes the young bird inside to die almost immediately; and dragging an egg, or young one out of the nest can be traced to long nails.

I have often been asked which do I think is the best covering, sand or sawdust, for the cage floor? Personally, I think it is a matter of opinion. I have tried both well both have advantages and disadvantages. If we use sawdust, this must be pitch pine if possible, as it assists to keep down that pest of the bird-room (red mite), and it gives off a pleasant odour to the room. A young bird dragged out of the nest gets an easier fall, and will live longer struggling about on sawdust than it would on sand. Of course, if you are going to use sawdust then you must supply a tin with sand in each cage, as birds do not thrive without it. Again, when using sawdust, I find it gets blown about the room when the birds are flapping their wings or flying about; it also gets in the birds' food and water. You can, therefore, make you own choice.

Ending the Birds Quarrel.

I do not trouble about the birds quarrelling a little, when first put together, because if this becomes too severe, which is very rare, I simply separate them with a wire partition for a couple of days, and then let them have another try. This, I generally find, ends all serious dispute.

I usually put a nest in after about 6 or 7 days. Use sanitary nest pans and linings if you wish to keep down red mite, as when I used wooden nest-boxes I was constantly troubled with keeping down these pests, and, of course, I had to change my nests oftener. Always keep a tin of Keatings' insect powder in the bird room; it is one of the best red mite killers; use it in the nest.

Through a Bird-Room Window.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

This entertaining contribution upon Siberian Titmice is No. 20 of the New Series by this popular author and well-known aviculturist.

IT is not always possible to live up to one's reputation. I believe I am supposed to be invariably successful, either owing to luck or my immense aviaries; here then is a simple record of failure to encourage others. It is not for want of trying. As an old man once said to me after looking at my birds, "I don't think you'll ever set the Thames on fire, but you're one that'll keep striking matches when t'others go out." We mortals should chiefly live to talk to each other out of good will and fellowship, not for the sake of hearing revelations or being stimulated by witticisms, and I have generally found that it is the very ordinary person who appears to be disgusted with his contemporaries because they are not always strikingly original, and to satisfy whom the party at a country house should have included the Prophet Isaiah, Plato, Francis Bacon, and Voltaire. With this brief exordium, let me begin this paper. Some of my readers may know the following lines, written by a certain poet, concerning mice playing round a trap.

Alas! regardless of their fate,
The little creatures play;
No sense have they of ills to come,
Nor care beyond to-day.
Yet see how all around them wait
The ministers of human fate.

I behaved like the mice, and in my case the minister of fate was a bird-dealer, who once dwelt at Hull; but has since, I fear, retired into private life. One morning he wrote asking me, on one of his insinuating postcards, if I wanted some Northern Tits. With the audacity of a school miss for forbidden novels, I answered, "Yes." In order to make a man covet a thing, it is only necessary to write that they are difficult to obtain. It is the satisfaction of doing something which no one else has ever done that spurs one on. It was some such thought as this that led me to send for these Siberian Tits.

So Near and Yet So Far!

It seemed such a safe and easy way of getting a medal. Here were the birds; I had only to get them to breed, and the medal was mine. I almost felt like Lady Macbeth as she says to the dagger, "Is this a dagger that I see before me? Come let me clasp thee." Somehow, when the Tits arrived the medal did not seem such a dead certainty as I had pictured it; for the cock bird was suffering—not like myself with swelled head, but from swelled eye; he had also apparently been existing on a diet of peameal, and was altogether in a very parlous state. By judicious feeding I managed, as I thought, to pull him quite round, but, alas, after some weeks of perfect health, all the old symptoms returned with tenfold force, and nearly all the feathers came off his head. I went away for my holiday on a Monday morning in July with many sad forebodings.

On the Wednesday I received a letter from my youngest boy, direct and pointed in its simplicity. He evidently had no notion of breaking ill tidings gently. Some of us have heard of the old gardener who, when a favourite dog died in his master's absence, wrote somewhat as follows, on three separate postcards, with the evident intention of preparing his master for the blow about to fall. No. 1 ran: "Dear and Honoured Sir. Belle be very bad"; No. 2, "Belle be no better"; No. 3, "Belle be dead." My boy's letter ran as follows: "Dear Father, I don't know how it is with you, but everything here is going wrong. The cock Tit is dead. It is no use to worry; he had plenty of maggots; the hen is alright." Bang, then, had gone my chance of the medal. I recalled the words of an ancient dame I once knew: "We sometimes forgets that pride must 'ave a fall, an' no feather bed to fall on.' They say that every dog has his day, and every cat her afternoon, that day I got my evening.

Any intelligent man will understand that it was a situation calculated to amuse the ungodly, but without any real fun in it. My feelings belonged to that kind known as indescribable. My jaw fell like a signal flag, and the three queens, as they steered King Arthur to Avalon, could have afforded no sadder pageant than I was that morning, as I studied that letter.

Some day, of course, I hope to succeed. Why do we always hope for the possible? Why does the cat waste time sitting at a mouse-hole? Because she knows the mouse is there, and hopes it will come out presently. I knew that my mouse existed somewhere; perhaps, some day, he will come my way.

The Fruits of One's Labours.

Meanwhile, I can only write these notes for the guidance of those who may be lucky enough hereafter to light on Parus siberieus. That deep saying of the Master, "Other men labour, and ye are entered into their labours" is preeminently true of bird culture. The man who labours for himself and not for posterity, is a poor thing; he loves not the dignity of labour. There was a primæval England, a mighty forest, wherein wild beasts roamed and were scarcely kept under by those rude savages, our forefathers. Yet those savages cut the forest tracks, hewed down the first trees, fashioned the first caves. Later the tracks became roads; through infinite labour the forests were harnessed to man's use—not merely for brutes' shelter. The caves were not the caves, perchance the nucleus of cathedrals and grim castles?—other men's labours, into which, after centuries have rolled by, we calmly enter. No man lives for himself, or if he does, it is a very sorry existence. Hence I feel that in spite of my many failures,

THE GOLD-FRONTED GREEN BULBUL.

A Winner of numerous prizes for Messrs. Pitchford and Stocker (Stoke-on-Trent) at the leading exhibitions.

I have not lived in vain; aviculturally I have been a pioneer, and on my mistakes and over my aviary experience, future generations will press to glory.

The Siberian Tit is an inhabitant of the Northern parts of Europe and Asia. The outer surface of the bird is a deep ash colour; the quills, secondaries, and tail feathers edged with white; throat black; upper part of chest white; under side greyish white; slightly rufous on the flanks; bill and tarse lead colour, crown of the head black.

The birds, in marking, remind me very much of the English Blackcap or the American Catbird. The cock has rather a pretty song and warbles at the end of a branch waving his tail from side to side. The hen is much smaller in every way, and the spot under her chin is less than in the cock, and her wings are not so clearly edged with white.

Drawing the Line at Howling.

I felt very annoyed that the cock had seen fit to die; we all of us like to have someone to blame when things go wrong; but there's no one to throw the blame on when we've done it ourselves. In this particular case I felt that if I had stayed at home, things might have been different; but seeing I had elected to go, I didn't see clearly anyone I could blame except myself. I could have wept over my lost chances, but as a howler I am not a success. It has always appeared to me to be more the part of the man to do the best he can under the circumstances, without kicking up a row like a pig in a gate, and worrying other people to keep him out of the mud. The bird was dead, and all the crying in the world would not bring him back to life. I consoled myself with the thought that I still had the hen to admire.

Siberian Tits are exceedingly friendly little birds, and soon become perfectly tame, and will at any time take live food from the fingers. Like all Tits they run and climb among the branches in all sorts of strange positions.

I feed mine on my own soft feed mixture, and they require also a regular supply of maggots. Fortunately I can always get these at a fishing tackle shop at Leeds, winter or summer. Maggots are chilly things, and must be kept warm. In very severe weather the best place is the kitchen cupboard—so long as you are not found at it. Generally in about 40 minutes the aroma begins to rise, and then everybody goes running about and asking wildly, where is that awful stench coming from, there must be something "bad" somewhere. At first they try the pantry, meat, suet, dripping, all are suspiciously tested in turn. You catch fragments of conversation. No, the meat is perfectly sweet; no, it isn't the dripping; what in the world can it be?

Easing His Mind.

Presently they are near my cupboard; then the scent gets warm. I think it's in this corner. Then the cupboard door opens, and then I think it time to go out for a time. Generally when I return, I find the maggots have been thrown out into the garden, and I have to go to Leeds for a fresh supply. Once the man at the shop asked if I was fond of fishing? I said I hadn't touched a rod since I was a lad, and that then the rod had touched me. He looked so pained and surprised as to what I could need with a quart of maggots weekly, as I did not fish, that I felt obliged to enlighten him. I was afraid he would think I ate them, so I whispered across the counter, "Birds, I feed my birds on them." He looked quite relieved!

Tits are inordinately fond of maggots, and a good mealworm will send them wild with excitement. The way they eat a mealworm is heartrending to witness by an onlooker, as doubtless it is to the mealworm! They get hold of him by one end, and they eat him up steadily bit by bit; the last part often being very much alive when the fore part has been long swallowed. They have also a curious habit of hiding what they cannot eat at the time. I have often watched mine take a maggot to a hollow branch of elder and put him down, then ram him in tight, and after a time go and fetch him out and eat him with the same gusto as an old lady eats oysters, and with as little compunction. Tits evidently regard maggots as a young lady does a vanilla ice, cold, but very sweet.

A Feminine Terror.

One day, to my astonishment, I got the offer of another Siberian Tit. I wired off for him, so terrified was I of losing him. He was a fine robust bird, and I thought he looked like a good liver, but, alas, the hen took a deadly dislike to him—she would not give him a moment's peace. Wherever he alighted she went for him like a veritable little fury, until at last, what with constant chasing and loss of food, she fairly wore him out, and he sought peace in a better world. I suppose it is not an easy matter for one who has lived alone to put up with company; or perhaps she felt as Jane Welsh Carlyle said of Carlyle, he was "gey hard to live with."

These Siberian Tits are naturally birds that cannot stand heat, but they do not mind any amount of cold. The present pleasant weather would suit them admirably.

My hen always enjoyed "brute health," which is all the more annoying, as according to all the rules of the game, she ought to have been the weaker vessel. I am sure she would have gone to nest, if I could have found her a mate to her taste; I never did, as a matter of fact. There are three things, so the Arabs say, which never return, the sped arrow, the spoken word, the lost opportunity. For one brief moment I had my opportunity—and now, I fear, it is gone for ever.

I think I had better now draw this paper to a close, or some of you will be saying to me what a member of his flock said to a certain Scottish minister. Asked how he liked the sermon, the old shepherd replied diplomatically, that it was "a verra satisfying sermon." Asked what he meant, he rather spoilt himself by further definition—"Because nobody wants to hear ye again." And if I don't pull up you will be saying to me what a father once said to his little girl, that her tongue was like a dock root, so long that there was no end of it.

A Huge Flock of Chaffinches.

Mr. H. Franklin tells me that on Sunday, Dec. 31, his attention was attracted by a great flock of small birds which were flitting about in the fields and hedgerows on his farm near Shrewsbury, writes Mr. H. E. Forrest in the "Shrewsbury Chronicle." On closer examination they proved to be Chaffinches, or Piefinches, as they are always styled hereabouts. He estimated their number as at least five hundred. They seemed to be very restless, but did not appear to be travelling in any definite direction, as if on migration. Unfortunately he did not notice the sex of the birds, or whether males or females preponderated. This point is of considerable importance, as it has long been understood that in winter many of the hen Chaffinches leave the country, whilst the cocks flock together. It was for this reason that the scientific name "Fringilla Cælebs" (Bachelor Finch) was bestowed on the Chaffinch by Linnæus. I have often seen flocks of twenty or thirty male Chaffinches going about together in winter, but I never saw or heard of such a huge flock as that described by Mr. Franklin.

THE CAMERA AND WILD BIRD LIFE.

An Interesting Outdoor Pastime for Bird Lovers.

By A. L. BONAS.

Now that the nesting season is within measurable distance, these hints upon the apparatus useful to the would-be photographer of bird-life and the manner of using it, will doubtless be acceptable to many of our readers.

THE Camera has done a lot in preserving wild bird life, and numbers of once egg-collectors or rather egg-destroyers have given up egg-collecting and taken to bird photography, which is more interesting.

Anyone with just the ordinary amount of knowledge of photography may start, and with patience and perseverance will succeed in obtaining a number of good photographs. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," should always be in the bird photographer's mind. When I first started I exposed a number of plates (I am very pleased to think I have forgotten the exact number) before I got a good picture. A ¼ plate stand camera will do to start with, with a shutter of various speeds and a strong tripod. Always use the fastest plates obtainable, because a slow plate will give the bird a chance to move and so spoil the picture.

When you go out with your camera, go alone and move about quietly, taking care not to wave the hands about more than necessary, as this will frighten the bird. Don't hurry over one nest to get on to the other, but take time with every nest as one good photograph is worth twenty medium ones.

The Best Way to Begin.

The best nests to start with are some of the open ones, such as the Lapwing's and Waterhen's. Arrange the camera about a foot or eighteen inches from the ground, and focus the eggs with the largest stop you have; then (if it is a still day) use the smallest stop, and give a longer exposure; by using a small stop more of the picture will be in focus and it will be of sharper detail.

You may sometimes find a nest situated in a most difficult position to photograph; in that case you must wait until the young are old enough to be moved on to a suitable branch for you to snap them. Don't try and photograph some of our shyest birds when they are sitting as they are very apt to forsake the eggs altogether; wait until she has some young ones, as it's not often she will forsake a nest full of youngsters. Young birds are very interesting and extremely easy subjects to photograph. When "taking" a bird always try and show the eye and the beak, especially the eye, as you will find that if you have these features in the print it is greatly improved.

A HIDING TENT IN POSITION.

A canvas erection on poles disguised with natural branches and leaves for use when photographing birds on their nests, etc.

The Question of Exposure.

To photograph a bird, an exposure of less than one-fifteenth of a second is rarely of any use, except in the case of one sitting on the nest. A bird flapping its wings, etc., will require one seventieth to one hundredth part of a second, and a good picture is only possible on the brightest of days.

A hiding tent is very handy, but the beginner should be satisfied with a few good open nests, and then go in for a tent which can be easily made as he gains experience.

Some Birds which make good Sitters.

Mallard or Wild Duck can generally be photographed on the nest, as they are very close sitters. Some birds are less timid than others; and often after I had placed the young birds on a bough the old ones came and fed them within a few feet of my camera. Always remember that a photograph of a bird's nest must show its surroundings and should never be removed, but photographed in situ. Sometimes it will be found necessary to cut away some of the foliage in order to obtain a good, clear view. Take care that the stubs of the twigs removed do not show as it will spoil the picture. When a nest is built high up in a bush so that it is impossible to reach it by aid of the ordinary tripod, the legs may be lengthened by some splints of wood or sticks, bound to them; then you can focus with a pair of steps.

After a hard day's tramp on a common, by the river, or in the woods in search of nests you may, on your way home, at dusk, hear the call of the Pheasant and the hoot of the Owl, and the bird photographer has another opportunity.

It is a very anxious time he has when in the dark room waiting for the picture to appear on the plate; and after he has seen the result of his day's sport he is further satisfied and happy to think that although he has a record of the bird's lives, nevertheless they are still left in happy possession of their homes.

A FRIENDLY NUISANCE!

AN APPRECIATION OF THE STARLING.

By D. MacARTHUR (Edinburgh).

A ready talker and mimic, hard to equal as a pet, and so friendly-disposed towards its owner as to be almost a "nuisance," is Mr. MacArthur's alluring summing-up of the qualities of the Starling.

THE Starling is one of our handsomest and most intelligent native birds; he is also one of the easiest to obtain, and is soon quite at home in captivity. Its song, even if mostly an acquired one, is full, varied and cheerful, and his ability to learn to speak, his confiding ways and interesting mannerisms endear him to all bird lovers. I make no apology, therefore, in selecting him for the subject of my paper, and trust my remarks will prove both useful and interesting to your readers.

A Love for the Old Home.

The bird is always plentiful in this country, and is found practically everywhere. He moves about a good deal, certainly, but does not leave us altogether for warmer climes during our winter. They very often return year after year to the same nest, and quite frequently do not leave their quarters at all during the autumn or winter. For four springs now I have seen the same pair in our back garden, and it was a sort of "Red-Letter Day" in our bird calendar when for the last two years, the old birds brought their four little ones down to the window, where a few crumbs never fail to lie. One felt more than rewarded for any trouble taken in aiding our little feathered friends. But that is straying from my subject, I fear.

Opinion differs as to whether the bird is a friend or foe to the farmer and gardener. Of late years many have asserted that from being a grub and worm eater he has deteriorated into a grain and fruit pest. Much can be said, no doubt, on either side; but personally I think he fully earns all he takes by good work in other ways, and my one regret is that he is caught and sold for mere shooting purposes in such large numbers.

Almost Too Friendly in His Ways.

As a pet the Starling is hard to equal among the larger Softbills. He is very easy to keep in health, is most affectionate to his owner, has many little quaint habits that charm one, and can be made to obey and do a few "tricks" if patience and kindness are used. His friendly manner becomes almost a nuisance, in fact, if he gets out of his cage, he won't leave you alone. That has been my experience at least. As a show bird he is often "in the money" at provincial shows, and if in good condition can always command attention, and compare favourably with his glossier foreign cousins. True, his colour may be sombre, but the rich metallic polish on his feathers, the glorious purple sheen on his neck and shoulders, and the white spangles on his breast make him a thing of beauty to behold. The sharper the spangling and the deeper the sheen the better show specimen he is.

A word as to food. Starlings are most accommodating in this respect, and need cost very little to keep properly. Mine are fed on a stock mixture of equal parts chicken meal and best broken biscuit, crushed very fine, and a quarter part of barley meal. This is about the cheapest diet you could give them. It is made moist enough with a little grated carrot, lettuce, cabbage, or even milk, as comes handiest. In addition, I give a teaspoonful of ants' eggs or dried flies (dry) and half-a-dozen mealworms daily or a dozen maggots.

Appreciated Dainties.

Here I might say say that I have practically given up mealworms for maggots the past six months, with good results. They are so much cheaper to start with (a third cheaper almost) and whether as maggots, cocoons or (if kept long enough) flies are always acceptable to the birds. For taming a Softbill they are wonderfully useful. My own birds would "sell their soul" for a maggot, and steal them wholesale if they got the chance. There is quite "a flutter in the dove-cotes" when the tin is observed in my hands. A little shredded meat or suet are also useful for them and, of course, chickweed and groundsel when in season. Even a "rat's tail" (plantain) is sometimes taken greedily, and a berry—whether fresh or out the jam pot—is also appreciated. A little salt in the drinker now and then is beneficial and prevents worms; likewise a pinch of Glauber salts will do a lot of good.

An Unjust Aspersion.

I have heard fanciers say the Starling was too dirty a bird to keep. But they surely hadn't kept him properly, or the bird couldn't have merited that bad character. Of course, if fed on bread and sop, and pease meal, a sloppy cage would be inevitable, but fed on the right lines he will be found little trouble. And it is in this direction that "Cage Birds League" will do good work in teaching how to treat all sorts of birds properly. Then our foes will be unable to turn round and say: "What a filthy cage"!

A healthy bird demands a bath! Such has been my experience of Starlings. They will eat anything, in fact, if you give them a good bath; and give it as often as you can manage. Mine gets one daily, in a big basin set on the floor. If tame you can teach them to take it in the kitchen sink, and so save "domestic ructions," as the guid wife may object to a miniature deluge on her "clean floor."

Give the bird a big cage, even though it be a packing case with a wire netting front. A box cage is always best, and if enamelled a contrasting colour to the bird will show off his dark gloss all the better. But let him out as often as practicable. It steadies him and "keeps the fat down." For his cage bottom, clean, coarse pine sawdust is best, as it absorbs the wet quickly and is easily procured; but give him sand as well to peck at, and the always useful cuttle-fish bone hung up will keep his beak the right length. I simply pierce a tiny hole through the bone and tie it up with a hairpin. It lasts for months.

A Ready Talker and Mimic.

There is no doubt that many Starlings talk; and that they are easy to teach, I have found from personal experience. They should be taken and hand-reared to give them a chance of being capable linguists. A hen is quite as easy to train, remember, as a cock. To rear young birds I think the simplest food is the best. Barley meal sop made with newly boiled milk will take a lot of beating. Gradually wean them on to the mixture given above for old birds. In teaching them bear this in mind, that they seem to pick up words with an "R" sound in them easier than others. So start with a short phrase like "Pretty bird," and keep at it with the persistency of a suffragette or an insurance canvasser! It means constant repetition remember, and plenty of patience to achieve any result. But one morning you'll waken up to hear him "trying it over" to himself, and probably something else you were not trying to teach him. So be careful!

A whistle (just a bar or two) might be tried at the same time. That comes more natural to them. They will learn well through the moult, too, I have found. Once perfect in one sentence they'll pick up others, but it is advisable to run over the old phrase occasionally, as they sometimes forget. Birds vary in their abilities, like ourselves, and for one brilliant talker you'll get a dozen "thinkers"; but "Nil desperandum" must be your motto. Lastly don't cut the tongue. You might just as well cut their throat; or, preferably, that of any stupid person who advises such treatment.

More Little Auks Meet Their Fate.

Sir,—I have had a Little Auk sent to me to be stuffed. It was caught in some yards of a local farmer in Lincolnshire, no doubt being driven in-land by the sharp weather. It was feeding at some pig troughs and was easily caught. They are very seldom seen South of the Orkney and Shetland Islands.

Prize Money at Crook Show.

Sir,—On Nov. 18, 1911. I showed four birds at Crook Show in the Yorkshire Section, and gained one 1st, two 2nds, and one 4th. Since then I have never had a word from them, in spite of writing three times at long intervals. I may point out that I had to get a friend to wash and stage the birds, take them to the station, also bring them back, as I was in bed at the time. Further, this was my first venture in the open, as I had just been put out of the novice section. I would like to ask readers and the Crook Society if they consider this a fair way to treat an exhibitor who makes an effort to support shows?

A New Cage Bird Society for Ramsgate and District.

Sir,—A meeting of fanciers interested in cage birds was held on Feb. 15, and a society was formed, to be known as the Ramsgate and District Cage Birds Society. Fanciers residing within a radius of twenty-five miles will be eligible for membership. It is proposed to hold a show early in November, but more about that later on. One thing I noticed was that, with but one exception, all were readers of CAGE BIRDS, and some of the new recruits in the Fancy spoke in high terms of praise concerning the very useful information to be gathered from its pages. I distributed some of the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE leaflets, and hope to secure some new members for it. I shall be pleased to hear from anyone willing to join living within the district mentioned.

The Dipper: Our New Addition to the British Bird Classes.

Sir,—In your report of the Crystal Palace show I read with interest your remarks on this most interesting bird which has made its first appearance on the show bench. I may say that about twelve years ago I had a good acquaintance with the Dipper, as I lived beside a river (about six miles from Belfast) which this bird frequented. There is nothing so amusing as to watch two or three of them on a stone in the bed of a river, twisting themselves into all sorts of curious shapes and singing (in their own way) for all they are worth. Their song is not without attractions. It is also interesting to watch them flying over the surface of the water catching the flies whilst on the wing. They are very fast fliers, they have a very sharp shrill cry which they repeat continually when on the wing. I discovered a nest of these birds placed between two stones in the bank of this river. The nest was composed of dried grass, moss and leaves, and contained three newly hatched young ones. I might mention that the nest was placed beside a deep pool in the river. I watched the nest carefully until the young were fully fledged. One day I thought I would like to have a good look at the young ones in the nest. But in this I was disappointed. When I approached they all flew into the water, and I thought I was going to be the cause of getting them drowned. To my surprise they all dived under, and moved along below the surface, using their wings as if they were flying, until they got to a place of safety. After they were hidden, I found them very difficult to locate. I have seen the Dippers often since then. I hope these few remarks may prove interesting to your readers and I should be very pleased if some one with more knowledge of the habits of this bird would give us his or her experience, and also the treatment in confinement. In conclusion I may say that these birds left the district of which I speak for a number of years, but on a visit last Christmas day I noticed a pair again at the same place, so I expect if nothing disturbs them they will breed again this season. If so I will have a look for the nest, and give fuller particulars to CAGE BIRDS, a paper I wish the success it well deserves.

A Prospect of Young Thrushes Being Bred in an Aviary.

Sir,—Some time ago I wrote you that my hand-reared Thrushes were in full song—indeed, they have been for at least two months. I am pleased to be able to tell you that now a pair of them are busy as can be building. I trust the eggs will prove fertile. I have every confidence that I shall have young Thrushes born in my aviary, and I am looking forward to the event with great interest.

The Siskin-Bullfinch Cross Encouraged.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Hybrid," in a recent issue, drew attention to the desirability of Hybrid breeders trying for the Siskin-Bullfinch cross, and I heartily endorse his eulogistic remarks on our little friend the Siskin, as a more desirable little chap I do not know. As far as I am aware, the above-named cross has not appeared on the show bench. By way of encouraging Hybrid breeders to try, Mr. Crabb some twelve months ago, through the N.B.B. and M. Club, offered a silver medal for the first Siskin-Bullfinch or Bullfinch-Siskin Hybrid that obtained a place in the cards at an open show.

A Proposed Roller Canary Club for Birmingham and District.

Sir,—I am continually receiving letters and cards from fanciers of Roller Canaries who wish to know if we cater in the South Birmingham O.S. for the Roller Fancy. In the first place we have only one member so far who breeds and shows Roller Canaries, and I can assure all we will cater and interest 100 if they will only let me know their wants and how they would like to hold their competitions; and I shall be pleased to meet Roller Canary fanciers at our free admittance pair show in the large room adjoining Sydenham Hotel on Feb. 24, at 7.30. In the second place, nothing will be too much trouble for me to do to get all these fanciers in the South Birmingham Society and serve them well with plenty of attractions and good company.

The Peckham Skylark's Choice.

Sir,—Other readers of CAGE BIRDS might like to know of a little experience I had with one of my Larks. On Sunday morning, Feb. 11, at about eight o'clock, I noticed that one of my Larks looked ruffled, and I thought it best to give it its liberty. I did this from my front bedroom window (in Peckham), and, to my great surprise, I saw the same bird in my back garden at four o'clock in the afternoon; so I tried to catch it again, but it flew away, only to return an hour later. I have several other Larks hanging in the garden, and it tried to get into their cages, so I had several empty cages hung up in their places, and this same Lark flew straight into the cage that I had let it out of. I still have it, and intend keeping it. I have several witnesses of this.

C. SANDERS.

The Approach of the Breeding Season.

Some Useful Hints to Beginners in the Hobby.

Sir,—As we are approaching the breeding season, a few hints will doubtless be of use to the many amateurs who will no doubt be thinking of starting in our interesting hobby, especially to those who, like myself, may make their own cages, which, to my mind, is one of the many pleasures connected with bird-keeping. When I first had a room all to myself and my birds four years ago I bought some nice big boxes with which to make breeding cages. These to my inexperienced eye looked fairly comfortable. The apertures I pasted over on the outside with strips of brown paper. I whitewashed the interiors and made the front with ordinary cage wire. The result of my inexperience was the red mite fairly swarmed in the crevices and under the strips of paper. The nest boxes I made myself—wooden ones—and when I lifted up the nest I could hardly see the wood, the pests were so numerous. This happened to nine cages, including two double breeding cages. The very mention of red mite now makes me wonder how my birds survived, although I had good results for the first season. I gained a little knowledge anyway. My advice to the novices who may be thinking of making their own cages is, if making same with boxes or tea cases, to take them carefully to pieces and thoroughly glue up all parts when putting them together again. Glue is most essential in cage making; glue up all parts—front rails and strips on sand trays. Give the inside and outside two coats of paint or one coat of paint and one of enamel. These preparations take a little time and trouble, but will be found most beneficial in the long run. I do not mean that this will stop the red mite altogether, but it will minimise the evil. White or limewash is, of course, cheaper, but when it dries it has a tendency to cause the wood to shrink and crack, which was partly the undoing of my first attempt. Three-ply wood is useful for the backs, but should not be used unless the ¾in. or thicker board is used. I make all my perches removable. The fixed perches are a failure—an abomination. Through the advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS boards are to be obtained, ready planed, at prices equal to buying boxes—ready for cutting to suitable lengths and easy to glue up. The loose fronts are also cheap and easy to fix, and most useful to remove for wiping out (so to speak) the cages. I do not remove any eggs. I give the birds their nests, supply their wants, and leave them to go their own sweet way. The less fuss, the better they like it. I am referring to Canaries. All my Canaries (about thirty) are good parents, and need but little help other than the necessary attentions. Any ill-behaved bird does not find a home in my room. Always bear in mind the necessity of a change of diet. I mix my own seeds. Canary and German rape form their staple diet for one week; the following week to two quarts of Canary and half a pint of German rape I add half a pint each niga, linseed, a quarter-pint white millet, and hemp. Green food in season and a piece of ripe apple are appreciated. I have no trouble with egg-binding. I believe the reason of this is that my birds are all kept in large roomy cages, where they have plenty of wing exercise, and can expand their lungs. This treatment generally tends to success in the breeding season. Always be sure that all their food is of the best possible quality. I use sawdust for the bottoms of the cages; I find it keeps them much cleaner and sweeter than sand. I keep their sand tins well supplied with clean sand and a piece of cuttlefish bone is hung up for them to nibble; this keeps their beaks in good order. Always have handy a supply of paraffin and a brush, and put some on any parts which have a white powdery appearance, also on the ends of the perches next to the backs of cages, and round the doors of the cages and any likely places where red mite are discovered. I hope these few remarks may be of some use to the amateurs. In conclusion, study CAGE BIRDS, and you will soon gain the knowledge which is so necessary to the welfare of keeping birds happy and contented. I wish all fanciers a successful breeding season, and CAGE BIRDS every success which it so well deserves.

Social and Prize Distribution.

Sir,—I have been asked by Mr. Hutchinson to take charge of the musical arrangements for the above-named social. I have already the promise of an accompanist, a comic, a baritone, and a juggler. I shall be pleased to hear from members or friends who will volunteer to give their services and so make the new venture a perfect success. The date is Wednesday, March 27. I hear that tickets are selling well, and as the hall only accommodates 200, it will be well for those who have not secured theirs to do so early. The charges are 1s. 6d. single, 2s. 6d double ticket, including refreshments. Tickets can be obtained from the various secretaries, or from me.

Bradford National Show.

An Appeal to Local Secretaries.

Sir,—Will the secretary of each cage bird society in Bradford and dist. who wishes to be represented on the committee of the above show, to be held on Friday, Saturday, and Monday, Dec. 6, 7, and 9, 1912, kindly see to representatives being elected immediately, in order that the committee may get to work in connection with this show? It is preferable that two representatives be elected from each society, and as it is intended to make an increased classification, which will include, in addition to last year's show, Cinnamons, Crests, and Belgians, it is hoped that each society will send its quota of representatives to assist in the hundred and one things to get through in a show of this description. Secretaries would greatly oblige by dropping me a postcard with the names of the two representatives on it as soon as elected, and also instruct them that all meetings in connection with the show will be announced through the Fancy Press. The Central Baths have again been engaged, and it will be quite possible to stage 2,500 exhibits in this great hall comfortably, with the adoption of the three-tier staging down each side of the hall. We are one and all looking for a magnificent entry.

H. HILL, Secretary.

The Size of the Wryneck.

Sir,—I should like to ask the opinion of readers as to whether the first prize Wryneck at the Palace Show was in its proper class, which read (Class 135): "A.O.S. Insectivorous or Seed-eating migratory bird not larger than and including the Wheatear." But in 1909 (note the catalogue and reports) two Wrynecks were shown in the class headed "larger than a Grey Wagtail or Wheatear," and Mr. Maxwell's bird took 3rd prize. According to this, a Wryneck could win a prize in each class! Surely there must be something wrong! The Crossbill, too, in 1909 was shown in the class for birds larger than the Wheatear, and in 1912 it appears in the class for birds not larger than the Wheatear!

C. LEAN.

[The point raised by Mr. Lean has always been recognised as a very ticklish one. Is "size" to be gauged by the length, the weight, or the appearance of the birds? If by the former, then (to give an instance) the Hawfinch becomes the same size as the Grey Wagtail! On mere length, too, the Wryneck, according to leading ornithological works, is larger than the Wheatear. But if the average person were asked to decide the "larger" bird as it appeared in the show cage, then we think he would unhesitatingly select the thick-set, heavily-built Wheatear. The latter species, too, differs remarkably in size, the birds coming from the far North (Greenland, etc.), being much larger than those generally found in England. Until what one might term a more definite method of deciding the eligibility of certain birds for certain classes is adopted, different judges will be likely to have different ideas—as, for instance, on the relative size of the Wheatear and the Wryneck.—Editor.]

Sir,—I see by your most valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that a gentleman has caught a Bullfinch with a ring. I was out catching birds about Jan. 24 when we had a heavy snowfall, and I caught a Chaffinch with a brass ring on. It had no sign of any mark on it; the ring was very worn down.

Who Won Special No. 4 at Launceston Show?

Sir,—Being one of the successful exhibitors at Launceston Show, held on Nov. 27, 1911, I thought I had a perfect right to ask who won special No. 4, which was 10s. cash for the best bird entered on or before Nov. 21. I asked the secretary on three different occasions on day of show, but each time did not get the desired information. After I got home I sent to him twice to know the exhibitor's name who had won the above special. He then told me that Messrs. Rosser and Son did so with their Wryneck. I wrote a few lines to them, and their answer is as follows:—"Our Wryneck won special for best in show." Now, sir, where is special No. 4? By what I can gather, this special was withheld and not awarded. I think if secretaries advertise specials in their schedules, they should let the judges award them; if not, the Fancy will soon die. I wish CAGE BIRDS all the prosperity it so well deserves.

Does the London & Provincial O.S. Need Waking Up?

Sir,—When "Candid Friend," being a member, and therefore sharing in the profit and honours of the National Show, saw so many other members absent, why did he not do his duty and set to work and help with the packing? Instead of the above reproach, a word of grateful thanks ought to be tendered for their kind and indefatigable efforts for the comfort of all, to the show manager, Mr. Ramsden, his wife, and son; also to the members of the committee, who made themselves conspicuous by their presence and help, several of whom, like our little feathered pets, were suffering from the effects of the bitter cold.

ANOTHER CANDID FRIEND.

Sir,—In answer to "Candid Friend's" remarks re Palace Show, I emphatically deny his charge. I, for one, could not get there on Tuesday evening; but I was there Friday and Saturday. All committee men cannot get away from business every night early; but all who could did so on the Tuesday to help pack the birds. If "Candid Friend" has such thoughts, why does he not join the L. and P.O.S. and attend meetings? Then he could get on the committee, and help at the next Palace Show, which will be greatly appreciated by the society. I take it "Candid Friend" gets away from business early every evening, whereas I for one do not get done till ten o'clock. I am only a working man, but do all I can for the society for the love of my fancy. "Candid Friend" ought to have been at our Pair Show last Thursday; then he would have seen if we want waking up or not.

Bird Shows in the Potteries.

The Suggested Novice Competitions.

Sir,—In answer to your correspondent, re a suggestion for a novice Norwich competition in the Potteries, we, the Burslem and district fanciers, were somewhat undecided whether to call ourselves the Burslem and District Norwich and British Bird Club, seeing that the majority by far are Norwich and British fanciers. But, then, it does not do to jump too soon. We are out to build a club, and if your correspondent wants some competition, I would advise him to join us, seeing that our subscription is so moderate. We Burslem fanciers are entertaining a somewhat similar scheme to Mr. Dunn's. Our invitation holds to all the Norwich fanciers in the Burslem district where the member can regularly attend the meetings. There is only one thing I do not like about Mr. Dunn's letter, and that is where he states: "Let the pro.'s look after themselves." In my opinion I cannot for the life of me see where we are going to improve our hobby if we are going to ignore the men who taught us, and perhaps the men who gave us a start. I look at it like this: suppose a fancier who is not in a club pays his 1s. to this cup fund, as per Mr. Dunn's suggestion, is that 1s. going to put that fancier on a par, as regards reduced entrance fees, with members who are paying perhaps 5s. or 6s. per annum into a society, besides escaping all financial responsibility for these shows? I myself think that in such an area as Stoke-on-Trent we ought to have one specialist club for Norwich and one for Yorkshires. Then, if all fanciers would join their favourite club, it would be an easy matter to carry out Mr. Dunn's suggestion. One passage somewhat amuses me, and that is where your correspondent says "and show their birds at each show, as if they were members, in members' classes." I would not like the job of prophesying when some of our novices would become pro.'s! I think there were about four in arrear at Stoke-on-Trent that showed at the four local shows in the open Norwich classes. I do hope myself that something originates out of Mr. Dunn's suggestions for the benefit of all.

L. JAMES.

How the Scotch Fancy Canary Cages Are Dealt With.

Sir,—The Edinburgh breeders are busy getting their rooms done up and the cages washed and painted. Some have as many as thirty cages to tidy up, which means considerable work. To begin with spick and span cages means a good start. Each cage should be washed with Jeyes' Disinfectant Fluid, and plenty of soap and tepid water. The corners, etc., should be thoroughly scraped and all dirt removed, and thereafter a coating of spirit varnish should be applied to every cage. The nest boards should get the same treatment. An excellent preventative against red mites is to paint the rim of the nests with full strength of Jeyes' Disinfectant Fluid. Nothing is so pleasant as to go into a bird room where everything is sweet and clean, the cages shining, and the inmates full of vigour. I do not care to mention names, but Edinburgh and the East can boast of model bird rooms.

NOTE TAKER.

Roller Canaries at the Palace Show.

Sir,—Mr. Lester is unable to reply to Mr. Oldroyd's letter re Rollers at the Palace, owing to a slight attack of influenza; but would like the privilege of doing so in your issue of next week.

E. J. LESTER.

Sir,—Arising out of my showing birds at the L. and P.O. Society's show at the Crystal Palace on the 15th of this month, I was requested by the B.R.C.C. to resign my membership of that club, on the ground, I believe, that my conduct in going against the wish of the committee of the B.R.C.C. was "ungentlemanly." Well, one cannot always be genile, but as to the manliness of my action in resisting pressure, as regarded a matter over which the B.R.C.C. committee had no control, I will leave your readers to judge. I flatly refused to resign. Mr. F. Oldroyd, of Wakefield, the well-known judge, resigned his membership of the B.R.C.C. before he judged the Rollers at the Crystal Palace as a protest against Mr. J. W. Norris' allusion to Rule 13 in his famous "open letter" of January, 1912. Having seen Mr. J. W. Norris' apology in your issue of Feb. 16, I, on the 17th inst., sent him a letter, a copy of which I send you for publication (as Mr. J. W. Norris declines to enter into correspondence with me on any matter concerning Mr. F. Oldroyd) in the hope Mr. Norris may see his way to reply publicly, if he will not do so privately.

ARNOLD W. READ.

(Copy of Dr. Read's letter to Mr. Norris.)

My dear Mr. Norris,—I was pleased to see your letter in yesterday's CAGE BIRDS, and am now quite willing that the hatchet raised over the Palace Show be buried between us. Mr. F. Oldroyd, perhaps wrongly reading your allusion to rule 13 in your "open letter," and considering it an attempt to "boycott" him from showing birds, or undertaking office at the L. and P.O. Societies' Show at the Crystal Palace, having resigned his membership of the B.R.C.C. as a protest, and you, at the last annual meeting of the B.R.C.C., having moved that his resignation be accepted, I should like to suggest, in a friendly spirit, that this misunderstanding between Mr. Oldroyd and yourself be at an end, especially as Mr. Oldroyd and yourself were members of the B.R.C.C. at its first formation, when Mr. Smith was secretary. Can you not, now, having reconsidered your position with regard to objections against the Palace Show, move in committee that under the present circumstances Mr. F. Oldroyd be asked to reconsider his resignation; or if that procedure be out of order, move that he be specially asked to rejoin the B.R.C.C. as a member? I am keeping a copy of this letter, and sending a copy to Mr. F. Oldroyd, and would like an answer from you, to be received by me on the morning of Tuesday, the 20th next, as failing your agreement in my suggestion re Mr. F. Oldroyd, I should like to publish this letter in CAGE BIRDS. As a member of all the Roller Clubs, I do now hope everyone will work in harmony for the good and fellowship of all the Rolier fraternity.

Egg-Flake and the Rearing of Young Canaries.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Folkard, I might say that last season was my first for breeding, and I reared two nests of Siskin Mules from the shell on Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food. I find it much better for the man who has little time to spare, as he can mix plenty to serve all day, and it does not turn sour. My birds get it all the year round and enjoy it. Mr. Folkard will find it, too, a very cheap food. During the moult my birds get very little seed.

Amongst the Linnets in the Fen District.

Sir,—From news brought to me since the harvest was over, there are this season more Linnets seen in the Fen districts than have been seen before on most of the farms. There are large flocks feeding in the fields, and also the stack yards. Some of the birds are in grand colour, which suggests that they have had a good moult. What they were feeding on, my informant, not being a naturalist, was unable to say; but it was not on either mustard or cole seed, as none had been grown on the farm in question. During the nesting season very few Linnets' nests were found in the hedgerows. What nests have been found in this district would not account for such large flocks that have been seen. There were also seen with them a few Greenfinches and Yellowhammers, and anyone with a pair of clap nets might have had a good haul. They must come from some other parts of the Fens at this season of the year for food in the fields, of which there is plenty besides the cole and mustard. Where these two seeds have been grown and threshed there are always plenty of Linnets to be found in the stack yards. Some of the Greenfinches around here are both exceptionally large and bright of colour, and I think the mustard seed has a lot to do with it. Yet if you give the Linnets and Greenfinches mustard seed when in cages they do not care much for it, preferring the other seeds. Such has for many years been my experience with these birds when fresh caught

BE WISE IN TIME.

Advertise your surplus stock AT ONCE and MAKE MONEY.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

HOW AND WHEN TO RING (V. Britton).—The reply in last issue to "G.M.O." gives all particulars you want. Part VIII. of "Our Canaries" also fully describes and illustrates how this is done.

MARKING RINGS (G.R.H.).—Am making some enquiries and will reply more definitely next week. For a permanent identification mark and index to pedigree record the closed ring is without a rival, and will doubtless be much more freely used in the future.

OUT OF SONG (In Doubt).—Feed and treat the bird generally the same as advised to "K.A.I." in last issue under heading "Song Too Low." Provided you keep the bird quite free from draughts, and where the temperature is fairly equable, and the air pure, the kitchen would not necessarily account for the bird going off song.

BREEDING ROOM (J. B.).—Certainly, if you have sufficient space, and the room is sufficiently ventilated, free from draughts, and extreme fluctuations as to be generally healthful for yourself, there is no reason why you should not breed Canaries quite successfully in such a room as you describe. Lots of birds are kept and bred in similar rooms. Given the above requirements, it is all a question of one's own convenience. You would, of course, need to give the cages good attention in order to keep them scrupulously clean, and prevent mites getting a footing in them.

EXTERMINATING RED MITES (Kintore Foxe).—Your faith in the fluid named is well placed. You may use it quite freely, and of great strength without the least fear of harming the birds. You may even moisten the ends of perches, joints of door, etc., with the pure fluid (undiluted), wiping away all surplus that runs or spreads about, whilst the birds are in the cages, without any fear of harm. But in dealing with infested cages, after removing birds, do not wash them out before using fluid. Simply clean out all debris, kill all mites that are seen about, and then go over the cage with the pure fluid, running drops into every crack, joint, etc., likely to harbour mites, let it stand for an hour or so, then wash out well with a strong solution of the fluid.

MOULTING (J.E.M.).—Had you purchased the current issue of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, you would have seen that you made a big mistake in moving the bird to a cold room, where it started to moult. Your object should be to get the moult over as speedily as possible, and nothing would have aided this better than warmth. Remove it back to warm room; see that the heat is equable; that no draught exists, and in addition to the seed diet, give half-a-tea-poonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day. On the alternate days, give a similar quantity of equal parts hemp and millet, and a morsel of banana or dandelion. Allow bird to bathe when it desires. Dissolve a dram of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of honey, and give 15 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three until moult ceases. Bird will not resume singing until moulting is stopped.

WASTING SEED (Nelson).—It is due to derangement of the digestive organs, and is in no degree contagious. The following treatment for a fortnight or so will cure. See that surroundings are generally healthful and free from draught. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar, and half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape separately. On the alternating days give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and either a morsel of banana, or a fresh young leaf of dandelion. Stick a cube of hard common salt in the wire for a few days for bird to peck at if it desires. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

DOUBTFUL SEX (L.W.E.).—It is quite possible for a bird answering your description to be a hen, and also for the most experienced to make a mistake in the sex of a given bird occasionally. If there is considerable swelling and pulsation of the throat when the bird is singing, and the vent on examination appears somewhat pointed in shape and protuberant, instead of flat and on level with abdomen, you may safely conclude the bird is a cock.

MAKES THROATY NOISE (H. J. J.).—It entirely depends upon the cause of the noise. As the bird appears quite well, see that it is quite free from cold draughts or great fluctuations of heat and cold. Give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecac, wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together every second day for a week. If the noise quite ceases after this I see no reason why you should not mate the bird when ready.

HOW TO MATE (Inquirer).—As you cannot be sure whether two of the birds are related, I take it you did not breed them, in which case, not knowing the parentage, you can only mate them up according to their face value of points so to speak. If you cannot add another cock to your stock, nor replace any, mate the old yellow self-green cock with the clear buff hen; and the clear buff cock with the clear yellow hen, and you may also if you wish mate him with the other hen running him with each alternately. By the way, is the brown mark on head of one hen cinnamon colour? If so, bird will be pink-eyed, and if there is no cinnamon blood in the cocks, you will get a very large proportion of green and heavily variegated from your stock. As regards feeding, see several of these replies the last few weeks, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

OUTDOOR CAGES (Ironmonger).—Yes, 16 ins. will be quite deep enough to make the cage. Much greater depth than this would tend to make the birds very unsteady. I note you have the eaves of the roof, or cover of cages well overhanging, but the front does not seem to have any projecting cover allowed. This should be provided for. Anything from one to two feet of roof jutting out over front of cages will be very useful as a protection from winds, driving rain and drippings. It would have been much better to have them in a south-east or even north-east aspect, but I suppose no other aspect is available.

PLUCKING FEATHERS (A.B.C.).—Give a diet of plain Canary seed only as staple. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape. On the alternate days for a fortnight give a piece of bread soaked in milk, drained, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw.

CANARY QUERISTS.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, millet, black rape, and linseed. Give a spray of watercress or leaf of dandelion three or four times a week. Allow bird to bathe freely in mild weather. In the water add 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day for a week.

A SUITABLE MATE (J.A.C.).—I'm afraid you are somewhat mistaken in describing the No. 2 cock as a green-marked and cinnamon-ticked. Better write again and enclose a few small feathers of what you term green and cinnamon colour on this bird, each colour wrapped separately, and also describe the position and size of the marks and ticks, and say what breed the birds are. For the No. 1 yellow pink-eyed hen you should get a cinnamon-marked or a cinnamon-ticked cock, bred from a marked strain, seeing, of course, that it is suitable in all other respects, such as size, type, and quality of feather. I do not think the No. 2 cock is likely to be a suitable mate, but cannot tell without the information asked for above. Are any of the parents of Nos. 3 and 4 cinnamon-marked or pink-eyed?

RETURN OF RED MITES (Puzzled).—You might have seen full details of dealing with this pest about a fortnight ago. Your operations seem to have been very thorough, and from the fact that the mites have again appeared I can only imagine that you got through the job too quickly, or some of the harbouring places were overlooked. In a thorough overhauling of this kind it is best to extend the initial dressings with insecticides over three or four days in order to repeat the dressings two or three times at intervals of a day, before the final stages of re-enamelling, etc., are begun. This gives hidden mites time to come out of the deepest haunts and be dispatched. Then perhaps the paper on walls is in bad condition, so that the mites harbour underneath. In this case the only serviceable remedy is to remove paper and cover walls with sanitary distemper. Continue using quassia in baths regularly, remove the perches every week, and after destroying any mites about them dip the ends in some insecticide. Also touch the joints of doors and every likely harbour with a camel-hair pencil dipped in the fluid. Perseverance in this method will keep the pest within bounds, and ultimately eradicate it as far as is possible. For the next few months use only the spirit and camphor solution named in Part II. of "Our Canaries."

BREEDING DIFFICULTIES (Rufus).—Where you went wrong in dealing with the second brood last season was in leaving the cock with the hen until the eggs were nearly due to hatch and then removing him. You should have removed him when you put the hen to sit, and kept him well away from her, not hung near by. If he could be taken out of sight and hearing, so much the better. Occasionally a hen will not sit when the cock is removed; in that case there is nothing to be done but leave him alone. To be provided for such a contingency this season, make up a pair of common birds at same time of a known good feeding strain and transfer the Yorkshire's eggs to this pair and vice versa. In this way you may save the Yorkshire's eggs and rear the broods, though the common eggs may be sacrificed.

INDOOR AVIARY (G.E.D.).—(1) One cock and three hens is the limit I should advise in aviary 6½ ft. by 4 ft. by 3½ ft. Put in five or six resting places, and do not place one considerably higher than the others. Use a strong, lusty cock between a year and eighteen months old. (2) Place the hens in aviary at once, but keep cock caged separately until all are in good forward breeding condition—probably in a month hence. (3) The object of No. 2 is to get all hens to start near together, but if they do not there is nothing for it but to supply the usual egg-food as soon as the first brood is hatched.

CANARIES WITH DIARRHŒA (F. Wells).—See all food supplied is perfectly sound and sweet. Keep all vessels, cage floor, and perches as clean as possible. In addition to diet of plain canary, give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape separately each day; also every second day a similar quantity of equal parts good sound hemp and crushed dry plain biscuit, and on the alternate days a morsel of banana and a pinch of maw. Add 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for one day only, and after this 6 drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of opium for a few days as may be necessary. Stop it as soon as the droppings are normal. Give no green food until trouble is quite cured.

LOUD SINGING ROLLERS (Old Reader No. 2).—I presume you saw reply to "an old reader" on Feb. 10th. If not, turn up that reply. In your case I should certainly advise you to use the Yorkshire hen. In mere loudness the Yorkshire is, say, perhaps a twentieth part of one brake-horse power less than the Norwich, so that there is really little to choose in this respect, and the Yorkshire is quite loud enough to suit any taste, and it will give you a nicer-looking and more elegant type of bird.

LISTLESS NORWICH (R.P.C.).—Keep hen in a comfortable temperature, not overheated, nor yet very cold, but quite free from draughts. In addition to staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of equal parts hemp, millet, inga, and teazle. If obtainable in good condition, give a leaf of dandelion every second day; otherwise, give instead a morsel of banana. Add 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn to water for two days, and afterwards 4 drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

NO RESULTS WANTED (Puzzled).—As you do not want to hatch out any young birds, your best plan is to leave the hens flying loose as you did once before, and cage cocks up separately, keeping them for singing, preferably out of hearing of the hen. Feed hens on a strictly plain diet through the spring and summer, limiting them mostly to plain canary seed and green food. The latter may be varied according to season, but avoid dandelion altogether. Egg food also should be avoided, except as a rare treat and a small quantity of rape or mixed seeds once a week will suffice. It is quite possible you may get a few stray eggs from the more prolific hens, but the danger of egg-binding will not be the least bit greater—but rather appreciably less—than when the hens are mated. I cannot tell whether you would be able to sell the eggs if you mated the birds as usual. Possibly you might if you advertised them in our columns, but only the actual experiment could verify this point.

THREE IN ONE (H. B. H.).—(1) You do not say whether any of your birds are green or cinnamon-bred, nor how any are marked. It is therefore impossible to predict results of any matings with any degree of certainty. If the buff cock is well up to average in size, and is sound and healthy, and has not previously been inbred, you will not necessarily lose size by mating him with his daughter. This mating will fix to a great extent any peculiarities of the cock in shape, type, and markings, bad ones as well as good ones, in the young, so you need to be a bit careful. (2) Again I cannot say what the result from buff hen will be without knowing much more of their parentage. You may get some very nice quality feathered stock birds, which should be mated back to birds bred from yellow and buff—not double-yellows. (3) No, mate back as advised in No. 2.

CONSTIPATION (T. W. B., Bow).—Probably your diet is at fault. Give a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day for a week give a piece of stale bread the size of a hazel nut sopped in cold milk and sprinkled with maw. On the alternate days give a spray of watercress, if obtainable in good condition, and three times during the week half-a-teaspoonful of equal parts summer rape, black rape, and inga. Also break open a grape and stick on the end of a perch for them to peck at when they like. If they ignore it at first, drop a pinch of maw on the broken surface. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece to the drinking water daily until the droppings are again normal.

HEN SITTING CLOSELY (Wertyinop).—What is your object in wishing to remove eggs after the hen has commenced to sit? Such a course is quite unnecessary. The first three eggs laid in each clutch are generally removed each morning, and a dummy substituted for the first. The eggs are returned on the evening of the third day, the dummy taken away again, and no further interference is necessary, save in very exceptional cases. The object is to get the young hatched very nearly at same time to give all an equal start in life. Some hens sit very closely from the first egg. If this is what you mean, there will be no harm in putting your finger to the side of nest and gently sending her off whilst you remove the egg. After the third day, when the eggs have been replaced in nest, leave her alone. Close sitting can only prove beneficial in the early part of season, and I doubt if it would hardly ever be responsible for eggs not hatching. Probably the eggs last season were infertile.

ROLLER AND YORKSHIRE (F. W. C.).—(1) Probably the Yorkshire is exposed to draughts from door. Keep it in a box cage in an equable temperature and free from draughts. In addition to staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of equal parts hemp, millet, and teazle, and a morsel of banana. Stop all other foods. In the water add 20 drops of a mixture composed of a dram of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine dissolved in a fluid ounce of sherry, with a teaspoonful of honey added to it. Give this two days in every three for a fortnight if necessary. (2) If the Roller is a trained singer there will be a risk of its developing bad notes, or becoming "choppy" if kept in same room as the Yorkshire after the latter comes on song. If only an ordinary singing Roller, probably no harm would result. There is no harm in keeping Roller in living room, provided it is in a fairly equable place, not overheated, and free from cold draughts.

A PAIR OF NORWICH (Printerdom, Walworth, S.E.).—A healthy young cock certainly ought to be in stout song now. Are you keeping the pair together in same cage? If so, this may account for his temporary silence. Separate them, and if he does not at once resume singing treat him as advised to "K.A.I." in last issue for a week or so. If the birds are quite well and active as you say, there is no reason why they should not breed successfully. It is, however, rather early to think of beginning just yet—have patience.

MATING TO COLOUR (Amateur Fancier).—Your stock is not altogether a very suitable one for matching up without any addition or substitution. Where you simply say buff or yellow I am assuming they are clear birds. If they possess any markings at all you ought to have described them. Another thing, you do not say whether the Cinnamons are yellows or buffs. Pair the largest Cinnamon cock, 6 or 7, with the Cinnamon hen, 4, if it is of the opposite colour, otherwise pair the one, if either, that is of the opposite colour with 4. The yellow cock, 5, mate with the largest and chubbiest hen, 1, 2, or 3, and the buff cock, 8, with the smallest, slimmest and leggiest one of 1, 2, or 3. The remaining one of these three hens mate with the spare Cinnamon cock. Then mate yellow Crestbred, 18, to green var. dark Crest 11, and lastly the clear dark Crest cock, 12, and green Crest hen, 9. The latter pair should only be mated if the Crests are of fairly faultless shape. A clear Crestbred hen would be much more suitable.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

WORK FOR THE ROLLERS (R. D. B.).—It is most decidedly possible for hen Roller Canaries to hatch out the eggs of a Bullfinch and successfully rear the young. Why not, indeed? Roller hens may be "wee mites," but they're "bonny mithers," as a rule.

HOW SOON? (L. A. D.).—It depends somewhat upon the part of the United Kingdom in which you live. British birds could safely be put into an outdoor aviary at once in the South of England, especially in South Devon and Cornwall and thereabouts. But if in the North it would be advisable to wait until towards the end of March. A deal, however, depends also upon how the aviary is sheltered, and what kind of erection it is.

FEEDING SKYLARK AND WHEATEAR (Interested).—Very full details of all the best foods, methods of preparation, etc., will be found in "Nutshell" booklets, Nos. 25 and 26 (price 2½d. each, post free). The insectile food you are now giving the Wheatear is a very excellent one indeed. Why not let the Skylark have some of it, too? I give it to my own Larks. There is also a special "Nutshell" booklet (No. 3) dealing solely with the Skylark.

ANOTHER SINNER (J. D. L.).—Note the opening remarks in the answer given "Softy" this week. Get half-an-ounce of crystals of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist. Dissolve fresh daily in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much as will just lie on a threepennybit. Continue for one week; then give on alternate days (plain water in between) for another week or ten days. This should give your Linnet an appetite and "buck him up." Treat the Siberian Goldie as you would a Britisher, but be sparing of the hemp, substituting white (or grey) sunflower seed, lightly cracking it at first to get him used to it.

SEED MIXTURES ETC. (Esperance).—All the seed mixtures sent seem excellent in quality. The "stock mixture" contains a larger proportion of rape (both summer and English, especially the latter) than I care to use myself. Add more teazle and a little Canary. Give a little hemp seed now and again. You could give a feed of the packet mixture once a week, if you choose. If the cage stands two days after being enamelled, no harm will come to the bird; the brand you name is very good and dries quickly, also stands washing well.

A QUARTETTE (Indoor Aviary).—(1) The birds enumerated are almost more than enough for an aviary of this size. (2) They are very unlikely to breed. I am afraid you may find the Chaffinches quarrel later on. Remove the odd hen, anyway, and substitute a hen Greenfinch. Take out the odd hen Redpoll as well, and add a hen Goldfinch. (3) No. But if you have to remove one pair of the Chaffinches you could substitute a pair of Siskins. (4) You could do this if you think well. Pardon me being blunt, however, when I say that it is absurd to think seven pairs of British birds, kept in a cage four feet long and 30 inches wide, will "mate and breed naturally as they would in the open." One pair might nest in such a cage, or two if it were divided into two compartments by a central division.

A QUESTION OF VALUE (Puzzled).—I am sorry, but it is quite impossible to put a value upon birds which one has had no opportunity of seeing. If your Linnet Mules are of just average size and colour, then they will be worth 6s. to 7s. 6d. each (the cocks) as songsters. The jonques (the bright-coloured ones) are worth a little more than the buffs. Unless the muling Linnet is an extra big bird, he is hardly likely to fetch more than 7s. 6d.; probably less. I can't say anything about the hen; you do not state whether she is a yellow or a buff, what is her type, or whether she is large or small. The fact that she has bred Mules is not by itself any very great recommendation.

A. GREENFINCH (J. H. J.).—Try a course of the medicine advised "Softy" in this issue (the glycerine, etc., mixture).

IDENTITY OF BIRD (Fancier).—The bird you have caught is a cock Bramblefinch; it is a common species, visiting us in large numbers every winter.

BIRDS WITH "COLDS" (W. O. C. and Simplexo).—Try the medicine advised "Softy" this week, at the close of his answer.

IS IT THE WEATHER? (C. Sanders).—Yes; it would undoubtedly be the effect of the last spell of severe weather. Now that we seem in for a period of bright springlike days, your Thrushes will come strongly into song again, I feel sure. Give them five or six fat mealworms each every day for a week or so.

ANOTHER SNOW BUNTING (Northumbrian).—This species seems very popular just now. Your question is answered in another reply given by me this week.

WILL A GOLDIE MULE BREED? (Forge).—It is safe to say that as a general rule a cock Goldfinch Mule will not breed (i.e., fertilise eggs) when paired to a hen Canary. But I should hesitate to say it is impossible for there to be fertile eggs from such a mating. I think, in fact it has been clearly established, that in certain instances Mules have been successfully bred with.

FOOD OF KESTREL HAWK (S. Lingmann).—Only flesh food is of any use—mice, rats, small birds (for instance, Sparrows), black-beetles, pieces of rabbit flesh with the fur on, the "innards" of fowls, lights, cooked or raw beef, mutton, liver, etc., etc.

SEED SAMPLE (H. R.).—I have seen better hemp-seed, but I most certainly have seen much that has been decidedly worse. It is a very fair sample, with just a bad grain or two here and there amongst it. The manner of your Linnet's death was very singular; fancy him swallowing a flight feather and being choked! Better luck with the newcomer.

A GOLDFINCH MATTER (W. H.).—The term "white-legged" is applied to a bird which has been house-moulted, and gone light in leg colour by reason of this. It has nothing whatever to do with "breeding condition." Judging from the description you give, the prospects of the field-moulted Goldie you have breeding Mules are very bright indeed. Try him about the middle to the end of April.

A GOLDFINCH MATTER (Constant Reader).—I do not advise anything beyond two mild doses of sulphate of soda, given on different days (plain water in between). Let the bird have a change of diet. Give teazle freely, and some crushed sunflower seed. Get the following mixed: One ounce each of thistle (the best English), dandelion, sesame, cornflower, and maw seeds.

SEXING SNOW BUNTING (Bunting).—The hen is a smaller bird, generally speaking, than the cock, and is much dingier in colour. A good cock bird is a mixture of snow-white, black (on tail and wings and mottled on back), and light brown (on head, chiefly, and neck), the white predominating. The hen is a darkish warm brown, practically all over, with very little white (pure white) about her—it is a dull, ashen white, and the black a brownish-black.

A TRIO (British).—(1) It is no doubt useful, but I have seen wild seed mixtures that I think are very much to be preferred. It is a rough, crude sort of mixture. (2) I dealt with this point (the sexing of Hedge Accentors) last week or the week before. (3) If the small aviary is in an exposed position and can be "raked fore and aft" by every cold wind that blows, then I have no doubt the cause of the deaths can be put down to this. I advise you to have a post mortem examination made.

IN A GARDEN (E. Pascall).—(1) Try this as a stock mixture: canary and teazle three pints each, hemp two pints, summer rape, linseed and sunflower one pint each. Give the other seeds generally used (niger, maw, etc.) occasionally, as a treat, likewise wild seed mixture. (2) I take it you mean the place measures 8ft. each way, that is, length, width, and height. (3) Add another Canary and Greenfinch, two Bullfinches, one Siskin, and one Bramblefinch, all hens, with the following cocks: Mealy Redpoll, Lesser Redpoll, Siberian Goldfinch and Twite. (4) See reply given "L. A. D." this week.

IDENTITY OF BIRD, ETC. (Hybrid).—(1) The body sent is that of a Reed Bunting, a cock. It is quite a common bird, and of little value from the monetary point of view (note our advertisement columns). A first-class specimen, when steadied and moulted, is a desirable bird for exhibition; of practically no account as a songster though. Eat little except canary seed; like mealworm or two now and again, and an occasional feed of prepared insectile food, also live ants' eggs in season. (2) A house-moulted proved muling Goldfinch of fair quality might be bought at from 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. (3) A hen Linnet captured in January last might breed this coming season. One can never tell. A deal depends upon whether she gets reasonably steady, i.e., takes readily to caged life.

IN A CONSERVATORY (G. T. H.).—(1) It would hold twenty to twenty-four birds comfortably. They would enjoy the flight in the conservatory, I am sure, but you may have some difficulty in getting them back into their own particular portion. (2) Keep one pair of each species; failing this, keep cocks only. It is difficult to say how any birds are likely to behave. As in the case of the proverbial pudding, "the proof is in the eating." I have had Goldfinches which it was quite impossible to keep with others of their own species; also Bullfinches and Greenfinches. One cock Bullie (by name and by nature), belonging to a friend of mine, stripped three other cock Bullfinches which he had practically bare, and quickly, too—while he was wondering what on earth the trouble could be. Yet these birds agreed quite well all through the winter, the disrobing scene taking place early in April.

A PUZZLE: and one other (Prudence).—You could put the birds out of doors right away in a place such as you mention. If you wish to live up to your nom-de-plume, however, leave it until the middle of March, and be on the safe side. They should winter very comfortably, with glass panels protecting the front, providing the place is erected in a well sheltered spot. How to obtain good specimens for exhibition? That's a bit of a puzzle. The only cheap way is to visit the dealers' shops frequently and endeavour to locate a few "rough diamonds." You want plenty of patience, too—for they are few and far between—to say nothing of expert knowledge. Good birds, too, are no doubt to be found amongst the selected specimens offered by large dealers and catchers. And some winners are occasionally to be picked up cheaply at the shows. Weight of money, of course, can always command them.

THE SNOW BUNTING (W. Conolly).—A week or so ago I dealt at length with the feeding of this bird. The soft food is all right; but of the seeds, only canary is eaten in any quantity—sometimes a little groats or coarse oatmeal. Articles have appeared dealing with the Snow Bunting, but unfortunately I cannot tell you from memory exactly when or in what numbers. One by Mr. Lowne appeared in Nos. 346 and 348, and this covered the Bunting family; but possibly these issues are by now "out of print." Glad to hear you think the 1912 Annual such splendid value, and so interesting.

THRUSH IN POOR CONDITION (Softy).—You ought to have thought about remedial measures long ago. Why so many bird keepers leave cases until they become chronic or incurable before seeking advice, I can't for the life of me imagine. Get a bottle of combined cod-liver oil and hypophosphites emulsion from a first-class chemist, and stir a small teaspoonful into the bird's daily allowance of soft food. Its diet could be improved, judging by your letter. Consult "Nutshell" booklet No. 4 (post free 2½d.). Give the wheezing Canary a small teaspoonful of the following mixture in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily: glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, one ounce of each. Give every day for a week, then on alternate days (plain water in between) for a time, if needed. Don't keep birds in draughts; prevention is a great deal easier than cure.

NOT THRIVING (T. Brown).—It is curious that birds should fail to thrive, as both Blackbirds and Thrushes are very hardy, given proper treatment. I certainly advise you to try a change of food. You say that you have the "Nutshell" booklet; why not feed on the lines laid down therein? You should provide a few mealworms, blackbeetles, gentles (maggots), snails, small garden worms, etc., for newly-caught birds; one or other of these things is always obtainable. It seems to me that the birds get "indigestion" (through unsuitable food), go thin, and die. You could give a little finely-scraped raw lean beef or mutton amongst the stock food every other day for a time. Give the bird that is now beginning to look queer a small teaspoonful of malt extract amongst its soft food every day; not too much, but enough to just properly moisten the food. Your Lark would thrive on the same stock food; give a little canary seed and groats in a separate dish.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

TURNING BIRDS OUT-OF-DOORS (Nemo).—Mannikins, Weavers, and Ribbon Finches from a heated room, should not be put out till first week in May, and it will be best to prepare them for the change by putting them into an unheated room during a mild spell, and leaving them there for a month before turning them out, much as you would harden off plants before bedding out. If the season is fairly forward, after, say, three weeks, in unheated room, they might go out first week in April, otherwise not till May.

RED CARDINAL (B. W.).—Presumably a Virginian. Your diet is not varied enough. This bird should have ripe fruit, two or three live insects daily, and a seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet seed, and half a pint each of oats, hemp and sunflower seed. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. I should catch the bird and give three drops of tasteless, castor oil direct to the beak from a quill, and if it is the sole occupant of the aviary cage, once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water, and on other days the same quantity of byno-phosphates. At this season give it a couple of mealworms each morning and afternoon, and later offer spiders, beetles, smooth caterpillars, etc. Give a little fresh lettuce or green-food, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the aviary.

FOOD FOR HANGNEST (H. B. T.).—Some good softfood mixture, ripe fruit, as much as it will eat, and live insects (say 6 mealworms per diem), and when obtainable such spiders, beetles, earwigs, live ants' cocoons, smooth caterpillars, etc., as you can obtain. Some individuals are fond of milksop, and in my opinion they are the better for a little. They can also be offered a young mouse or fledgling Sparrow when such are obtainable, and scraps of cooked meat from the table (finely minced) will not come amiss occasionally. They are active birds. A roomy cage and a fly round the room occasionally will add to their well-being. A mealworm will always secure its return to its cage.

ACCLIMATISING A SHAMA (Shammos).—In our last issue we gave you the items of diet. On receipt of the bird, give it a roomy cage and a shallow saucer of water, but watch it, for the Shama loves its bath, and after being deprived of water for a day or so will so drench itself that it can hardly move, and in cool weather is liable to take a chill. After you have removed the water, and supplied it with food, leave it to itself for a time that it can rest and recover. At this period six to twelve mealworms will be none too many, and also a spider, beetle, or other insects if you are able to procure them. If you feed as advised in our last issue, unless the bird has contracted contagion en route, it should soon settle down and do well.

A PEKIN NIGHTINGALE (Beginner in Doubt).—I cannot give you a definite reply. From your statements you appear to have a young male, and its song should be at its best during the spring and early summer. Individuals vary, however, considerably as to their song capacity, some being quite equal to, if not excelling, the Blackcap, and others not going much further than your bird is at present; but I should say yours would certainly improve very shortly. They come on into song much as our Thrushes do in the spring—a sort of tuning up, and then the gladsome nuptial melody. You had better repeat this query in April, with full details again if there has been little or no progress. Add ripe fruit to its daily menu.

BITING ITS FEATHERS (C. R. Burton).—You must give me a little more of the history of this bird before I can help you materially. Tell me how long you've had it, how you feed and treat it generally, and then I hope to be in a position to assist you. In the meantime get a "mist" sprayer and spray the bird with quassia solution, occasionally using a weak solution of fir-tree oil in lieu of the quassia. You must carefully protect the bird from draught while its plumage is moist. Give it some pieces of stick with bark on to cut up and empty cotton reels to play with.

PECKING ITSELF (Derby).—It can have biscuit ad. lib., but I should only give chocolate as an occasional tit-bit. The supply of ripe fruit should be liberal. Give the following in lieu of your present mixture: One quart each of canary and white oats, one pint each white millet and hemp, and half a pint each of grit (not sand), paddy rice, wheat and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in the cage; also keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Give every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinnford's magnesia in its drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls). Spray it every other day with quassia solution, carefully guarding against draught while its plumage is moist. When the plumage is dry rub in Keating's insect powder to be on the safe side. The cage should also be well examined for parasites, and if these exist, utensils, perches, and every crevice of cage must be well swilled with boiling water to get rid of the pests.

BREEDING GOULDIANS (Gould).—So far these have proved very shy breeders in a cage, but they breed readily enough in a garden aviary with natural surroundings. An aviary for Gouldian Finches should consist of a shed, covered and open flights. There would be a good probability of their breeding if left flying loose in a room the walls of which were hung with twiggy branches with nesting receptacles behind them. This is all you can do to encourage them. If young are hatched keep a little soft food in the aviary, they will take very little, and supply green food ad. lib.; also keep millet sprays in the aviary, and paddy rice and crushed oats in addition to their usual seed menu. They usually breed from July to October over here, and if you could give up your unheated room to them they would probably breed for you this coming season. If you care to send me a rough plan of the room, showing position of window, door and fireplace, I will send you a rough plan indicating how best to accommodate them. Cocoanut husks, Hartz travelling cages and small boxes are all favoured as nesting sites.

PUTTING FOREIGNERS OUT OF DOORS (L. A. D.).—Newly imported birds cannot go out of doors till May; birds which have been kept in a cold (unheated) room indoors for a time, could go out in April. Of course if you know any aviarist, who keeps his birds outdoors, in your locality, who has any spares, these could be transferred from one aviary to the other at the present time; but you must know for yourself that the birds you buy are straight from an outdoor aviary to make it safe to put them out now.

PLANTS FOR AVIARY ("One who wants to Know").—Put in good sized plants of berberis, aucuba, Douglas, and common firs, elder, privet, and as regards creepers, wild clematis (Traveller's Joy), hops, virginian creeper, rambler roses, honeysuckle, etc., but you must protect the bases of the creepers at any rate till well established. It would be a good plan to dig out a hole about 3 feet square and deep, fill in with good loam, and plant in that. With the pheasants you could keep some of the foreign Thrushes, pigeons, and doves, and Cardinals (arboreal species). As regards the Budgerigar aviary, you can only have a grass base. I know of no plant they will not destroy, and you will have to renew this annually, but you can have patches of wheat, oats, canary seed and other cereals, which look well growing, as well as providing provender for the birds when seeding.

BUDGERIGARS ETC. (H. J. Jones).—(1) Budgerigars are not malicious, but a playful nip from their beaks means a broken leg, or wing to any finch-like bird. They should be safe in roomy quarters. (2) In the past, when I kept a British species, I bred them freely. When feeding young they require branches with buds and other green food fresh three times daily. Certainly they should breed. (3) With Budgies could be kept Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds, also Cockateels, and all would thrive on the same treatment. (4) I bred the Bullfinch freely in an outdoor cage (span roof), with a floor 18in. square and 2ft. high. The nest was built in the most sheltered part of the roof (see reply 3). (5) If your shelter ("barn") is roomy, it will not be necessary to board in any portion of the flight. Say you send me a rough plan of the aviary, showing respective measurements of shelter ("barn") and flights, and I will reply next week definitely on the point.

BREEDING ZEBRA FINCHES IN CAGE (H. H.).—It is full early yet for birds to commence nesting; it will be better every way if they do not do so before April at the earliest. As a rule, for a cage a husk is too bulky. Get one of the chip cages in which the Hartz Canaries are imported—almost any dealer will let you have one for about 2d.—take out perches and fittings, and cut away a couple of the bars to give the birds admittance; place a little hay over the bottom, and hang it up in one corner of the cage near the top; supply nesting material, and leave the birds to themselves. Do not treat these birds as Canaries; there is no need to examine nest, etc., or remove eggs; leave the birds to take their own course, and in due time you'll have some young Zebra Finches—once they start, they breed right up to the autumn moult, sometimes even the moult does not check them.

DOVES, COWBIRD, ETC. (Turtle Dove).—(1) The Half-masked or Cape Dove is rather a handsome, strikingly plumaged bird. Alive, it is olivaceous-brown, half face, chin, throat and centre of breast black, the underparts are mostly white, beak crimson, feet ruddy flesh colour. The female has no black mask on the face. The Turtle (chequered) Dove has the head, nape, wing coverts, and flanks bluish-ash; a patch of black feathers with white tips on each side the neck; mantle cinnamon-brown, variegated with darker; tips of tail feathers, abdomen and under tail-coverts white; throat and breast pale vinaceous. (2) The Chingolo Song Sparrow is really a Bunting, and is a pretty arrangement of brown, warm brown and ashy grey, with whitish underparts. The black stripes of the top of head and face are very striking on their ashy grey ground, and give the bird a handsome appearance. It has a fair song, and has been bred in this country. (3) The Bay Cowbird is, with some bay-coloured areas on wings, etc., size, form and treatment similar to the silky. (4) Keep warm, cage each pair singly; supply canary, white and French millet, also millet spray, green food, and if they'll take it, a little milk sop. The main thing at first is warmth (not stuffy warmth) and rest, with good food and clean water. A few ants' eggs are appreciated by some pairs, especially live ones. (5) This matter lies with the Editor.

Ailing Grey Parrot.

Golden.—Its diet has not been varied enough. Supply ripe fruit daily, as much as it cares to take—ripe banana, apple, orange, etc.; also biscuit and nut. Supply the following seed mixture: One quart each canary seed and oats, one pint each white millet, paddy rice and hemp; and half a pint each of wheat, sunflower seeds and grit (not sand)—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also keep clean cuttlebone in the cage. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls), and on other days the same quantity of Byno phosphates. Remove voiding promptly. Your letter rather points to its having taken something unwholesome with its food, and this must be got rid of. Unless there is something wrong which your letter does not reveal it should gradually recover tone. Report progress in a fortnight, earlier if necessary, that is, if unfavourable symptoms develop, and then give full particulars. Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager should prove useful.

Blue Fronted Amazon, etc.

Kintore Foxe.—(1) It is a young bird, and the first moult in this country is always a protracted process. Give the following seed mixture: One quart each canary seed and oats, one pint each hemp and white millet, half a pint each wheat, sunflower; grit (not sand), shelled nuts, and maize—well mix, and keep a supply in the cage. For a couple of months put a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. Keep its bowels moving freely by giving as required one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the water in lieu of the phosphates. The other items of your dietary are almost right: the supply of fruit should be liberal, and do not give any table slops or messes. Spray it once a week with a weak quassia solution. (2) Spray or bathe its nostrils with dilute glyco-thymoline daily while the trouble lasts. (3) I do not think you need trouble about this much, but if it continues to any extent anoint the vent with a little sweet oil and give three drops of the same direct to the beak, so as to clear out the bowels. Carry out the above diet and treatment and report progress a month hence.

Budgerigars Egg-bound.

H. W.—It is the changeable weather [illegible] responsible for most of your trouble. There [illegible] a risk when birds lay at this time of the year. Strange to say, it very rarely occurs when they are in an outdoor aviary. I am inclined to think your birds are overfed. Only give the oats while they have young to feed, and supply them with a millet spray or two weekly. Also every other day give them Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, but do not scour them—they are small drinkers, so only use a small vessel and give two parts water to one of magnesia. Get some old mortar rubbish, smash it, and mix it with sand (gritty), an equal bulk of each, and use this for cage bottom. If you notice the bird's condition before death takes place, you can usually give relief by anointing the passage (vent) with a drop of sweet oil, and giving two drops of same direct to the beak, and if the egg is not got rid of in, say, 15 to 20 minutes, then take the bird in the hand and steam the vent over a jug of hot water. Place it in a small cage in a warm place for a short time, and the egg will soon be passed; and as soon as the bird has picked up a little, return it to its cage, which is a good one, and the birds should do well in it.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. B.—Pulmonary apoplexy, or rupture of a blood vessel on the lungs, was the actual cause of death. The lungs were congested and filled with blood owing to enfeebled heart action arising from fatty deposit around this organ. This bird would have thrived better in the outdoor aviary; its confinement, together with too liberal or indiscreet dieting, have been instrumental in producing this fatty deposit, and consequently impeding the heart's action.

W. WHITELEY.—Cordon Bleu.—The liver and intestines were undergoing decomposition, and impossible of examination. The only lesions discernible were in connection with the lungs, which were acutely inflamed at their borders. Death arose from pneumonia, but whether of sporadic or contagious origin cannot be fully determined, due, as I have stated, to the putrefactive changes that had occurred.

K. M. W.—Yours is not an unusual experience, particularly if the birds were not acclimatised, and is very commonly a cause of disappointment and loss. Fright during transit, exposure, etc., produce circulatory disturbance, and the respiratory apparatus, which is of delicate structure, is readily influenced by circulatory depression, and the birds fall an easy prey to pneumonia, which rapidly ends fatally. There was no suspicion of contagion, and in any case they should have been kept apart from others. It is always wise to allow a period of quarantine when introducing fresh birds. If this were adhered to, infectious disease would not become so rampant.

SILK.—Death occurred from the absorption into the system of poisonous products produced within the intestines, resulting from imperfect digestion, following on disease of the liver. This latter organ plays an important part in digestion, and when deranged its secretions become minimised as the result. The liver was fatty and altered in structure, and had been in this state some time. Many birds suffer from liver disease without showing signs of illness; again, others give evidence in their droppings, which are altered in consistence and colour. Where discernible, this is one of the earliest symptoms of liver disease.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A PHOTOGRAPH (R. T. Campbell).—Thanks very much; we shall be pleased to reproduce the photograph in a future issue.

AN ADDRESS (A. W. Farmer).—The address you want is Mr. T. Yates, 5, Albany-road, Reading.

TO COMBAT MICE (G. A. Whittaker).—We can well believe that the method mentioned is thoroughly effective, but we should be inclined to vote the remedy almost as bad a nuisance as the mice themselves.

THE ESSAY COMPETITION (G. Grant).—Evidently you overlooked the notice at foot of column 2 on page 168 of last week's CAGE BIRDS.

OUR JUMBLED CANARY PUZZLE (A. G. Hudson).—We are sorry to say that we cannot give you the information on the point you raise, as after the competition was decided all the attempts were destroyed, otherwise we should have been happy to have gone into the matter.

LANCASTER AND DIS. C.B.S. (Nemo).—We must ask you to please excuse us from publishing your letter. Much of it is personal, and calculated only to result in an acrimonious correspondence, while the whole matter is of purely local interest, more suited to be discussed in the Society's club-room than in our columns.

THE CATCHING SEASON (M.C.).—According to Trower's "Bird Dealers' and Catchers' Guide" (price 7d., from Messrs. Trower, 442, Caledonian Road, London, N.), the catching season in Northumberland opens on August 12th and closes on March 1st. But certain birds may be protected all the year round, as local authorities have the power to extend the protection at their discretion. Particulars of local bye-laws can be obtained from the Town Clerk, or Chief of Police, of the County Town, or principal towns; or from Messrs. Wyman, Ltd., printers and publishers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C. (price 2d., post free).

THE MEMBERS' MULE CUP AT PLYMOUTH SHOW (R. H. Rowe).—We have carefully perused your letter, but do not see that any good purpose could be served by its publication. It may well have been a surprise to you that the cup was awarded to a bird other than your own. But the judge's decision is final as regards the merit of birds. In this case you had officiating the best-known judge of the day, the genuineness of whose award you apparently do not call into question—you distinctly say that "as a sportsman I submit to his ruling." This being so, we do not see that any good can come of discussing the matter; and especially so seeing that the decision arrived at is in any case final. Better fortune may attend your efforts at the next show. As regards which bird was placed "reserve," an enquiry made of the secretary would settle the point.

Wild-Bird Life.

Victims of the Frost.

Fortunately, the severe frost did not last many days, but during that period wild birds had a rough time of it, and many succumbed to cold and want of food. In the writer's garden they did fairly well, as food was always put out for them; but we have since heard of many being caught by hand (in other enclosures) too weak to scramble over the boundary fences.

A walk over the fields and downs revealed to the searcher many evidences of loss. In some places were found the whole carcases of victims; in others only the wings and legs, the remainder devoured by the vermin of the fields. No doubt thousands of birds perished, for few of the number would be found, as it is the usual method of all wild creatures to crawl into some quiet nook when they feel death approaching.

Among the victims found, the Thrush family were the most numerous, and among them were Redwings and Fieldfares, birds from the far North, which we should naturally expect would be able to withstand any weather we are likely to get in England. But the frost was somewhat peculiar, inasmuch as it was most severe just before it broke, and when birds have existed for some days on a short supply they are not then in a state to withstand such a grip as we had on the fourth of the month. The natural shyness of the Redwings and Fieldfares is greatly against them during such times. They do not, as a rule, seek the neighbourhood of buildings; gardens are to them forbidden ground, and even small meadows near farm buildings are seldom invaded. Upon a continuance of frost they will loaf along the hedgerows or around the hillocks in the fields where the root crops are sometimes stored. At such times they will eat almost anything; small or partly diseased potatoes are greedily devoured, and the marks of their beaks may plainly be seen in turnips and other roots still left in the ground. Skylarks are birds that somehow manage to pull through a severe time fairly well. Being ground birds they creep under the large leaves of the turnips and vegetables in the open fields while the bad weather lasts, and feed during that time almost exclusively upon green food.

In the Courts.

THE NEW ACT PUT INTO FORCE.

A £25 Penalty for Each Bird.

A case under the new Protection of Animals Act was heard at Weston-super-Mare Sessions on Feb. 16, when George Davis, Alfred Street, was summoned by Inspector Walding, R.S.P.C.A., for cruelly ill-treating certain birds on Jan. 31 by neglecting to give them proper care and attention.—Prisoner pleaded not guilty.
